PREFACE.

THE second and final volume of Dr Cameron's Reliquiæ Celticæ appears exactly two years after its predecessor ; and, though the interval is not excessive in view of the character of the work, it has been longer than we expected, mainly because of the extra material which came to the Editors' hands in the Red Book of Clanranald. Dr Cameron had transcribed about the half of the purely Macdonald History in the Black Book of Clanranald, and it was our first intention merely to complete this transcript. The kindness of Admiral Sir Reginald Macdonald of Clanranald in not merely lending the Black Book, but in offering the Red Book as well, changed our plans, with the gratifying result that now the Red Book of Clanranald appears for the first time in print. A dozen pages have thus developed into over one hundred and seventy.

Of the Fernaig MS., which begins our volume, appearing for the first time in print, Dr Cameron had at his death transcribed about two-thirds. Dr Skene, among whose numerous MSS. it once again got lost for a little while, not merely granted the MS. for comparison and complete transcription, but kindly presented it to Mr Kennedy. Next to the Dean of Lismore's Book, it is our most important document for older Gaelic, a good part of its value, as of its weakness, consisting in its phonetic spelling. Its poetry, which is mostly religious and political, is of an unusually high order ; and it is hoped that a modernised and transliterated version of it, wholly or in part, will be undertaken by some patriotic Gael. The Book of Clanranald, from the two MSS. the Black and the Red Books, appears next. Its importance as a history of the Macdonalds, and more especially as a Highland account of the Montrose wars, has long been recognised : a MS.

translation of it by the Rev. D. Mackintosh was accessible to our historians, and to Sir Walter Scott in particular. The Red Book figures in the "Ossianic" controversy; it was supposed to contain the originals of much of Macpherson's famous work; but, on the book coming into the hands of the enthusiastic Gaels of the closing years of last century, and on its contents being examined and found wanting, the MS. was abused both in a physical and literary manner, and its identity stoutly denied.

The Turner MS. comes as our third hitherto unpublished work. By a natural oversight it is stated at page 310 that it does not appear in Dr Skene's catalogue of the Gaelic MSS. in the Edinburgh Advocates' Library; it does appear as No. XIV. of his supplementary catalogue. It is a valuable collection of last century, made evidently in Kintyre; it contains poetry of all kinds, mostly ballad poetry, some of it belonging to the Cuchulim and Ossianic heroic cycles. The tragic tale of Deirdre comes fourth; there are two texts of it, one from the Glenmasain MS. of the 15th century, the other from a last century Irish MS. (Edinburgh MS. No. 56), which the indefatigable Patrick Turner had somewhere lighted upon. Dr Stokes has already printed a complete text from these two MSS.; it is, however, published in Windisch's Irische Texte, and not easily accessible to Gaelic students, to whom Dr Cameron's carefully executed edition ought to be welcome.

There follows, at page 475, a collection of Proverbs, supplementary to those in the late Sheriff Nicolson's work on Gaelic Proverbs and Familiar Phrases. Then come translations of hymns and poems into Gaelic, all too few considering how felicitous and scholarly the renderings are. Six lectures, bearing mostly on philology, follow these poems. One of them in racy Gaelic traces the history and the literature of the language; two deal with topography—the place-names of Dumbarton and of Arran—and both are a model of caution. The last two lectures are simply chapters in Gaelic historical grammar—orthography and eclipsis, and they contain some of Dr Cameron's best ideas on the subject. The Legend of Deer, with philological analysis, and an article on the Gaelic Irregular Verbs, revised editorially, are followed by a Glossary of all the unpublished etymologies that Dr Cameron left among his papers. This again is followed by an Index to the etymologies given by Dr Cameron in the Gael (1872-1874) and in his own Scottish Celtic Review. As both these works are either in the possession or within easy reach of Gaelic scholars and students, we thought it best to lighten our volume by not reproducing them; in fact, we were compelled to do so. In any case, all Dr Cameron's work in the way of an etymological dictionary of the Gaelic language is here brought together actually or by reference. Much of the work in the Glossary, like all that of the Gael, is twenty years old, and within these years philology has travelled fast and far. When Dr Cameron commenced his Gael articles, Celtic scholars were still disputing as to the existence of initial or intervocalic p in Celtic, and the revolution of Brugmann and the New School is ten years later. Indeed, Dr Cameron did little philological work during the last three or four years of his life, and he keenly disputed some of the views of the younger men. We have endeavoured to bring the etymologies, where necessary, up to date both in the Glossary and the Index.

It remains for us, at the end of our task, to thank those kind friends who have helped us either by word or deed. To the Press of the country—daily, weekly, and periodical—we owe our best thanks for their unanimous praise of our first volume; and as this is, in our opinion, by far the best volume of the two, especially in the importance of the hitherto unpublished texts it now presents, we venture to hope for it a no less kindly treatment. By the death of Sir William Mackinnon, we have lost the encouragement of the best friend of our undertaking, and the appearance of these volumes at all must be added as another “stone to his cairn.” Mr John Whyte, Edinburgh, and Mr Alexander Macdonald, Railway Audit Office, Inverness, have given valuable assistance in the proof-reading of the Fernaig and Turner MSS.

INVERNESS, 2nd April, 1894.

THE FERNAIG MANUSCRIPT.

DR CAMERON transcribed about two-thirds of the Fernaig Manuscript, and was engaged on this work at the time of his death. This MS., which was written by Duncan Macrae in 1688 and the subsequent five years, consists of two small volumes of paper in a brown pasteboard cover, seven inches long by three broad. The first volume contains 36 leaves, the first two and the last one of which are blank. There are thus 33 leaves written upon, but the side of one leaf is blank, which makes in all 65 pages. The second volume contains 28 leaves, the first three and last five of which are blank. The other 20 are fully written upon save the last, which contains only one verse. One of these leaves is double, and folded in, and there are two loose pieces—half-leaves, written upon. Six leaves were cut out of the second volume, amounting probably to some six hundred lines of poetry. At present the collection contains about 4200 lines of poetry. The handwriting, which is that characteristic of the period for writing English, is neat and clear, though small, obscurities being caused mostly by the fading of the ink or by frayed edges. A facsimile page is given herewith, to show the character of the writing and size of the page.

The history of the Manuscript from the time of its author till the beginning of this century is unknown. In 1807, it was in the possession of Mr Matheson of Fernaig, father of the late Sir Alexander Matheson of Ardross. This we know from the catalogue of Gaelic MSS. made by the Rev. Donald Mackintosh, and included in Vol. III. of the great edition of "Ossian," published in 1807. There our MS. (at p. 572) is described as follows:—"Mr Mathison of Feernaig, Ross-shire, has a paper MS. written in the Roman character. The orthography is very bad, like the Dean of Lismore's poetry; it is dated 1688, and consists of songs and hymns by different persons, some by Bishop Carswell, Bishop of the Isles." We hear no more of the Fernaig MS. till 1862, when Dr Skene, in the introduction to the Dean of Lismore's Book then published, reports it as amissing. As a matter of fact, the MS. was in the possession of Dr Skene's friend and tutor, the celebrated Gaelic scholar, Dr Mackintosh Mackay, who was in Australia when Dr Skene wrote. After his death, in 1873, his trustees handed the Fernaig MS. over to Dr Skene, whose property it then became. In 1885, Professor Mackinnon wrote a full and interesting account of the MS., its vicissitudes, authorship, and contents, for the Gaelic Society of Inverness, in whose Transactions (Vol. XI.) it appears. To this paper we are beholden for information about Duncan Macrae, the compiler, and about his family and friends. Through the kindness of Dr Skene, the MS. now appears for the first time in print.

Professor Mackinnon proves beyond any reasonable doubt that the writer of our MS. was Duncan Macrae of Inverinate, chief of his name. He is remembered in the local tradition of Kintail as Donnachadh nam Pìos, Duncan of the (Silver) Plate, an epithet arising from the magnificence of his table service. He was grandson of the Rev. Farquhar Macrae, minister of Gairloch, and afterwards of Kintail, a man of mark and of means in his day. Duncan Macrae's two brothers, John and Donald, were ministers respectively of Dingwall and Kintail, and Professor Mackinnon thinks that the latter is the author of the poem in the MS. attributed to "Perse Eglis, anno 1692," beginning—

Cill-duich mo thàmh, cha luighe dhomb sèimh, &c.

Duncan Macrae came to a tragic end. In company with an attendant, who is said to have possessed the fatal gift of "or na h Aome"—a power by which he could cause the death of any one seen by him crossing a stream on Friday, Macrae was returning from Strathglass with the title-deeds of the Affarie lands in his possession. In attempting to cross the Conuag River at Dorisduan, which was in high flood, he was carried away and drowned, for his attendant could not help him, nor could he help looking at his master battling with the flood, and, as he possessed the fatal power of drowning people in such circumstances, he caused his master's death.

Tradition attributes the bardic gift to Duncan Macrae, and this MS. proves its truth. Indeed, verses which tradition attributes to him appear in our MS., wherein, however, they are set down as composed by a "certain harper . . . on Gillimichell McDonald, Tinkler;" and Professor Mackinnon thinks that both harper and tinker are but noms de plume of Duncan Macrae, the real author. The Fear na Pairce, mentioned as the author of six poems, was doubtless Macculloch of Park, near Dingwall, Macrae's maternal great-grandfather. The Laird of Raasay, who is the author of some verses, may have been Macrae's father-in-law, for he was married to the heiress of Raasay. Rev. Donald Macrae, his brother, is possibly the Perse Eglisich who is responsible for 120 lines. Ossian "McPhyn" is given as the author of 36 lines, and these may also be found in Leabhar na Feinne, p. 106. Bishop Carswell is credited with two poems, but one of them only properly belongs to him, for the poem on the "Seven Sins" appears in the Dean of Lismore's Book half a century before Carswell's day, and is there attributed to Duncha Ogga (see our Vol. I. p. 104). The "Ten Commandments" in metre is the same piece as appears prefixed to Calvin's Catechism in 1631, and is reprinted, with all the similar Gaelic pieces, in Reid's "Bibliotheca" (p. 177). Sir John Stewart of Appin, who flourished towards the end of the sixteenth century, and whose Gaelic "Confession" is prefixed to Calvin's Catechism in 1631, is accredited in our MS. with 84 lines. Alexander Munro, teacher in Strathnaver, is the author of 108 lines. He died before 22nd December, 1653 (Fasti Eccl. Scot. V., p. 346). Murchig Maighk Vick Curchi is supposed by Professor Mackinnon to have been Murchadh Mor Mac Mhic Mhurchaidh, of Achilty, who was factor for Seaforth in Lewis, and who composed two poems published in Ranald Macdonald's Collection (Ed. 1776, pp. 23, and 185). He is reputed in our MS. as the author of 6 short poems, in all, 184 lines. The authors given for the other poems are unknown, and were mostly local to Kintail, we may be sure.

The orthography is on the whole phonetic, though acquaintance is shown with the orthodox system of Gaelic writing. Macrae's spelling of the same word varies considerably even on the same page, in this inconsistency resembling unfortunately the Dean of Lismore's work. But Macrae's phonetics are much easier to understand than the Dean's, both because he does his work better and because his Gaelic is practically the modern dialect still spoken in Kintail. The contents of the Collection are mainly Political and Religious, with a few poems which Professor Mackinnon calls "Didactic." There is no love song and no drinking song. The religious poetry forms about one-half of the contents, and is on the whole of considerable merit. In State Politics, the authors are Jacobite, and in Church Politics, Episcopalian. Unlike so many Gaelic political poets, the authors show a keen comprehension of the whole situation—Highland, Lowland, and English, and there is a tolerance in their utterances towards opponents which shows how little the Highlands felt the persecution of the Covenanters, and the various revolutions in Church and State that happened in Lowland Scotland.

Dr Cameron transcribed the first volume of the Fernaig MS. completely, and portions of three poems in the second volume, which are indicated in the text. The transcription is here completed on the Editors' responsibility. Dr Cameron also transliterated into modern orthography three or four complete poems [and portions of various others; and all these transliterations are here given as well as some others. With the help of these transliterated specimens, the uninitiated may easily acquire a command over Macrae's characteristics in orthography.

Na Dech Aitheanta.

1. Creid díreach do Dhia n'dúl.
2. Agus cuir ar chúl vmbaladh do dhealbl.
3. Na tabhair ainm Rígh na rioghadh,
 Ma géibhtar dhiot sa ghníomh geall.

Ghuidheadh tu Dia 'n t-Athair
 A leth mhic Iosa,
 E dheonachadh maitheanais
 Ann ad shath is t' uile ghuìomharr'.

Shiubhladh tu gun seacharan,
 Ma sheachnadh e àm dit' ;
 Dh' éisdeachd tuille teagaisg
 Ann an eaglais do chill sgìre.

Auns a' ghabhail rathaid duit
 Na labhair ach an fhìrinn ;

Bi deirph gi feyh ū aind
Di reyhing lough di hoorh

Ach na bisi dichoyrnigh
Ma chitijr leat nj boighktj
Er nhj hovird noosid daij
Mir ghordighe Chrjst is Ostle

Nouire heid ū steagh i neglish
Er feherj heiggisk bj qūijnigh
Na bijg tijntjue merranigh
Hoir * airh er gigh nhj ehlūyn ū.

Darr hig ū maigh dhehj sho
Marr ī reih leat bi toñir
Teihls chommin leihoile
No teihle lūighk nj poijt

Bi furranigh kairdigh
Rish nj brahrj kajrt
Na gaiph fywe no naijr
Gad zain ū kaigh haighnū

Bidh dearbh gu'm faigh thu am
Do rireadh luach do shaoth'r.

Ach na bi-sa di-chuimhneach
Ma chitear leat na bochda,
Air ni thabhairt 'n iasad daibh
Mar dh' orduich Criosd is Abstoil.

'Nuair theid thu steach do 'n eaglais.
Air 'n fhear-theagaisg bi cuimhneach.
Na biodh t' inntinn mearanach,
Thoir aire air gach ni ehluinm thu.

Dar thig thu mach an deighidh so.
Mar a rogha leat bhi t' ònar ;
Tagh-sa 'n comunn laghail,
Na tadhail luchd na pòite.

Bi furanach, cairdeach,
Ris na braithre ceart ;
Na gabh fiamh no náir',
Ged dhean thu cách sheachmadh.

THE BOOK OF CLANRANALD.

THE Book of Clanranald is found in two manuscripts, at present known respectively as the Red and the Black Books. Dr Cameron was engaged in transcribing from the Black Book of Clanranald when his last illness came upon him ; and he had copied out only about a third of what is here extracted from that Book and placed before the public. He had got the MS. from Dr Skene, whose property it then was ; and, on Dr Cameron's death, it was returned to Dr Skene, who, in his turn, restored it to the family of Clanranald.

The Black Book is a thick little paper MS., strongly bound in black leather boards : it could not be better described as to appearance and chief contents than in the words in which Ewan Macpherson, the coadjutor of "Ossian" Macpherson, describes its sister volume, the "Red Book" of Clanranald, viz., "A book of the size of a New Testament and of the nature of a common-place-book, which contained some accounts of the families of the Macdonalds, and the exploits of the great Montrose, together with some of the poems of Ossian." The exact dimensions of the Black Book, a specimen page of which is herewith given in its full size, are as follows:—Length, $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches ; breadth, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches ; and thickness slightly over an inch ; all exclusive of the thick leather boards. It contains 232 leaves, or 464 pages, of which 36 are blank. The rest of its pages are in various hands, Irish and English, of the 17th and 18th century. Indeed, the Book appears to have been made up of some three or more separate MSS., written at different times by different persons, and ultimately bound together in one volume some time last century. The cutting of the edges in the process of binding proves this ; for in the Macdonald History, the first few leaves have letters half and even almost wholly clipped away, but the reading is quite clear, and the letters can be supplied from manifest indications of their former presence. Almost all the last half of the MS. is in English, written last century, and dealing chiefly with the praises and exploits of the Marquis of Antrim, the friend of Charles I. and Montrose. The Macdonald History forms altogether less than one-sixth of the Book (some 72 pages), and the rest of the Gaelic material extends to a like amount (74 pages), made up chiefly of poetry, with 14 pages of Irish kingly genealogies; but many of these Gaelic pages contain only disconnected jottings. A full account of the contents of the Black Book will be given further on.

The history of the Book itself is very obscure. Upwards of thirty years ago, Dr Skene disclosed his discovery of the Black Book to the present Clanranald (Admiral Sir Reginald Macdonald), informing him that he had picked it up among some old Irish MSS. at a book-stall in Dublin, when he at once bought it. Dr Skene, as already said, restored the errant volume to the representative of its ancient possessors after Dr Cameron's death, and the MS. is now safe in Clanranald's possession. By the kindness of Clanranald, who lent both the Red and the Black Book to the Bank of Scotland, Inverness, to be consulted and transcribed by Mr Macbain, we are enabled to complete Dr Cameron's transcription of the Macdonald History, with the addition of one or two heroic poems. The rest of the Gaelic, or rather, Irish material, as will be seen from our detailed account of the contents of the Book, is not of interest to Scotch readers, and abundance of similar poetry and prose exists in manuscript and print on Irish soil already. No portion of the English materials is reproduced here.

The famous Book of Clanranald is, of course, the "Red Book," which figures prominently in the Ossianic controversy. The relationship between the Red Book and the Black Book is exceedingly close; they are both "common-place-books," as Ewan Macpherson said, and the Black Book, as regards the Macdonald and Montrose histories, is but a curtailed form of the similar histories in the Red Book. Indeed, the former omits some of the best episodes recorded in the latter, and wherever a condensation seemed necessary or possible, it takes place in the Black Book narratives.

The writers of these books were the Mac Vurichs, the hereditary bards and historians of the family of Clanranald. They traced their descent to Muireach Albanach, circ. 1200, who was famous as a poet both in Ireland and in Scotland. They had as perquisites of their office till about the middle of last century the farm of Stailgarry, and the "four pennies" of Drimsdale in South Uist, close to one of the seats of their patron, Clanranald. The Mac Vurichs were learned in all the lore of the Gael, and it is even said that they studied in the colleges of Ireland. In any case, even to the last of the direct line, Donald of Stailgarry (floruit 1722), they were scholars of no mean repute, capable in Irish, English, and Latin. The early history of the Macdonalds down to about the year 1600 was probably composed by different and successive members of the family, but the history of the Montrose wars and of the events thereafter is clearly the work of Niall Mac Vurich, who lived till a great age, his youthful recollections being, as he himself says, of the reign of Charles I., while his latest efforts were elegies on the death of the brave Allan of Clanranald, who fell at Sheriffmuir in 1715. The Montrose history seems to have been written before the year 1790, and the avowed object of its author is to vindicate the part which the Gael played in the brilliant escapades of Montrose's campaigns. The hero in Mac Vurich's page is Alaster Macdonald, not Montrose, and, undoubtedly, Alaster did contribute, to an extent much underestimated, to Montrose's success.

The Red Book, as already said, figures largely in the Ossianic controversy. James Macpherson, accompanied by his clansman Ewan Macpherson, visited Clanranald in 1760, and, at Clanranald's direction, received the Red Book from Neil Mac Vurich, nephew of the last great bard, and himself described as not a "man of any note," though capable of reading and writing Gaelic in the Irish character. But here our authorities begin to disagree. Rev. Mr Gallie in 1799 had given a graphic description of Macpherson on his return from the Isles to Badenoch wrestling with the difficult Gaelic of beautifully written and embellished MSS. on vellum, received, as he understood, from Clanranald, and written by Paul Mac Vurich, the 14th century Clanranald bard. Now, Ewan Macpherson said, in a declaration made a year after Mr Gallie's statement, that Macpherson got from Clanranald only the "common-place-book" detailing the history of the Macdonalds and Montrose (which is now extant, and known as the Red Book), but that he did not get the Red Book or Leabhar Dearg from him: Macpherson only got an order for it on a Lieutenant Donald Macdonald at Edinburgh, who then possessed it. This Leabhar Dearg contained, so Clanranald told them, some of the poems of Ossian; but Ewan Macpherson never saw it nor did he know whether James Macpherson ever got it. In the same year (1800) Lachlan Mac Vurich, son of the Neil that gave Macpherson the book, declared that his father "had a book which was called the Red Book, made of paper, which he had from his predecessors, and which, as his father informed him, contained a good deal of the history of the Highland clans, together with part of the works of Ossian. . . . that it was as thick as a Bible, but that it was longer and broader, though not so thick in the cover." His father, he said, gave this Red Book to James Macpherson, and he further denied having an ancestor named Paul. Gallie, Ewan Macpherson, and Mac Vurich are in considerable disagreement, as we see, as to what book or books Macpherson received from Clanranald, and, what is very singular, the only MS. which was recovered after Macpherson's death was the Clanranald MS. got from Neil Mac Vurich, be it the Red Book or not. Malcolm Laing in his famous dissertation on the Ossianic question says (1800):—"It is in vain to deny the identity of the Red Book, when it was restored as such to the Clanranald family by Macpherson himself." The present Clanranald believes that he has the veritable Red Book in his possession, and, considering the amount of "hard swearing" that took place over the Ossianic Reports and Dissertations, and, having regard to the further fact that the Book has been denuded of its covers, whether purposely or not, we think that he is right in so believing. The late Dr Skene, who in 1840, it would appear,¹ was inclined to believe that the Leabhar Dearg was a different MS. from the extant Red Book, calls the latter work, in the last Volume of Celtic Scotland, the Red Book of Clanranald.

The Red Book, as we will call it, after passing from the possession of James Macpherson, was much consulted, not only by the Ossianic disputants, but also by the historians of the country. The Rev. Donald Mackintosh, of Gaelic Proverb fame, made a transcript and translation of, at least, its historical portions; and this was the translation used by the various writers who quoted the book until Dr Skene's latest work on Scotland. Sir Walter Scott quoted largely from the early portion of the history of the Macdonalds in the notes to his "Lord of the Isles," and Mark Napier made use of it in his Montrose to throw light upon the obscurer points of Highland conduct in the Montrose wars. Mackintosh's translation does not appear to have been very accurate, and he certainly misled both Laing and Napier in making it appear that the writer of the MS. (Niall Mac Vurich) was present at the battle of Auldearn. The translation, which with some obvious corrections we here reproduce with the Gaelic text, was made for Dr Skene by an Irish scholar (O'C.) from Mackintosh's transcript of the Red Book, corrected by the light derived from the use of the Black Book. Dr Skene himself publishes several pages of this new translation in his Celtic Scotland (Vol. III., pp. 397-409).

CHARACTER AND CONTENTS OF THE RED BOOK.

The Red Book of Clanranald is, like the Black Book, a paper MS., but slightly longer and broader than the latter; its exact dimensions are $5\frac{7}{8}$ inches long, $3\frac{7}{8}$ broad, and $\frac{5}{8}$ thick, as it stands at present. Its covers have been cut off, and it has lost the first 32 pages. How much it has lost at the end it is now impossible to say. That it once contained Ossianic poetry is certain ; it now contains none. The Rev. Donald Mackintosh, who translated it, speaks of it in the 1807 "Ossian" in connection with the Edinburgh MS. 48, which has been printed in Vol. I. of the Reliquiæ Celticæ. After remarking that the poem "Se la gus an de" appears in MS. 48, Mackintosh says :—"This poem is also in Clanranald's book ; it gives a description of Fingal's palace and heroes. I have compared both this and the other poem ('Cnoc an Air') with those in Clanranald's book ; but the leaves on which they were written were loose and detached, five in number, and given to Dr Donald Smith, when assisting Mr Mackenzie in making out the report on Ossian, and who died before the report was quite finished ; and unless the leaves are found in the possession of Dr John Smith at Campbelltown, the brother of Donald, they must be lost. These leaves contained two other short poems ascribed to Ossian. I have copied these two last some years ago ; the one is a genealogy of Fingal, the other an account of the ages of the Fingalian heroes."

The leaves referred to by Mackintosh are, of course, lost ; but fortunately the interesting poem on the Ages of the Feinne is preserved, along with "Cnoc an Air," in the Black Book, and is printed in our present volume further on. The poem on the genealogy of Fionn is, we fear, lost.

As at present preserved, the Red Book begins at page 33, and ends with page 310. The first 32 pages, containing the history and genealogy of the Macdonalds from Milé (1700 B.C.) of Spain down to the year 1234 A.D., is lost. It is clear that the Edinburgh MS. 50, which is a congeries of several manuscript debris, has incorporated in it 6 of the lost Red Book pages, detailing events from the death of Colla Uas in 335 to the middle of the exploits of Gillebride, father of Somerled, marked as pages 11-16. Fortunately the Black Book furnishes a complete though curtailed version of all the historical portions of the Red Book, and in the earlier part it is practically as full as the latter work. The contents of the Red Book as far as page 274 deal with the history of the Macdonalds, especially of Clanranald, and with the wars of Montrose and Alaster Colkitto, interspersed with elegies of various chiefs, one or two poems of praise, and a prose description of the last Lord of the Isles' array for battle, after the fashion of the older romantic school. Pages 275 and 276 contain a satire in English on Bishop Burnet ; this is the only English in the Red Book. After some blank leaves, on page 282, appears an Irish satirical medley of Rabelaisian tinge by Fergal og Mac an Bard ; it is very indistinct in some parts owing to damage done to several pages of the MS. by the action of water. The piece extends to 11 pages ; we reproduce none of it. There follows on page 293 a song in praise of love, and on page 295 another by Cathal (M'Vurich) in dispraise of the same, followed by a vigorous poem by Niall Mor M'Vurich wishing the prolongment of love's long night :—

Let not in the morn ;
Rise and put out the day !

These poems are printed further on. Then on page 298 there comes the first part of a poem by Diarmad M'Laoisighe M'an Bhaird on the armorial bearing of the Red Hand ; this poem and the reply to it by Eogan O'Donnely are given in full in the Black Book. Here Niall M'Vurich answers both the Irish claims for the Red Hand in two poems of 23 verses each.

There are three handwritings in the Red Book. Up till the beginning of the story of the Montrose wars is in one handwriting, both prose and poetry, possibly written, as the historian Laing said, by Cathal M'Vurich ; while the Montrose wars and the rest of the history is the work, and doubtless the handwriting, of Niall M'Vurich. Cathal's handwriting reappears in the poem of O'Henna and the immediately subsequent description of the arming of the Lord of the Isles. The following poems are written in an ugly coarse hand :—Elegies on Allan of Clanranald (1715), on Norman Macleod (1705), and on Sir James Macdonald, and the poem about the exile of Ranald of Clanranald (1715-1725). The rest of the poetry is in Niall M'Vurich's handwriting. The contractions in the Red Book are comparatively few, in this contrasting strongly with the Black Book ; but, when they exist, they are the same in kind in both MSS.

CONTENTS OF THE BLACK BOOK.

We here give a short account of the varied contents of the Black Book of Clanranald. The first 14 pages contain a mixed gathering of scraps and jottings, English and Gaelic, half of the number of pages, however, being blank. There is little connection or interest in them, and the writing is mostly of the 17th century. The 15th page abruptly begins—the first portion evidently being lost—"circles are two, viz., greater and lesser. The greater are six, &c.," describing the zones of the earth, and proceeding to give a concise account of the globe and its divisions and, with the interruption of a blank page, a concise geography of the world ending on the 42nd page. All this is in English, and in the 17th century script. Then follows a chronology extending to 13 pages ; the Age of the World when Christ was born is given as 5199, which is the same as the date implied in the chronology of the Macdonald History, and also the same as the chronology of the Irish Annals of the Four Masters. The handwriting is like the one on the previous pages, and it is followed by 4 pages of a chronology in an 18th century hand. The chronologies are all in English. On the 69th page begin the Irish genealogies in Irish, which develop the offspring of the mythic Eber, Ir, and Eremon, the sons of Milé, through long lines of kings down to contemporary Irish chiefs like Se'an O' Neill of Tyrone and the Macdonalds of Antrim. There is also given the descent of Milé from Adam downwards. The whole extends to 14 pages. After scraps of chronology and a blank page, we light upon 12 pages of Irish poetry, forming 6 pieces in all. In the first, Diarmad mac Laoisighe mhic an Bhaird proves in 17 verses that the Red Hand belongs to Clann Rugbuidhe, the descendants of Ir, and the Ulster men, citing mostly the exploits of Conall Cernach (circa year 1 of our era), who placed two thousand heads on one withe in revenge for Cuchulain. In the second poem, of equal length, Eogan o' Donnelly denies and ridicules this, claiming the Red Hand for Conn and his descendants, whereof are Clann Colla, whence, as we have it, the Macdonalds are descended. We have already noted that Niall M^c Vurich replies to both poets in the Red Book. The third poem consists of 4 (not 5) verses of advice a la Cormac's Advice to His Son in our ballads. These verses are :—

No 5 raíñ dhuit a Dhoñchaidh deuna mar adera siad diogha raíñ ni bhfuighir uaimsi

No.

The fourth poem is a lament for a young lady's death, in eighteen verses, beginning—

Buan an leunsa air Leith Chuinn.

The fifth poem is ascribed to Deirdre, and we print it further on. Then follows a poem of ten lines, an address to a flagstone, “sinut ar dháoi,” over a bad person, with its underlying contingent of maggots, beetles, and mortal remains.

On the 97th page, and attached to these Irish poems by being on the same sheet, are the three pages of Macdonald History detailing, with genealogies, the Macdonald Chiefs contemporary with the writer's time, written in Allan of Clanranald's chiefship (1686-1715). This will be found printed further on, practically where the Red Book places it. Five blank pages, when we enter on a new sheet of paper, and we have the History of the Macdonalds, as hereafter printed. It extends to 63 consecutive pages. But abruptly, on the 63rd page, and in the same handwriting, there begins, with the last two lines of the page, a treatise on Gaelic grammar and prosody, thus :—

Madh aill fios d'fhaghail cinnus is cóir Gaoidheilg do sgríobhadh 7 do leighedh ní fular dhuit fios na guidhuidhibh 7 na consonuibh do bhí agad.

The latter portion discusses prosody with examples, closing with the two heroic poems of the Ages of the Feinne and Cnoc an Air, which we print. There are only four pages of this grammatical material, exclusive of the poems. Then follows the genealogies of the clans Maclean, Mackenzie, Macbeth, and Campbell, which are, with equal abruptness and in a different hand, followed, on the reverse of the page, by the genealogies of the Antrim Macdonalds, extending to six pages. All these genealogies and histories will be found in our text.

On page 187 begins a poem of forty verses on “Sìol Colla”—the Descendants of Colla, which details their glory and privileges—these same being detailed with more definiteness and less obscurity in an Irish extract in Skene's Celtic Scotland, Vol. III., pp. 462-466. On pages 194 and 195 is a poem of seven verses, condoling with a Bean, or Wife, at a Grave, and conjuring all the Fenian heroic wives to her assistance. After some blank pages come seven pages, in a large coarse hand, of Gaelic proverbial philosophy, founded on Solomon's Proverbs and the Wisdom of Ben Sirach. The following is the first page and a half :—

Ataid se neithe as beág ar dhia, et an seachtmadh ní as ro bheag air é. eadhon suile toileamhla 7 teanga cealgach, et lamha iofalta le fuil, 7 cosa luath chum uile do dheanamh, 7 croidhe smuaineas droch ghníomha no dhroch bhearta, agus fiadhnaisi

A taid trí neithe nach uras eolas dfagail orrtha et an ceathramh ní heidir eolas dfhaghail air .i. lorg iolar isin áer, et lorg aithreach nimhe ar carraig mar ambí na chombnaidhe, 7 casan luinge isin muir et beatha dhuine attuchd oige.

On page 207 begin 31 verses on the sufferings and passions of Christ. After three blank pages there begins a poem on the history and present (17th century) state of Ireland, beginning—

Nuar a smúainm ar saothibh na héirion sgríos na tíortha is díth na cléire díoth na ndúine is luighead agreidhthe bí mo chroidh im ehlidh da ráoba.

There are 73 such verses, 54 of which detail the history from the Flood, and the other 29 the muster roll of Irish chiefs and the unhappy state of the country in the 17th century. Then follow five pages of odds and ends in Irish, mostly verse. From the Proverbial Philo.ophy to page 242 is all in the same large, coarse handwriting, slightly improving as it progresses.

At page 243 we may say that a new book begins. This is the praise of the Marquis of Antrim. The title runs :—

Antrim's Trophee or five panegyrick speeches
 Dedicated to the Marquis of Antrimes
 Excellence. Written att his excellences arriving in Scotland anno 1646.

The first of the justice of his armes,
 the second of the fortitude of his armes,
 the third of his excellence true nobility,
 the forth of religion and superstition,
 the fifth of his lordships constancy and perseverance.

The work is by "his excellences devoted and true servant G. G." After the five Panegyries come accounts of the two escapes of the Marquis from Carrickfergus. The whole, which extends to 153 pages of florid English, is written in an 18th century hand, and doubtless is a copy of the original. In the same handwriting, and in English also, follows a chronology, with geography appended, extending to 33 pages. This is followed by a poem, which is the prototype of the song of the "Vicar of Bray," some 20 quatrains. After eight pages of blank we find the 445th page upside down. The fact is, that from this point to the end the book is written from the last page backwards. There are only five lines of Gaelic, which are rude and shaky. Some astronomical jottings are followed by twelve pages of a letter describing the deathbed of James VII. at St Germain's (year 1701). The Book concludes by a satiric poem of twelve lines, comparing King William's conduct to Satan's rebellion against God, and entitled "The Legacy." Such are the varied contents of the Black Book of Clanranald.

There are four hand-writings presented in the Gaelic portions of the Black Book, none of which can be identified with any of the three scripts in the Red Book, though there is a strong family resemblance between Niall M^c Vurich's writing in the Red Book and the chief scribe's of the Black Book, who wrote the Macdonald and Montrose histories: it is this writer's hand-writing that is reproduced in our facsimile. The genealogies—Irish and Scotch—present a hand-writing of their own; so do the Irish poems, the two sets, that which begins with Diarmad M^c Laoisige and that which begins with Siol Cholla. The fourth script is the coarse, large one already noticed as characterising the Proverbs and subsequent poetry. It may be mentioned that Neil, father of the illiterate testimony-giver of the Ossianic reports, could write the Irish character, while his uncle, Donald, who may be looked on as the last of the M^c Vurich bards, was the son of the Niall M^c Vurich to whom we owe the most of the Red Book. The genealogy runs thus:—Donald (floruit 1722 and later), son of Niall, son of Donald, son of Lachlan, son of Niall Mor M^c Vurich, who sings the praises of the famous Sir Rory Mor Macleod (chief from 1590 to 1626), his contemporary.

THE PRINTED TEXT.

The text of the Macdonald and Montrose histories here printed is primarily that of the Black Book; but the omissions in it, which are numerous in the Montrose portions, are supplied from the Red Book. The text is therefore continuous and full. There is only one historical poem in the Black Book—that of O'Henna. The Red Book text, on the other hand, is interspersed with elegies and eulogies, which have been here reserved to the end of the historical parts of the text.

The contractions are shown by the use of italics, and the character of these contractions may be understood by a reference to the facsimile and the printed page. The Red Book, as already said, has the same class of contractions as the other, but it uses them more sparingly. There is practically no punctuation in the Red Book, but the Black Book is well punctuated. The real difficulty in this matter is with the capital letters; it is almost impossible to say when t, d, e, g, p, b, and l are capital, while the only vowel that presents a capital form is a. Size alone must decide in such cases.

TRANSLATION OF THE BLACK AND RED BOOKS.

The Age of the World at the time the Sons of Milé came into Ireland 3500 [1700 B.C.]

Here are the names of the sons of Milé of Spain, viz., Ir and Eremon and Eber the Fair, Aramnan, Colpan of the Sword, and Emergin White-knee, the poet; he was poet and historian and judge to them, and the first Gaelic author. We do not find descendants but of three of them, viz., Ir and Eremon and Eber the Fair, the fourth race being that of Ith son of Breogan, viz. uncle of the children of Milé. The descendants of these four obtained the sovereignty of Ireland, but only three or four of the race of Lugaid, son of Ith, obtained the sovereignty of Ireland. The race of Ir, son of Milé, are called Ultonians and Clan Rugraid; the race of Eber the Fair are called Momonians (Munster-men) and the men of the south, such as the Clan Carthy and the race of Brian (O'Briens); from the race of Eremon are the Connaught-men, the Lagenians (Leinster-men) and the Scottish kings.

Irial Prophet, son of Eremon, was king: Ethrial, son of Irial, it was through whom the race of Eremon continued one tribe till the time of the reign of Ugainé, the Great, who was son of Eochaid the Victorious, son of Duach Lagrach, son of Fiacha Tolgrach, son of Muredach Bolgrach, son of Simeon the Freckled, son of Aedan the Grey, son of Nuada Fimfáil, son of Giallcad, son of Olill All-fair, son of Sirna Long lived, son of Dian, son of Deman, son of Rothectach, son of Maen, son of Angus Much-swined, son of Fiach Labranne, son of Smirgall, son of Enboth, son of Tigernmas (Death-lord), son of Follach, son of Ethrial, son of Irial Prophet, son of Eremon. And two tribes were made of the tribe of Eremon from the time of Ugainé the Great, that is, the tribe of Cobach Cael m-breg and the tribe of Loegaire Lore. And although Ugainé the Great had 25 sons, none of them had crown or kingdom save the race of two of them; viz., the descendants of Cobach Cael m-breg and the race of Loegaire Lore. Of the race of Loegaire Lore was the first King Fergus that came to Scotland, that is, Fergus, son of Ferchar, son of Feradach, son of Loegaire Lore, son of Ugainé the Great. That was the first king that came over Scotland of the Scots or Gaels. There was but one king over the Gaels until Fergus came to Scotland about 300 years before the Birth of Christ, and others say it was four hundred.

The greater number of the kings of Scotland and Ireland are of the race of Cobach Cael m-breg; two tribes were made of the race of Cobach Cael m-breg in the case of Angus Turmech of Tara, son of Eochaid Broad-joint, son of Olill Bent-teeth, son of Connla Hard-wiled, son of Iron Bright-wise, son of Melge Praise-worthy, son of Cobach Cael m-breg. Angus Turmech had two sons, viz., Enna Aigneach and Fiacha Sea-man. Of the race of Enna Aigneach are the descendants of Conn the Hundred-battled; of the race of Fiacha Sea-man are the kings of Scotland. Conn the Hundred-battled was the son of Felim Law-some, son of Tuathal the Legitimate, son of Fiacha Finnola, son of (Feradach Fionnfeetnaigh or F. Fair-righteous, son of) Crimthan Nianair, son of Lugaid of the Red Stripes, son of the Three Finns (Fair-ones) of Emania, sons of Eochaid Feidlech, son of (Finn, son of Finnlogha, son of) Roignen the Red, son of Esamin of Emania, son of Blathaet, son of Labrad Lore, son of Enna Aigneach.

Conn had a son, to wit, Art; Art had a son Cormac; Cormac had a son Cairbre. The two sons of Cairbre Liffeachuir (of the Liffey) were Fiacha Fire-shower and Eochaid Dublen. The race of Fiacha Fire-shower were Muredach Tirech and Eochaid Muig-medon (Slave-middled). Eochaid Muig-medon had five sons, who had descendants, viz.:—Niall of the Nine Hostages, Brian, and Fiachra. Of Niall Nine-hostaged are descended the Clan Neill (O'Neills) of Ireland; from Brian, son of Eochaid Muig-medon, are many of the men of Connaught; from Fiacha, father of Dathi mac Fiachra, are sprung many tribes in Connaught and Ulster.

The children of Eochaid Dublen, son of Cairbre Liffeachuir, son of Cormac, were three sons, who were called the three Collas—Colla Uais, Colla Da chrioch, and Colla Meann;¹ their baptismal names were Caireall, Aodh, and Muredach, as says the poet—

Caireall, the first name of Colla Uais;
Aodh, of Colla Meann of great vigour;
Muredach, of Colla Da chrioch;
They were imposed on them from rebelling.

Colla Uais, son of Eochaid Dublen, assumed the sovereignty of Ireland in the year of the age of Christ 322; and he was four years in the sovereignty of Ireland when Muredach Tirech opposed him with a powerful army, and gave battle to the three Collas, and expelled them to Scotland, where they obtained extensive lands, for Oilech, daughter of the king of Scotland, was their mother. In the time when Cormac Finn was in the sovereignty over Scotland, 362 (326), they spent some time in Scotland, until a war broke out between Muredach Tirech, king of Ireland, and the Ultonians, viz., the Clanna Rughruidhe; and he invited the sons of his father's brother, that is, the three Collas, to Ireland to assist him against the Clann Rughruidhe and the adjoining districts. They responded to the king of Ireland, and waged a fierce war against the Clanna Rughruidhe; and Fergus Foga, king of Ulster, and his three sons, fell by them; and they took possession of the province of Ulster, and of the Oilltrian (Full-third) of the province of Connaught, and many other possessions which were inherited by their race in succession from the kings of Ireland.

As to Colla Uais, after he had terminated that war he returned back to Scotland, and left all those possessions to his brothers; and having spent fifteen years there, he went on a free visit to Ireland, and died at Tara of the kings, anno Domini 335.

Colla Uais had four good sons, namely Eochuid and Fiachra Tort, and Feradach and Maine. All the Clann Donald in Scotland and in Ireland are of the race of Eochuid. The Turtruighe and Fir Luirg are of the race of Fiachra Tort. The Fir Li and Fir Lacha are of the race of Feradach. The race of Maine is not known to us.

A goodly race, descended from Colla Da chrioch, flourished in Ireland, namely Maguire, chief over the country of Fermanagh; Mac Mahon, chief over the country of Monaghan; O'Hanlon, and O'Kelly, and many others.

I have seen nothing written of the race of Colla Meann, except such holy men of them as went into the Church. Many of the holy people of Scotland and Ireland were descended from the three Collas.

Here is the direct line of descent from Colla Uais. Eochaid was begotten of Colla Uais; Carran was begotten of Eochaid; Ere was begotten of Carran; Maine was begotten of Ere; Fergus was begotten of Maine; Godfrey was begotten of Fergus; Niallgus was begotten of Godfrey. The genealogy of Macdonald of Clann Cellach; Flannagan, son of Tadhg, son of Fermara, son of Tadhg, son of Lochlann, son of Art, son of Fianacht, son of Donald, from whom are the Clann Donald of Clann Cellach, son of Colgan, son of Cellach, son of Tuathal, son of Maolduin, son of Tuadan, son of Tuathal, son of Daimim, son of Carbre, son of Dom Airgid, son of Niallgus. Suibne was begotten of Niallgus; Mergach was begotten of Suibne; Solomon was begotten of Mergach; Gill-Adamnan was begotten of Solomon. It is from this Gill-Adamnan descended the Clann Donald of Ros Laogh, from a brother of Giolla Bride, son of Gill-Adamnan; and it was Gill-Adamnan who erected Mainistir-na-Sgrine, in Tir Iarach, in the county of Sligo, in the province of Connaught, and his name is there. (And be it known to you that the constant title borne by the clann of this tribe, from Ragnall, son of Someried, up to Colla Uais, was O'Colla and Thane of Eargaoidheal). Giolla Bride, son of Gill-Adamnan, son of —, and from him, the Thanes of Argyle, having been among his kindred in Ireland, that is, from the Ciann Colla, which are the Manchuidh and Mathdamnaidh, viz., the tribes of Macguire and Macmahon, it happened that this tribe held a meeting and conference in Fermanagh, on the estate of Macguire, and among the matters to be transacted was that Giolla Bride should get some estate of his own country, since he had been in banishment from his inheritance, by the power of the Danes and Norwegians. When Giolla Bride saw a large host of young robust people in the assembly, and that they were favourable to himself, the favour he asked of his friends was that so many persons as the adjacent fort in the place could hold should be allowed to go to Scotland with him, in the hope that he might obtain possession of his own inheritance and portion of it.

Giolla Bride proceeded with that party to Scotland, where they landed. They made frequent onsets and attacks on their enemies during this time of trouble, for their enemies were powerful and numerous at that time. All the islands from Man to Orkneys, and all the border land from Dumbarton to Caithness, in the north, were in the possession of the Danes; and such of the Gael of those lands as remained were protecting themselves in the woods and mountains; and at the end of that time Giolla Bride had a good son, who had come to maturity and renown.

It happened that the small party who were followers of Giolla Bride and Somerled were in the mountains and woods of Ardgour and of Morven, and they were surprised there by a large force of Danes and Norwegians. All the soldiers and plundering parties which Somerled had gathered round him, and he arranged them front and rear. Somerled put them in battle order, and made a great display of them to his enemies. He marched them three times before them in one company, so that they supposed there were three companies there. After that he attacked them, and they were defeated by Somerled and his party, and he did not halt in the pursuit till he drove them northward across the river Sheil, and a part escaped with their king to the Isles; and he did not cease from that work till he cleared the western side of Scotland of the Danes, except the islands of the Norwegians, called Innsigall; and he gained victory over his enemies in every field of battle. He spent part of his time in war and part in peace, until he marched with an army to the vicinity of Glasgow, when he was slain by his page, who took his head to the king in the year of our Lord 1180 (1164). His own people assert that it was not to make war against the king that he went on that expedition, but to obtain peace, for he did more in subduing the king's enemies than any war he waged against him.

Somerled had a good family, viz., Dugal and Ranald, and the Gall mae Sgillin, this man being so named from whom are descended the Clann Gall in the Glens. Bethog, daughter of Somerled, was a religious woman and a Black Nun. It is she that erected Teampall Chairinis, or the Church of Cairinis, in Uist. Dugal, son of Somerled, took the chiefship of Argyll and Lorn. Ranald and his race went to the Hebrides and Kintyre, where his posterity succeeded him.

Ranald, king of the Isles and Argyll, was the most distinguished of the Foreigners or Gael for prosperity, sway of generosity, and feats of arms. Three monasteries were erected by him, viz., a monastery of Black Monks (Benedictines) in Iona, in honour of God and Columba; a monastery of Black Nuns in the same place, and a monastery of Gray Friars at Saddle in Kintyre, and it is he also who founded the monastic order of Molaise.

Be it known to you that Ranald with his force was the greatest power which King Alexander had against the King of Norway at the time he took the Islands from the Norse, and after having received a cross from Jerusalem, partaken of the Body of Christ, and received unction, he died, and was buried at Reilie Oran in Iona in the year of our Lord 1207. And it was some time after this that Ranald, son of Godfrey, king of the Norwegians, was treacherously killed by Olave, son of Godfrey, in the year of our Lord 1229. From this forth the rightful inheritance of the Isles came to Ranald, and his race after him, for the daughter of Olave the Red, son of Godfrey, was the mother of Ranald, son of Somerled. This daughter of Olave was the lawful heir of her father and of her two brothers, viz., Ranald and Olave the Black.

Messages came from Tara in Ireland that Donald, son of Ranald, should take the government of Innsigall and of the greater part of the Gael. He had good children, viz., Angus Mor, the heir, and Alexander, from whom descended the Clann Donnail Renna, Mac William of the province of Connaught, and the Clann Sheehy of Munster, who are sprung from Siothach an Dorman, son of Eachuin, son of Alexander.

Angus Mor, son of Donald, son of Ranald, took the place of his father, and it was in his time that the war of the Baliols and the Bruces broke out. The tribe of Dugal, son of Somerled, took the side of the Baliols, and the race of Ranald, son of Somerled, the side of Robert Bruce, and all the garrisons from Dingwall in Ross to the Mull of Kintyre were in the possession of MacDugald during that time, while the tribe of Ranald were under the yoke of their enemies.

Angus Mor had good children, viz., Angus Og, the heir, and John, from whom sprang the Clann Eoin of Ardnamurehan, and Alexander, from whom descended the Clann Alasdair ; and Angus na Conluighe, from whom are sprung the Clann Donebaidh and Robertsons ; and much may be written about this Angus Mor which is not here. He died in Isla in the year of our Lord 1234 (1294).

Angus Og, son of Angus Mor, son of Donald, son of Ranald, son of Somerled, the noble and renowned high chief of Inmsigall. He married the daughter of Cuimnbhuighe O' Cathan. She was the mother of John, son of Angus, and it is with her came the unusual retinue from Ireland, viz., four-and-twenty sons of clan families, from whom sprang four-and-twenty families in Scotland. Angus had another son, viz., John Og an Fhraoich, from whom descended the Clann Eoin of Glencoe, who are called the Clann Dombhual an Fhraoich (of the heather). This Angus Og died in Isla, and his body was interred in Iona in the year of our Lord 1306 (1326).

John, son of Angus Og, succeeded his father in the chief government of the Isles. He had good children, viz., three sons by Anna, daughter of Rorie, son of Ailin, high chief of Lorn, and one daughter Mary, and that Mary was the wedded wife of Hector Maclean, Lord of Duart ; and Lachlan was his brother, the laird of Coll, and she was interred in Iona, in the church of the Black Nuns.

The eldest sons of John were Ranald, Godfrey, and Angus ; however, he did not marry the mother of these men from the altar, but came to the resolution of marrying her at the time of her death, for she was a sufficient wife for him ; but his advisers opposed him regarding it, for it appeared to them that he could get no suitable match if an heir was made from his first progeny, although he was young and vigorous. Therefore he made a provision for his son Ranald, and that was all the land which extended from Fort-Augustus in Abertarff to the river Sheil, and from the river Sheil to the Belleith in the north, Eig and Rum, and the two Uists. And after that he proceeded to the mouth of the river of Glasgow, and had threescore long-ships with him, and he married Margaret, the daughter of Robert Stuart, whom we call King of Scotland, but the real person was Robert, Earl of Fife, that is the brother-german of old Robert Fearingiora, that is the king, and he was governor of Scotland. And she bore to John three good sons, viz., Donald of Isla, the heir, and John Mor the Tanist, and Alaster Carraeh, the third son. John had another son, viz., Marcus, from whom descended the Clann Donald of Cnoic-an-ehluith in Tirone in Ireland. This John enjoyed a long life. It is he that made donations to Iona in his own time, and it is he also that covered the chapel of Isle Eorsag and the Chapel of Isle Finlagan, and the Chapel of Isle Suibne (island in Loch Sween), with all their appropriate instruments for order and mass and the service of God, for the better upholding of the monks and priests this lord kept in his company ; and it is he that erected the monastery of the Holy Cross a long time before his death ; and he died in his own castle of Ardtornish, while monks and priests were over his body, he having received the body of Christ, and having been anointed, his fair body was brought to Iona, and the abbot and the monks and vicars came to meet him, as it was the custom to meet the body of the king of the Hebrides, and his service and waking were honourably performed during eight days and eight nights, and he was laid in the same grave with his father in the church of Oran in the year of our Lord 1380.

Ranald, the son of John, was High Steward over the Isles at the time of his father's death, being in advanced age and ruling over them. On the death of his father he called a meeting of the nobles of the Isles and of his brethren at one place, and he gave the sceptre to his brother at Cill Donan in Eigg, and he was nominated Macdonald and Donald of Isla, contrary to the opinion of the men of the Isles. A man of augmenting churches and monasteries was this Ranald, son of John, son of Angus Og, from whom the name of Clann Ranald has been applied to this race. He bestowed an Unciata of land in Uist on the monastery of Iona for ever, in honour of God and of Columba. He was governor of the whole of the Northern Coastland and of the Isles, until he died in the year of the age of Christ 1386, in his own manor of Castle Tirim, having left a family of five sons.

We shall now treat of Donald of Isla, son of John, son of Angus Og, the brother of Ranald, how he took the lordship with the consent of his brethren and the nobles of the Isles, all other persons being obedient to him, and he married Mary, daughter of the Earl of Ross, and it is through her that the earldom of Ross came to the Macdonalds. He was styled Earl of Ross and Macdonald, and High Chief of the Isles. There are many exploits and deeds written of him in other places. He fought the battle of Garrioch or Harlaw against Duke Murdoch in defence of his own right and of the earldom of Ross, and on the return of King James the First from the captivity of the King of England, Donald of Isla obtained the king's goodwill and confirmation of Ross and the rest of his inheritance, and Duke Murdoch and his two sons were beheaded.

He (Donald) was an entertainer of clerics and priests and monks in his companionship, and he gave lands in Mull and in Isla to the monastery of Iona, and every immunity which the monastery of Iona had from his ancestors before him ; and he made a covering of gold and silver for the relic of the hand of Columba, and he himself took the brotherhood of the order, having left a lawful and suitable heir in the government of the Isles and of Ross, viz., Alexander, son of Donald. He afterwards died in Isla, and his full noble body was interred on the south side of the church of Oran.

Alexander, his son, succeeded his father in the earldom of Ross and lordship of the Isles. He married Margaret Livingston, daughter of the Earl of Linlithgow; she was mother of John, who was called John of Isla, son of Alexander of Isla, son of Donald of Isla.

Angus Og, son of John, who was called the heir of John, married the daughter of the Earl of Argyll, and a disagreement arose between him and his father about the division of his territory and land, in consequence of which a war broke out between the chiefs of the Isles and the tribe of Macdonald, the tribe having joined Angus, and the chiefs having joined John. And the affair having been thus carried on, John went to Argyll and gave him all that lay between the river Add and Altna Sionnach at Braigh Chinntire (that is, the lands of Knapdale), for going with him before the king to complain of his son. Shortly afterwards this Angus Og had a large entertainment with the men of the North at Inverness, when he was murdered by Mac ICaibre, his own harper, who cut his throat with a long knife.

His father lived a year after him, and all the territories submitted to him, but, however, he restored many of them to the king.

The daughter of Argyll, the wife of Angus, was pregnant at the time he was killed; and she was kept in custody until she was confined, and she bore a son, and Donald was given as a name to him, and he was kept in custody until he arrived at the age of thirty years, when the men of Glencoe brought him out by a Fenian exploit. On his coming out of custody he came to the Isles, and the nobles of the Isles rallied round him.

During the time that Donald Dubh had been in custody there was a great struggle among the Gael for power, so that Mac Ceaain of Ardnamurchan almost destroyed the race of John Mor, son of John of Isla, and of Kintyre. John Cathanach, son of John, son of Donald Balloch, son of John Mor, son of John, son of Angus Og, Lord of the race of John Mor, and John Mor, son of John Cathanach, and John Og, son of John Cathanach, and Donald Balloch, son of John Cathanach, were treacherously taken prisoners by Mac Ceaain on the island of Fionnlagan in Isla: and he conveyed them to Edinburgh, and a gallows was erected for them at that place which is called Boroughmuir, and they were executed, and their bodies buried in the church of Saint Francis, which is called New Church at the time. of the children of John Cathanach but Alexander, son of John Cathanach, and Angus of Isla, who were hiding in the Glens in Ireland. And it is related of Mac Ceaain that he expended much wealth of gold and silver in making axes for the purpose of cutting down the woods of the Glens, in the hope that he might be able to banish Alexander, son of John Cathanach, out of the Glens and out of the world. It happened at length that Mac Ceaain and Alexander made an agreement and a marriage contract with each other. Alexander married his daughter, and she bore a good family to him.

In a similar manner a misfortune came over the Clann Donald of the north side, for after the death of John of Isla, Earl of Ross, and the killing of Angus, Alexander son of Gillespie, son of Alexander of Isla, took possession of the Earldom of Ross and of the northern Oirir entirely, and married the daughter of the Earl of Moray. However, some of the men of the northern side came, when the Mackenzies and others rose up in opposition to Alexander, and fought a battle against him, which they call Blar na Pairee.

Alexander had no men left but such as he had of the men of Ross. Alexander came to the coast after that to seek for a force in the Isles, and he embarked in a long-ship to the southern coastland to see if he could find a few remaining of the race of John Mor. Mac Ceaain observed him, and followed him on his track to Oransay of Colonsay, and entered the house upon him, where Alexander, son of Gillespie, was killed by Mac Ceaain and by Alexander, son of John Cathanach.

This matter remained so for a space of time, until Donald Gallda, son of Alexander, son of Gillespie, came of age; and he came from the Lowlands by the direction of the Earl of Moray, until he came to the Isles; and he brought Macleod of Lewis with him, and a good number of the nobles of the Isles. They went out on the Point of Ardnamurchan, and there they met Alexander, son of John Cathanach, and he and Donald, son of Alexander, made a compact and agreement with each other; and they together attacked Mac Ceaain at a place called Creagan Airgid, and he and his three sons and many of his people were slain there.

Donald Gallda was nominated Mac Donald of this side of the Point of Ardnamurchan, and the men of the Isles submitted to him; but he did not live after that but seven or eight weeks. He died at Cearnabog in Mull, leaving no family or heir; but three sisters he had, viz., the three daughters of Alexander, son of Gillespie. A settlement was made on those daughters in the northern coastland, but they gave up Ross. Alexander, son of Gillespie, had a natural son, of whose descendants there is some account, viz., John Cam, son of Alexander, from whom are sprung the men of Achnacochine in Brae Lochaber, and Donald Gorm, son of Ranald, son of Alexander Dubh, son of John Cam.

With regard to Donald Dubh, son of Angus, son of John of Isla, son of Alexander of Isla, son of Donald of Isla, son of John of Isla, son of Angus Og, viz., the lineal lawful heir of the Isles and of Ross, on his release from confinement he came to the Isles, and the men of the Isles gathered about him; and he and the Earl of Lennox made an agreement to raise a large army for the purpose of his getting into possession of his own property; and a ship came to them from England to the Sound of Mull, with money to help them in the war. The money was given to Mac Lean of Duart to divide among the leaders of the army; they did not get as much as they desired, and therefore the army broke up. When the Earl of Lennox heard that, he dispersed his own army, and made an agreement with the king. Macdonald then proceeded to Ireland to request a force to carry on the war, and on his way to Dublin he died at Drogheda of a fever of five nights, without leaving a son or daughter as his offspring.

Race of Ranald, son of John, son of Angus Og.

Allan, son of Ranald, the heir; and his mother was the daughter of the Earl of Athole. From this Allan the race of Allan are called; and from Donald, son of Ranald the Tanist, the race of Donald, son of Ranald, are named; John, from whom are called the race of John, son of Ranald. Angus Riach (Brindled), from whom are descended the race of Angus Riach; and from Dugall are sprung the race of Dugall.

The age of the Lord the year that this Allan, son of Ranald, died, in the Castle Tirim, was 1419; and his body was interred in the same grave with his father, in the Cemetery of Oran in Iona.

The age of the Lord 1420 was the year in which Donald, son of Ranald, deceased. He was steward of Lochaber, and died in Lochaber, and his body was brought to Iona, and was interred in the same grave with his father and his brother in Relig Oran.

Rory, son of Allan, son of Ranald, assumed the lordship of his father, and of his grandfather, and the daughter of Stuart of Appin was his mother. Allan had another son named John, from whom are descended the race of John, son of Allan.

Anno domini 1440. Angus Riach, son of Ranald, died. He was Lord of the Garbhthrian of Clanranald, having taken upon him a Friarship of the Order of Mary in the church of Iona. He was buried in the same grave with his father in Relig Oran, anno domini 1481. This is the year in which Rory, son of Allan, laird of Clanranald, died. His body was brought to Iona, and he was buried in the same grave with his father. A.D. 1426, Dugall, son of Ranald, died at his manor in Reispoll ; and his body was brought to Iona, and was buried along with his brothers in Relig Oran ; A.D. 1460 ; in this year died a powerful, bold-warlike lord of the Clanranald, viz., Alexander, son of Donald, son of Ranald, on the island of Abas ; and his body was brought to Iona, and was buried in the same bed with his father in Relig Oran. In the same year the King of Scotland died by the shot of a big gun which broke his leg, while he was directing it on the Castle of Roxburgh—that is, James the Second. In the same year died Alexander, son of Alexander, son of Godfrey, son of Ranald, son of John, laird of the northern end of Uist. In the same year Orkney was plundered by Hugh, grandson of Donald. In the same year John, son of Lachlan Maclean, was killed by the Clan Chattan in Ardgour.

Rory had a good son named Allan, son of Rory, and the daughter of Macdonald of the South Oirir was his mother, namely, Margaret, daughter of Donald Ballach, son of John Mor. Rory had other sons, namely, Duncan Garbh, and the daughter of the Laird of Coll was his mother ; he had other illegitimate children, viz., Farquhar and John.

Allan assumed lordship, and well worthy of a property was that Allan, for he put his terror and fear over enemies and over many of this part of Scotland. He enjoyed a long life, and left a good progeny after him, Ranald Ban, the heir, and Alexander, who were the two sons of the daughter of M^c Ian of Ardnamurchan. Another family, namely, Allan Riach, son of Allan, John Beag, son of Allan, John Bronnach, son of Allan, John Molach, son of Donald, son of Allan ; James, son of Allan ; and Ranald Gallda, son of Allan, son of Rory, the youngest son that Allan had, and the daughter of Fraser of Lovat was his mother. This Allan, after having been before the King, and having received a settlement of his estate from King James the Fourth, A.D. 1509, died at Blair-Athole, and his body was interred in the monastery of that town :

Ranald Ban, son of Allan, assumed the lordship after his father, and he was good in it ; for exalted was his position and great was his sway, and good were the laws and regulations of his country during the short time he lived. But having gone before the King to settle finally the affairs which his father was not able to effect, he died in the town of Perth, A.D. 1514, the year that King James the Fourth was killed in battle. Ranald left his son in the lordship, namely, Dugall, son of Ranald. But I shall leave it to another certain man to relate how he spent and ended his life.

[Follows in Red Book an elegy on Allan and Ranald].

Alexander, son of Allan, assumed the lordship after the death of Dugald, son of Ranald. He spent his own turn; he died at Castle Tirim. Alexander had a good family, viz., John Moydartach (of Moydart), Angus, Rory Roy, and Donald of Lochan, the first children he had by Dorothy; John Ard and Allan Oyar and Ray Parson were the children he had by the daughter of Norman Mac Gillpatrick; Farquhar, the son of Alexander, had for his mother the daughter of Farquhar Mackintosh.

John Moydartach, son of Alexander, assumed the lordship. He was a fortunate man in war and in peace, in so much that he often spread terror over the territories through fear of him upon Lowlanders and upon Gaels. He gained a battle over Fraser of Lovat at Loch Lochy Head, which is called Blar Lenie (Battle of the Shirts), about the year of the age of Christ 1545. This John Moydartach enjoyed a long life, and there was a troubled time in his period, for the kingdom of Scotland was divided into factions amongst themselves, and the writers find it easy to speak heavily of every person who was not of the same faction with themselves; and I hear that they are so treating of John Moydartach, and particularly Buchanan; but ask Sir George how he likes to speak of the Princess to whom John Moydartach should be loyal; but whoever dispraises the head, it is not usual for him to praise the members. But concerning John Moydartach, he spent the end of his life godly and mercifully. He erected a church at Kilmarie in Arasaig, and a church at Kildonan in Eig; and he left funds to erect a chapel at Howmore in Uist, where his body was buried in the year of the age of Christ 1574. Allan, son of John Moydartach, assumed the lordship. He was a generous, open-hearted, hospitable man, and was affable, sensible, and desirous to establish and maintain a good name. It is he that pledged his word that he would not promise anything in his inebriety which he would not also promise in his sobriety; therefore it was customary with him after a drinking or potation, in order to keep his word of promise with his servant men and attendants, to ask them if they remembered he had promised to give anything that he did not fulfil.

These are the other sons that John Moydartach had, namely, John Og, Donald Gorm, and Rory Og, the children of the daughter of the laird of Knoydart. Rory Dubh, Ranald, John Dubh, and Angus, the children of the daughter of Niall, son of Charles. Age of the Lord the year that Allan, son of John Moydartach, died, i.e., 1590. His body was interred in the island of Fionan.

Allan had a good family, viz., Allan Og, and the daughter of Macleod of Harris was his mother; he was his first son. After her he took unto him the daughter of Maclean of Duart, and had a good family by her, viz., John of Strome. He was accidentally killed by his own servant man with a stone, while they were at play, shooting with a sling at Strome, Lochcarron, for it is there he was being fostered with the laird of Strome and of Glengarry. Angus, son of Allan, who assumed the lordship after the death of his father, did not live but a short time, he having been put to death by Angus Og, son of James, while he was a prisoner with him at Dunyveg. Donald, son of Allan, assumed the lordship after him, and there was every goodness during his time; and he died at Castle Tirim, in the year of the age of Christ 1617, and Ranald, son of Allan, died in Canna in the year 1636; his body was interred at Howmore. In the same year Ranald Og, son of Donald, son of Allan, died, and his body was brought to the island of Fionan in this year. John, son of Allan, departed this life at Canna, and his body was brought to Uist, and was buried at Howmore. In the same year Donald Gorm, son of Angus, son of Allan, died in Uist, and his body was buried at Howmore; excessive the number of nobles of Clan Ranald who died in that year. John Moydartaeh, son of Donald, son of Allan, assumed the lordship after the death of his father; and his mother was Mary, daughter of Angus, son of James, viz., the head chief of Iona and Kintyre, governor of Gigha and Colonsay. The other two sons of Donald were Ranald Og, whom we have mentioned before, and Alexander Og; they died without issue. [Follow Elegies, which see].

There you have the elegy for those four noblemen, namely, Ranald, son of Allan; Ranald, son of Donald, son of Allan; Donald Gorm, son of Angus, son of Allan; and John, son of Allan. Each of these men left issue, except Ranald Og, son of Donald, son of Allan.

Ranald, son of Allan, a good man according to the times in which he lived; he was hospitable and generous, thrifty and friendly. He took unto him as his first wife the daughter of Ranald, son of James, i.e., Tanist of South Oirear, and she bore him a good son, Angus Mor, son of Ranald. He put her away, and she was afterwards married to Coll Mac Gillespie. She was the mother of the Clann Coll, namely, Gillespie, Ranald and Alaster, and a good family of daughters, who were married to good gentlemen. Ranald, son of Allan, after having put away the daughter of Ranald, took Fionnsgoth Burke, a lady of the Burkes of the Province of Connaught, in the County Mayo, and she bore three sons for him, namely, Alexander, Rory, and Farquhar. He put away Fionnsgoth, and married Margaret, the daughter of Norman Macleod of Harris, the wife whom Norman Og Macleod of Lewis had. She bore a family to the son of Allan, namely, Allan Og, son of Ranald. That good wife died from him. After her he took Mary, the daughter of Gillespie of Medhe Connail, and she bore a son to him, namely, Donald Gorm, son of Ranald, and he put her away. After all these he married Margaret, the daughter of Angus, son of James, and her issue were made heirs of Benbecula and of Ardnish. She bore him a good family, namely, Ranald Og, the heir, and John Og, Angus, Ranald, and Rory.

Donald, son of Angus, son of Allan, had a family; Donald, who was killed at Philiphaugh in the army of the Marquis of Montrose, and Alexander, whose mother was Janet, the daughter of Donald, son of Allan. He himself, his wife, and household were drowned while coming from Coll to Muck. Donald, son of Angus, had another natural family.

John, son of Allan, had a good family by Julia, the daughter of Norman Og Macleod of Lewis, namely, Donald, who was drowned on the coast of Uist the year after his father's death. Alexander assumed the heirship after him; John Dubh and Rory and other natural children. Rory, son of Allan, had a family, namely, John Og, who succeeded him, and other children.

I treat of certain affairs which have happened during my own time. Charles I., son of James VI. of the Stuart family, was King at my earliest recollection. Here are some of the Chiefs who were over the Gael, under the King at that time, viz., Ranald Og, son of Ranald of Arran, Marquis of Antrim, over the Route, and over the Glims, in Ireland; and Archibald Caoch, son of Archibald Gruanach, son of Archibald Dun, viz., Marquis of Argyll. Sir Lachlan Maclean, laird of Duart. John Moydartach, son of Donald, son of Allan, Captain of the Clanranald, and laird of Moydart and Uist. John, son of Rory Mor Mac Leod of Harris. Sir Donald Gorm, son of Gillespie Macdonald, lord of Sleat and Troterness, a great courtier with King Charles; and Niall of the Castle, Mac Neill of Barra. Lachlan, son of John Balbh Mackimmon of the Strath. John Garbh, son of Gillicalum of Raasay; John Garbh, son of John Abrach, laird of Coll; Murdoch Maclean of Lochbuy. Donald of Strome, son of Angus, son of Alaster, laird of Glengarry and Knoydart, who was an old hero at the time of my earliest recollection, and his grandson a young man in confinement at Edinburgh, and after that was Lord Macdonald, namely, Angus, son of Alaster, son of Donald. And Allan, son of Donald Dubh, was Chief over Clan Cameron, and his grandson was a young man, namely, Ewan, son of John, son of Allan, who lives yet. And George Donn Mackenzie Og, Earl of Seaforth and Chief of the Mackenzies. And Donald Dubhail Mackay, grandson of Magnus, viz., Lord Reay, and Chief of the Mackays; and many other good men who were chieftains at that time. But nothing is here written except of the people whom I have seen myself, and from my own recollection am acquainted with a part of their deeds.

It is easy for you, however, to obtain information about the troubles of the times from the common language in which they are writing in the kingdom. But this, however, I remember that the Scots were the soonest to begin this war of the three kingdoms, and not the English or Irish. For after having made a Covenant or Union against the King and English for the purpose of setting aside the bishops and appointing presbyters in their stead, they sent for all the Scottish officers in the other kingdoms beyond the sea, and they made commander in chief of Alexander Leslie, an old soldier, who had been for a long time fighting in foreign countries. That army marched into England; it was the first army set on foot in the time of King Charles, and it is against him it was. The kingdoms were put into commotion from that out, which happened, according to date, in the year 1639. And in the heat of these transactions the Marquis of Antrim, Ranald Og, son of Ranald of Arran, sent a party of armed men from Ireland to Scotland by order of the King, and gentlemen of his own kin along with them, namely, Alaster, son of Colla, son of Gillespie, Colonel James, son of Somerled, son of James of the Bann, and other gentlemen. They took snipping at the town of Hae, in the month of July, in the year 1644. They did not take harbour or land until they came to the Sound of Mull, and they laid siege to the Castle of Kinloch Alan, took it, and left a garrison in it. They proceeded from thence to the Castle of Mingarry, which they took after great trouble, and a party of his people were left in it. Alaster, son of Colla, and the party marched on foot to Kyle-rea. The ships sailed to Loch Eiseord, in the Strath, to Sir Donald, for the King and the Marquis of Antrim's orders were for him to take the command of the army, and to take every man who would rise with them, but Sir Donald died half a year before that.

Alaster, son of Colla, offered the command of the army to Sir James Macdonald, but Sir James refused it, for he thought the army too small, since the whole kingdom was against him, they having only fifteen hundred men, so that Alaster came to the resolution of returning back to Ireland, since the King's orders were not obeyed by them. At that time, three large ships of war belonging to the Scottish Parliament sailed round from Leith, and came to the mouth of Loch Eiseord, while Alaster's ships lay in the loch: they fought them, but Alaster's ships were taken, which obliged Alaster to remain in the kingdom into which he had come, whether he liked it or not.

He marched off from thence over Kyle-rea and over the mountains of Cuaich, from thence they proceeded to Glengarry and encamped in it, where they got plenty of beef for their army, but few of the people joined them. From thence they went to Badenoch, encamped in it, and threatened the men of that country that if they did not join the King's army they would burn and spoil the country. The order was shown to them, and by the order they were joined by Clan Vurich of Badenoch, who were led by a captain and good chieftain of their own blood, namely, Ewan Og, son of Andrew, son of Ewan, who brought 300 men of his own kin with him into the King's army, who were very steadfast in the army while the war continued. They were joined by Clan Finlay of Braemar with a chief of their own kin, namely, Donald Og, son of Donald, son of Finlay. From thence they marched to Athole, and the Earl of Montrose met them at Blair-Athole, in the character of a timber merchant, and a little bag hanging from his neck, having come from England with the King's commission of general of the army, and Alaster, son of Colla, to be his major general, and they received him joyfully. The most of the men of Athole joined them, the Clan Duncan, and the Stewarts of Athole; that was in the beginning of harvest. From thence they marched to the Lowlands, where a great army of Covenanters met them near Perth, consisting of eight thousand men, while their own army consisted only of two thousand foot; but, however, they gained a victory over them; none of them escaped but such as the swiftness of horses carried away from them. They took Perth, and they were wealthy and rich after that battle of Perth. Fifteen days only intervened between the fighting of that battle and another battle which was fought at Aberdeen against the Covenanters, where they received a severe repulse and a forcible and fiercely clamorous fight. The success of those two battles raised the courage and spirit of the Gael from that forth, in so much that they did not turn their backs to the enemy, either on even terms or under a disadvantage.

Mae Cailin, Earl of Argyle, happened to have been a leader of the Presbyterian faction and a great supporter of the Covenanters against the king: he came to Ardnamurchan, and laid siege to the Castle of Mingarry, but did not succeed in taking it.

John Moydartach came from Castle Tirim to that camp of Mae Cailin, at the request of Mae Cailin, for Mae Cailin hoped that John Moydartach and the Clanrald would join him in his own army against the king's army. He did not remain long in the camp when he returned, and raised all the men of Uist, Eigg, Moydart, and Arasaig, and the first thing they did was the spoiling of Suinart, leaving neither cow nor sheep in it that they did not carry away to the plains of Castle Tirim; and he sent his son Donald with a part of that prey to the garrison who were in Castle Mingarry. Meantime Alaster Mac Colla came down from Montrose to give relief to Castle Mingarry; and Alaster and Donald, son of John Moydartach, met each other there, and they were glad to see each other, for that was their first acquaintance with one another. From thence they came to Castle Tirim, and after having left an exchange of garrison in Castle Mingarry, John Moydartach and themselves proceeded to Arasaig and to Morar, and they sent a message to Macleod requesting him to come and join the king's army according to his law, but he refused them; and they came to Knoydart, where they met Angus, the grandson of Alaster, and they requested him to join them, but he did not join them at that time. However, Donald Gorm, his father's brother, joined them, and the greater part of the men of Knoydart and of Glengarry. They went forth from the head of Loch Nevis by Clachard to Lochaber and to the Brae, and Donald Glas, the grandson of Ranald, and the men of the Brae joined them, and the Stewarts of Appin came to them there, and the Clan Iau of Glencoe, and the men of Glen Nevis, and all those to the east of Lochy of the Clan Cameron. From thence they went to Badenoch, and over the range of Drumachter, and to Blair in Athole, where they met the Marquis of Montrose, who was very thankful for that collected army sent to him by John Moydartach to do service for their earthly king. A council was held in that place in order to consider where they should spend the winter. The general supposed that they should spend the winter in the Lowlands, but all of them thought the country of the Gael the best place for the safety of the army. Montrose consented to that, on the assurance that the army would get victuals and accommodation in it, for which purpose Angus, son of Allan Dubh, was invited before the council; he was a gentleman of the men of Glencoe. Montrose put the question to Angus, Was he not acquainted with the countries of Mac Cailin, or could the army get victuals or encampment in them in winter? Angus answered his lordship, and said that there was not a town under the lordship of Mac Cailin but was known to him, and that if starch horses, and fat cattle as victuals to feed upon, in them would answer their purpose, that they would procure them for them. That answer pleased the Marquis, and they unanimously prepared to go to Argyle. The army marched from the Brae of Athole, and they went to the Menzies in Appin, which they burnt, and from thence they went to the head of Loch Tay, and burnt both sides of it. The Clans Gregor and Mac Nab came to them to assist the king's army. John Moydartach and his own party and the men of the Brae were sent in a separate direction from the other part of the army to make a preying throughout the country, so that Montrose did not meet him until they came to Killmartin in Glassary. From that single preying expedition they brought in a thousand cows to the camp of Montrose. In short, all the territories of Mac Cailin were spoiled and burnt on that occasion, and eight hundred four score and fifteen men were killed in these countries without battle or skirmish having taken place in them. The army marched from Argyle over Connel of Lorn, traversing every country until they came to Inverlochry in Lochaber.

Mac Cailin was not idle, for he sent to the laird of Auchinbreck to come to him from Ireland, for that man had been in Ireland since the beginning of the war, on the Earl of Antrim's estate, and having its large towns in his possession, with a standing army in them. The Marquis [Mac Cailin] himself went to Edinburgh to complain to the Council of Scotland that Montrose or Alaster did not wait for him to give them battle, upon which they sent with him a regiment of five hundred soldiers as an assistance and force. The laird of Auchinbreck came from Ireland to them, and he was seized with fury and rage on finding his estate burnt and plundered before him. He gathered the Clan Campbell numerously and extensively mustered, and they went in the track of that army of Montrose and of Alister, son of Colla. When Montrose arrived at Inverlochry, Sir Lachlan Maclean came to them there, and Angus, son of the son of Alister, laird of Glengary; but the men of Mac Alister's son were always in that army. Having marched from Inverlochry, they had not gone far when news came to them that Mac Cailin and his large army had come to Inverlochry, and that they had burnt the Braes of Lochaber. The army of King Charles returned from Fort-Augustus in Alertarff, at that time commanded by the Marquis of Montrose, their general, and Alister, son of Colla, son of Gillespie, major-general, and these nobles of Clanrald and Macdonalds, namely, John Moydartach, son of Donald, son of Allan, and his son Donald, and Angus, son of Alister, son of Donald, son of Angus, laird of Glengary, along with their own kindred and friends, and the three Irish regiments of the true men of the people of the Earl of Antrim, led on by their own commanders, namely, Colonel James, son of Somerled, son of James of the Bann, son of Somerled Buighe, and Ranald Og, son of Alexander, son of Alexander, son of Angus the Proud, and Magnus, son of the Giolla Dubh Mac Cathan, foster brother to the Earl of Antrim. Maclean, Sir Lachlan, had only about twelve men of his people to attend him. There was a good man there of the nobles of Scotland, namely, Lord Ogilvie, and his son, a good man, i.e., Sir Thomas. They marched from Fort-Augustus over Lairthuirard, and into Glenroy and over the Spean, where they were met by a party of the enemy, and they killed the most of them, and such of them as escaped brought intelligence to the camp. Saturday evening was coming on them when they arrived before their enemy. Mac Cailin's army went on their guard, and the sentries of both armies were firing at each other during the night. Mac Cailin himself took to his ship, and he left the laird of Auchinbreck to face the fight. At the very beginning of morning the battalions were put into arrangement and order, being Sunday, the Festival day of Bridget, and the first day of Spring, A.D. 1645. A party was sent out from the King's army, headed by Magnus, son of the Giolla Dubh O'Catban, and another party was sent from Mac Cailin's army to oppose them, headed by Gillespie, son of Gillespie Og, laird of the Bingingeadhs. The two parties having given fight to each other, it was not long until that part of the army of Mac Cailin gave way; having been forcibly driven back on its own main body, the main army became confused, they were roughly handled and defeated. The greater part of the army were killed, and a very great number of them were drowned at Bun Nevis. The laird of Auchinbreck, the laird of Caradale, and the Provost of Kilmun were killed. The laird of Barrbreck, the young laird of Caradale, [and] Mac Iomhair of the Pinguin Mor were taken prisoners. All those of the kindred of Mac Cailin that were not killed on that day were taken prisoners. The loss of the King's army was Thomas Lord Ogilvie, Captain Brain, and six soldiers.

Montrose marched to the north with the King's army, and Mackenzie, Earl of Seaforth, came to them and pledged his word that he himself and his people along with him would join the King's army to aid it; he collected and gathered his people from Lewis and from every other country which he possessed. As to Montrose, he spent the spring in the north strengthening his own army; and the Gordons, with Lord Gordon, the son of the Marquis of Huntly, came to congratulate them, and they were pleased with it. About that time the army of the Scottish Parliament came from the south, and Mackenzie, with his own army came from the Coast of the men of Lewis and the northern borders. What Mackenzie himself and his people did was to join the army of the Parliament and break his word with Montrose and the King's army.

While Montrose and the King's army lay at Auldearn, Lord Gordon with his good force of horse and foot being with him, Nathaniel Gordon came to them from the advanced guards and informed them that the enemy were near them: that man was a good knight and a fortunate warrior: Gordonach Caoch was another name for him. The trained and well-armed battalions of the Gael were arranged in order opposite the enemy, and the right hand side was given to the dread knight Gordon and to his lord, and the command of the body of the battalion to the active, arrogant Marquis Montrose. Sir Alaster, the red-armed horse-knight, i.e., the brave and courageous son of Colla Ciotach, son of Gillespie, son of Colla, son of Alaster, son of John Cathanach, took the left wing of the army to him against the right of the enemy, and while Alaster was arranging his party, a gentleman from Lord Gordon came with a message to him, and spoke in this manner:—“Mac Donald, we have heard that there was an agreement and friendship between our ancestors, and that they did not strike a blow against one another, whatever strife might have been between the other Scots and them: neither was the fame of any other tribe for valour greater than theirs: therefore, by way of renewing the agreement, I would wish to receive a favour from you, and that is an exchange of foot on the first day of my service to my earthly King, viz., you taking my foot forces and you sending me your foot.”

That affair was quickly performed by Alaster, son of Colla. He sent ten and four score of the veteran soldiers, who were often tested in great dangers in many places: and there came in their stead three hundred foot of the men of Bog of Gight, Strathbogy, and the Broes, who were not accustomed to skirmishing, hard conflict, or the loud, harsh noise of battle. Although that was a bad exchange for Alaster, it was good for his men, for they were never in any battle or skirmish which was cheaper, safer for them than it. It seemed to them that the cavalry of the Gordons had no duty to perform but to defend the foot from every danger. Alaster drew up his men at the place where they had come to, and found that there remained with him of his own men but ten and two score of his gentlemen: he put five and twenty of these in the first rank, and five and twenty of them in the last rank, and drew up his three hundred foot of the Gordons in their midst, and marched before them. The men who opposed them were the regiment of the kind of lawyers, well-trained men, and the gentlemen of Lewis along with them. The clamour of the fight began as is usual in every field of battle, which the foot who were behind Alaster, son of Colla, could not well endure, for some of them would not hear the sough of an arrow or the whistling of a ball without bowing their heads or flying about. Alaster's defence then was to go backward, beckoning to his party with his hand to be of good courage and march quickly, while his gentlemen were entirely engaged in keeping their companies in their order, but they failed to do so ; I knew men who killed some of the Gordons' foot to prevent their flight, which when the enemy perceived they prepared to attack them and to make the charge. Alaster ordered them to gain the enclosure which they had forsaken before, but they were attacked with pikes and arrows, and many were slain on every side of the enclosure before the party got into it. Alaster's sword broke, and he got another sword into his hand, and he did not himself remember who gave it to him, but some persons supposed that it was his brother-in-law, Davidson of Ardnacross, that gave him his own sword. Davidson, Fear Doirehe Mackay, and other good gentlemen, fell at that time at the entrance of the enclosure, who were waiting to have Alaster in before them. As soon as Alaster got into the garden, he set all those in it in fighting order to give relief to those of his party who were outside ; one of them was Ranald, son of Donald, son of Angus Mac Ceanain of Mull. I do not omit to set down this small part of his deeds. He happened to have been walking among the Gordons, and it was not the same side of the garden that he took and the other party of Alaster's gentlemen who were walking among the Gordons, when he felt the Teapar having been put on his shoulders. He turned his face to the enemy, his sword was at his breast, his shield on his left hand, and a hand-gun in his right hand. He pointed the gun at them, and a party of pike men who were after him halted. There happened to be a narrow passage before them, and on that account there was not one of his own party that had been after him but went before him ; there was a great slaughter made among the Gordons' foot by the bowmen. It happened at that time that a bowman was running past Ranald and he shooting at the Gordons ; he looked over his shoulder and saw the halt which Ranald brought the pikemen to, and he turned his hand from the man who was before him, and aimed his arrow at Ranald, which struck him on the cheek, and he drove a fist's length of it out through the other cheek. Then Ranald fired the shot but not at the bowman ; he threw the gun away and put the hand to his sword, while his shield arm was stretched out to defend himself against the pikes ; he made an effort to get the sword, but it would not draw, for the cross hilt whirled about and the sword did not come out ; he tried it the second time, but it did not come ; he tried it the third time by holding the scabbard of the sword with the hand of the shield which he put under his arm, and it was drawn out, but five pikes pierced him between the breast and the chin on account of that process ; however, not one of the wounds they then inflicted on him was an inch deep. Having been engaged for some time cutting off the pikes, some of which stuck in the boss of the shield, he set his back to the garden to defend himself, and he was forcibly endeavouring to go to the door. The pikemen became deterred on account of the great number of them that were being cut off, except one man, who was striking at him desperately and severely, for it seemed to that man that if he could preserve his pike from being cut off, his combatant man should fall by him. Ranald was then listening to Alaster complaining of the Gordons for the bad exertion they were making to rescue himself out of the place in which he was ; but he (Ranald) was advancing towards the garden door, step by step, and when he considered to be near the door he gave a high quick spring away from the pikeman, he turned his back to him, with his face to the door, and stooped his head ; the pikeman followed him, and stooped his own head under the door. Alaster was at that time watching them ; he gave the pikeman a stroke, and although he might have been inclined to return back again quickly, what happened was that the young man's head was knocked against Ranald's shins from the stroke which Alaster gave him ; his body fell in the door and his head in the garden. When Ranald straightened his back and looked behind him at the door, it was then he saw his companion. The arrow which was stuck in Ranald was cut and pulled out of him, and he got the use of his tongue and power of speech, which he did not expect.

It may be easily conjectured that the rest of the king's army was not idle all this time, viz., the active, intellectual, and courageous Marquis of Montrose ; the brave, heroic, active, gallant, warlike Lord Gordon, along with his gentlemen ; and others of the bold and warlike Clan of the Mac Donalds, and of the truly fierce, very brave, powerfully spirited band of the Clanranald, and they faced the enemy manfully and bravely without the fear or terror of strokes or shots. Montrose their general, being with his army, stood on a high hill, and saw the great danger and jeopardy in which Alaster was, and what he did was to call out loudly to encourage the gentlemen and the army who were within hearing of him, and said, " It is a great shame for us that one man should always carry off our fame from us by conquering every enemy before us : there is Alaster gaining the victory over the party that were opposed to him in the battle : therefore lead on this army in good order, zealously and quickly." This order of the chief general was carefully responded to, so that every horseman pressed his heels to the flanks of his horse, and every footman's step moved on vigorously, light-footedly, anxiously, and nimbly ; and in that charge they went among the enemy, when the enemy's forces were routed and were driven among the foot.

As to Alaster, he perceived the great standard of the king advancing to the rear of the regiment who were fighting against him there. He put his party in order to bring them out of the garden to fight, and a horseman came from Montrose to him concerning that. Alaster brought his men out of the garden as many as were serviceable, for seventeen of his gentlemen were disabled, who could not come out, besides those of them that were killed. He set his men in fighting order, and attacked the enemy the second time, and Montrose attacked them on the other hand, and that regiment of the laird of Lawers fell, and the greater part of the men of Lewis along with them in their ranks. They were pursued in the rout, and such of them as escaped were saved at Inverness, and it was with difficulty that Mackenzie escaped on horseback after losing his men and his honour.

Many were the warlike feats performed on that battlefield by the Macdonalds and the Gordons, without mentioning its casualties and great slaughter, as Montrose had stated in treating of that day in another place, that he himself saw the greatest feats performed and the greatest slaughter by six men that he had ever seen performed by himself or by any other person since; and of these six were Nathaniel Gordon, Ranald Og, son of Alaster, son of Alaster, son of Angus Uaibhreach, and Lord Gordon himself, and three others whoever they are. It was in the beginning of summer this battle of Auldearn was fought, in the year 1645. After fighting the battle they rested for some time in the estate of the Lord Marischal, who was a Covenanter and an enemy of theirs.

Alaster, son of Colla, came to the Coast to raise men among the Gael, and to seek for Maclean and John Moydartach there. The Scottish Parliament raised an army, commanded by General Baillie, and accompanied by Mac Cailin. They had intelligence that Alaster was at the Coast, and they resolved to give Montrose battle before Alaster and the rest of the Gael should come to aid him, and so it happened. They met at Alford, namely, General Baillie and Mac Cailin, and the army of the Scottish Parliament numerously and completely mustered. And those of the king's army along with Montrose were Lord Gordon, with his excellent and well-equipped cavalry of the Gordons; and Angus, the grandson of Alaster, laird of Glengarry at that time; and such of the Clanranald as were with him, and the men of Badenoch, and a party of the men of Athole. When the armies came in sight of each other, both sides put themselves into a defiant and very active position of fighting. A party of the men of Badenoch were sent from the king's army to give a warning of the skirmish, and to begin the fight; and another party was sent against them from the army of the Parliament. Then one of the Covenanters spoke to his own army and said—"It is customary with the men who are opposed to you to begin the attack before you; let them not have that lead to-day, but attack them briskly and courageously." Another man in the king's army, namely, Lord Gordon, said—"Let none of you be afraid that I shall not bring you Baillie by the neck from the midst of his party." It was then that these two armies made a strong and very violent rush directly against each other, and their march was so quick that the forces of the two armies encountered each other, before the parties who had been sent out from them to skirmish fired a shot at each other. And what they did was to turn the muzzles of their guns against the main forces of their armies, and give them the contents that were in them: and from them came the unlucky shot by which Lord Gordon fell, while he was putting his hand in the sword belt which was round General Baillie. By this time the armies were in close conflict with each other, the cavalry seizing each others' heads with their left hands and striking one another on the heads with their pistols, and the foot forces did not know what to do for the raging of the horse. Alaster, son of Ranald, son of Allan, is a witness to that, for he and Allan Og, the grandson of Alaster, were the officers of the Clanranald in that battle, and the grandson of Alaster himself was in the troop guarding Montrose. Alaster, son of Ranald, says that he himself was for a time and the point of his sword to earth, not knowing on whom he would strike a blow, not knowing a friend from a foe. They continued in that manner until the active officer Major Lidas called out in the English language to withdraw all the horse, and every horseman who heard that command brought out his own horse from among the foot. From that forth every man was at liberty to use his hand and his blade as best suited him, and the cavalry of the Covenanters were not allowed to return to the charge, but were closely pursued and continually killed: they were so mortified at the fall of Lord Gordon that they ordered that no quarter should be given to any man that day. Not a man of Montrose's cavalry returned from the chase until their horses became fatigued: and the laird of Glengarry was in pursuit of the Marquis of Argyle until his horse became fatigued under him, and always within seeing distance of him, and the Marquis changed three horses that day fleeing from him, and escaped by the swiftness of his steeds.

As to Alaster, son of Colla, he came from the Coast and from the Rough Bounds with a great number of men, namely, all the young men that John Moydartach had at home of his country and kin, and commanded by Donald his son; and the Clan Maclean from Mull, and the Stewarts of Appin, and the Clan Gregor and others. When they reached Montrose's camp they were joyfully and gladly welcomed by Montrose and all the rest. Each party of them were separately presented to the general, and the party of the son of John Moydartach, i.e., Donald, was brought forward. That man was a harmless, bashful, affable, unpretending man in the presence of his friends, but powerful and undaunted before his enemies, and was in the twentieth year of his age at that time. A conversation happened that night in the general's tent between the general and the major-general, namely, Alaster, son of Colla; and Montrose said that it was not much help for the Captain of Clanranald without having brought in a large prey to the King's army, which should have been sent with his son to him; Alaster answered that he had sent that with him. Alaster went out of the tent, and came to the lodging in which Donald was, and said unto him—"Donald, my son," said he, "make ready your men to bring a spoil to the camp, and have them prepared to proceed to-morrow morning, and none shall go with you but your own men and those to guide you to the country to which you will be ordered." They received their orders the following morning, and they brought great spoils to the camp in a short time, which pleased Montrose and all the army, and Donald and his men made more preys than any others in the entire army. Some of the reasons why those spoils fell to his lot more than other people were that many of the other Gael who were sent to collect spoils carried away the spoils they raised to their own country without the permission of the general. The son of John Moydartach would not do any such thing, nor would he allow indeed any of his men to go away from him with a prey or spoil; another reason is that it was not easy for the men of Isles that belonged to his party to come with spoils to their own country from the Low Country. On these accounts it fell to his lot to send the great bulk of the spoils to the camp during the quarter of that summer, for he carried away a great spoil from the estate of Lord Marischal, from Angus, and it is he that preyed the Mearns.

When they were engaged on that spoil they met an honourable old man who was telling them stories and historical affairs, and along with the other stories he told them, he said that the Mearns had not been spoiled since the time it was spoiled by Donald of Isla, the year he fought the battle of Garioch or Harlaw against Duke Murdoch; "and I suppose, young man, that you are descended of him, if you be the captain of Clanranald."

About this time the Parliament of Scotland met together, and they observed that it was a shame and a scandal to them that a small armed party of Gaels should harass the kingdom. They therefore collected the whole forces of the kingdom, as many as were fit to bear arms, and that large army of Scotland marched after Montrose and the Gael; their nobles and their officers, their marching kerns and their marines, so that there were five thousand mariners along with them who never fought on land before that time. When the small army of the King of Britain and of the Gael knew that, they formed a means of watching for themselves to protect them from country to country, and a retreat on them every day; and escaping with difficulty perseveringly and stealthily.

One day as they were urgently retreating and escaping with difficulty from Methven Wood was the day on which the greatest army they ever saw was pursuing them: John Moydartach's son and his men happened to be in the rear, the major general being at his post along with them, constantly skirmishing with the enemy. There was one bold horseman before the rest who constantly attacked them, so that there was not a ford or river they came to but that horseman gave them great trouble, and it seemed to his men and to himself that he was the chief champion of Scotland; Colonel was his name and his office; he took three or four baggage horses from them that day. Angus, the son of Allan Dubh, was in the rear of his own party, on horseback without a pillion or saddle, having a long gun across his lap before him; it was not on horseback he was accustomed to fight but on foot. He thought he heard the horseman coming once or twice, and at one time that he came after him. Angus dismounted, and let his own horse go away from him. He quickly set his gun on a stone and fired a shot, and the man of the red coat fell under his horse's feet, with satin trappings and silver lace; his men gave a great cry lamenting him; he was stripped and left there, and the enemy did not press them more boldly than that on that day or the day following. They continued in that state for thirteen or fourteen days without any rest, but always retreating, Montrose using his best ingenuity to see if he could weary out the great army which pursued him, hoping that by some of them separating from them he would be enabled to give them battle, but the soldiers were fatigued from want of food and sleep. Coming nigh to Kilsyth, after a night's march, they pitched a camp and stronghold in that place. At early morning of the following day what should they see but the great army, both horse and foot. The king's army had no choice but to leave the camp without eating flesh or bread, if they had them, and prepare themselves for fighting or retreat. Having marshalled the army, their nobles and officers held a council to determine whether they should give battle or retreat. Montrose requested to have the opinion of the soldiers and of the whole army on the case. The whole army unanimously replied that it would be better to give battle, even with the greatness of its danger, than to be constantly pursued by day and night. Montrose sent a trumpeter to the great army to inform them that they should have a field of battle to fight with them. When the great army heard that their gladness was so great that they gave loud shouts of delight and joy, and they were dressed into rank and order. Three thousand pike and musket men were placed on three bulwarks in the front, and eleven thousand men were drawn up in battalions in the rear of these, and you may suppose what a hardship it was for a small force to encounter them at that time. The defending, hard-hearted, clean armed army of the Gael were arranged, and their numbers were four thousand foot and five hundred horsemen, appearing barefooted, every one of them having his tunic between his legs, and the cavalry having white shirts over their garments.

These heroic, very fierce bands marched to the attack in the face of the musketry and great guns. The fight began by an excellent regiment of Irish and Scottish Gaels who were expert at shooting, and inured to fighting, and Major Lachanain before them, and Alaster, son of Colla, directing and encouraging them. There were two other regiments to give relief to Alaster and to the party that went down first, viz., the regiment of Maclean and the regiment of Donald, son of John Moydartach, but Maclean's men were nearer the fight as regarded their order than the Clanranald, but the heat of the fight was so great upon Major Lachanain that Alaster, son of Colla, ordered him immediate relief; some difference happened then to arise between Donald, son of John Moydartach, and Donald, son of Hector O'g Maclean, about the precedency of engaging, but, however, the Clanranald made their way in front of the Clan Maclean, and rushed at the walls on which their enemy were. Donald, son of John Moydartach, with his men, and Patrick Caoch Mac Gregor and his men in one regiment with the Clanranald. The assault was then made simultaneously by the fortunate army of the King of Britain, and the first man of them that leaped the enemy's wall was that son of John Moydartach, followed by his men; they were driven back in a routing defeat among the great army which was behind them, and all pursued them impetuously and fiercely, and the entire of the great army were routed, and were pursued during the day, cutting them down and slaughtering them. After the battle was ended they encamped at Hamilton, and the keys of the great Castle came to them from Edinburgh, and all Scotland submitted to them.

undertook to do it, but what induced me to write even this much was, when I saw that those who treated of the affairs of the time have made no mention at all of the Gael, the men who did all the service.

As to the Marquis of Montrose, he marched with a part of his army intending to go to England to relieve the King, who was sorely pressed by the English at that time, but he was defeated at Philiphaugh, and was not able to give assistance to the King.

Alaster, son of Colla, came from the camp at Hamilton to Kintyre, and cleared it for himself, and he drove out of it the Clan Campbell, and he erected Dunaverty as a place of strength. Donald, son of John Moydartach, came from the camp of Hamilton to his own country. Montrose proceeded to the North from the defeat of Philiphaugh with all those that survived of his men, and they continued so for some time. Montrose was in the north part of Scotland, and Alaster, son of Colla, in Kintyre, spoiling Argyle and Cowal and the territories: and John Moydartach in the Rough Bounds near the shore. John Moydartach and his son Donald went to Islay, and their own forces with them, and they drove out of it all the Clan Campbell that were in it.

About this time the Earl of Antrim came from Ireland to Kintyre to enquire after the army that he himself had in it, and he sent for those that were with Montrose, and they came to him at once. In consequence of this Montrose left the kingdom to solicit assistance from other kings and princes to aid King Charles. On his return from that journey, he was dishonestly destroyed by the Parliament of Scotland by the Covenanters, together with the Marquis of Huntly, and many other nobles who were on the side of the King.

A good many of the gentry of the Hebrides flocked to the Earl of Antrim, such as the Clan Maclean and the Clanranald, intending to set an army on foot again on behalf of the King; meantime the King's order came to the Earl of Antrim to disband the army, for the King was at that time in the hands of his enemies, viz., the Parliament of England and Scotland united against him. The Earl of Antrim disbanded the army, and he himself went to Ireland.

Alaster, son of Colla, remained in Kintyre, and made a stronghold in it and in Islay. The other Gaels who were on the side of the King went about to their own lands to protect them against the enemy. They were at length surrounded by a large army. Sir David Leslie and Mac Cailin came to Kintyre, without any notice being obtained of the time they would come till they came to Largie, where Alaster and his men were separated asunder. Alaster's party were dispersed; Ranald Og, son of Alaster, son of Angus Uaibhreach, was taken prisoner, and was put to death at Inveraray some time after that.

Alaster, son of Colla, went to Ireland, and he was killed at Choc-na-n-Dos, with many other gentlemen of the Clan Macdonnell, in the battle which Murchadh O'Brien gave them in the year 1647.

This great army of David Leslie, and Mac Cailin along with them, came to Islay and to Mull, and all submitted to them except John Moydartach alone and those who joined him.

[Follows Eulogy on Donald of Moydart. See Elegies, &c.]

With regard to John Moydartach, son of Donald, son of Allan, laird of Clanranald, being forsaken by all after Montrose and the Marquis of Huntly had been put to death, and such as lived of the gentry who were on the King's side had been banished to strange foreign countries, he alone stood out from the (Rulers of the) Kingdom; and the few that lived of the party on the King's side were gathering round him. Messages were constantly sent to him from the Rulers of the Kingdom requesting him to make peace with them, but he did not accept them. However, he sent his son Donald to Ireland, and all those who remained with him of the men of Ireland, and some of his Scottish gentlemen along with them, and he himself and the rest of his men remained to defend his inheritance.

As to Donald, he set off from Uist in a rigged low-country frigate which he had, and in a long Gaelic ship, with about 300 soldiers, composed of veterans, in the year 1648. From thence they went to the Sound of Mull, to Colonsay, and to the Sound of Islay, where they fell in with a large ship, which they captured with her full cargo of barley corn; they took another ship on the sea, found nothing in her, and they let her away. They sailed for Ireland, they were overtaken by a storm on the coast, so that their ships were separated. Some of them reached the harbour of Killybegs in Donegal. Donald and those who were along with him landed on the point of Magilligan in County Derry, and they sent back the ships to Scotland. He went to Achagh Dacharad, where there was a garrison favourable to them. From thence they went to the County of Cavan, where they met Philip O'Reilly, chief of that country, and a friend of theirs. They went from thence to Mullingar, and he left his men quartered in that town, and he himself went to Kilkenny, where the Council of Ireland were sitting. He received orders for himself and his men to join the Council's army under the command of General Preston. That is the army in which was Alexander, the Earl of Antrim's son, and those who lived of the Scots and Irish of the Mac Donnells and their friends, who went over with Alaster, son of Colla, to Ireland. This regiment had not less than fifteen hundred chosen gentlemen in it, Donald, son of John Moydartach, being lieutenant-colonel of it, and Angus, son of Alexander, laird of Largie in Kintyre, being first captain.

For some time this army were esteemed and honoured for their taking of great towns from the enemy, until they broke away from the army of Preston, but were overtaken in the county Riabbach. They had a large number of Irishmen with them of the Cavenaghs, who acted as their guides, and when these came to the places they were acquainted with in their own country, and on a border of a wood which was near them, they fled and left all there, so that the enemy rushed in among them and dispersed them. Donald, laird of Clanranald, and Angus, laird of Glengarry, were taken and sent prisoners to Kilkenny: they remained there for some time in prison until the Marquis of Antrim found means to release them. The grandson of Alaster came out sooner than the son of John Moycartach, and he went over sea to the king, and left Donald in prison, where he remained for some time until more money was given for his ransom by the Duchess of Buckingham, namely, the married wife of the Marquis of Antrim. He then went to Wexford: a ship was sent for him by the Marquis of Antrim to convey him to land at Caolas Sdálaigh in Uist, and Angus, the grandson of Alaster, laird of Largie, came along with him, and his friends were joyful at his return to them. His gentlemen soon came after him in a ship which they took on the Irish coast, namely, Murcha, son of Mac Neill of Barra, a great, handsome man, accomplished and well educated; Alexander, son John, son of Allan of Buaille; Donald Gorin, son of Allan; Donald Roy, son of Donald, son of Lachlan Mac Vurich; John, son of Donald of Benbecula; Angus, son of Alexander, son of Godfrey. John, son of Brian Mac Vurich, and another part of the men, came another way for themselves.

After Donald returned from that expedition he and his father spent their time in defending their country until they obtained peace from the rulers of the kingdom: their enemies, however, held them in debt which increased upon them during that time; this left themselves always in distress, and also their posterity.

Anno Domini 1670, the year in which John Moydartach died at Eriskay, in Uist, and his body was interred in Howmore, leaving one son, viz., Donald, and three daughters, Mor, Lady of Coll, Katherine, Lady of Barra, and Anna, Lady of Benbecula. Donald, son of John Moydartach,—sixteen years intervened between the death of his father and his death. He spent these sixteen years in affairs of peace, sometimes attending at Court, full of respect and honour through the excellence of his disposition and good behaviour, and sometimes at home to pay debts. He died in Camna in the year 1686, the same year that King Charles II. died; the body of Donald was interred at Howmore, in the same grave with his father. He left two sons and three daughters, namely, Allan, the laird, and Ranald; Mor, Janet, and Mary were the daughters. Mor, the daughter of John Macleod, was their mother; and Mor, the daughter of Rory Mor Macleod, was the mother of their father, i.e., Donald. Great was the sadness and excessive gloom which the death of this good man brought over the Isles, as is shown in his elegy.

[Follow elegies on Donald and on Allan, which see].

O'Henna made this on John of Isla,

The sovereignty of the Gael to the Clann Colla,
 It is right to proclaim it;
 They were again in the same battalions,
 The heroes of Fodla.
 The sovereignty of Ireland and of Scotland
 Of the sunny lands
 Was possessed by the sanguinary sharp-bladed tribes,
 The fighting champions.
 The government of the entire tribes was obtained
 By John of Isla.
 Alexander, the lord of hospitality, obtained
 The profit of kings.
 Donald, John, and two Angus',
 Who were hospitable and joyful,
 Four that gained tribute from kings,
 And to whom the Gael submitted.
 Donald and Ranald to kings
 Never did give;
 Somerled, who was not deceived by flattery,
 The chief of heroes.
 Four from Somarled of the blue eyes
 Up to Suibhne;
 Four whose dignity was not obscure,
 It is right to remember them.
 Six from Suibhne before mentioned
 To king Colla;
 Wine they had on the banks of the Bann
 In angular cups.
 Were I to enumerate all those connected with him
 Of the nobles of the Gael,
 I might give every generation up to Adam,

Ag so tres do ginealach Gháoidheal mar do ghellus an dremsa ris nar chóir coimes, sdar choir ceñus.

Such as no other man has attained.
 This is a sketch of the genealogies of the Gael,
 As I have promised ;
 This tribe with whom no comparison should be made,
 And to whom sovereignty was due.

Age of our Lord 1473, the year that Gillespie, son of Alexander of Isla, died, and his body was interred at Rosmarkie, viz., the brother of John of Isla, son of Alexander, and the father of Alexander, son of Gillespie, who was killed by Mac C'eaain in Oransay of Colonsay ; and the daughter of Mac Phee of Lochaber was the mother of this Gillespie, son of Alexander of Isla.

Age of the Lord 1437. In this year the King of Scotland, viz., King James the First, was treacherously killed in the town of Perth by his father's brother, viz., the Earl of Athole.

At the same time died Angus, bishop of the Hebrides, son of Donald of Isla, son of John, son of Angus Og. His full noble body was buried, with his crozier and his episcopal habit, in the transept on the south side of the great choir, which he selected for himself while alive.

Donald of Isla had another son, a monk, and it was in his time that Baile-an-Mhamuidh in Uist was given to the church, anno Domini 1440.

In this year died Mary Leslie, Countess of Ross and Lady of the Hebrides, viz., the wife of Donald of Isla.

I have given you an account of everything you require to know of the descendants of the Clanns of the Collas and Clann Donald to the death of Donald Dubh at Drogheda, viz., the direct line who possessed the Hebrides, Ross, and the Rough Bounds of Scotland. This Donald was the son of Angus (that was killed by his own harper Mac I'Chairbre), son of John of Isla, son of Alexander, son of Donald of Isla, son of John of Isla, son of Angus Og, and I know not which of his kindred or friends is his lawful heir. Except these five sons of John, son of Angus Og, whom I set down to you, viz., Ranald and Godfrey, the two sons of the daughter of Mac Dugall of Lorn, and Donald, and John Mor, and Alexander Carrach, the three sons of Margaret Stuart, daughter of the Earl of Fife, and governor or King of Scotland.

The race of Ranald, Lord of Clanranald, viz., the House of Oilean Tirim, and the laird of Glengarry.

Godfrey left no offspring, except a few poor people who are in north end of Uist.

The offspring of Donald of Isla, the eldest son of Margaret Stuart, was Alexander of Isla, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Islands. This Alexander married Margaret Livingston, daughter of the Earl of Linlithgow, to whom she bore John, the earl. Alexander had other children, viz., Hugh, by a daughter of Gilpatrick Roy, son of Rory, son of the Green Abbot, son of the Earl of Ross, whose surname was of the Rosses. He had for patrimony the third part of Lewis, and other lands upon the mainland. It is he that was killed in the parts of Garioch when along with Mac Donald, viz., Donald of Isla. For there were four that went out of the army before any part of the main force went with them, viz., Norman Macleod and Torquill his brother, Lochluinn mac Gillemhaoil and Gilpatrick mac Rory. Gilpatrick mac Rory and Lochluinn mac Gillemhaoil were killed, but Norman and Torquill escaped safe from the pursuit.

It was this Hugh, son of Alexander, that plundered Orkney, and William Macleod of Harris and the youth of the Hebrides were along with him in that expedition. Hugh had Donald Gallach, son of Hugh, by the daughter of the Coroner of Caithness, and she was of the Gunns. Hugh had other good children, viz., Donald of Harris, son of Hugh, and the daughter of Macleod of Harris was his mother; and John, son of Hugh, and the daughter of Mac Ceaain of Ardnamurchan was his mother; but that John left no issue, and Gillespie, son of Hugh possessed the lordship; and other sons who are not mentioned here. Donald Gruamach was son of Donald Gallach, and Donald Gorn, son of Donald Gruamach, and Catherine, daughter of Alexander, son of Allan, laird of Clanranald, was his mother, whose descendants still possess the lordship.

Gillespie, son of Alexander of Isla, whose mother was daughter of Mac Phee of Lochaber, and Alexander, son of Gillespie, who obtained possession of the earldom of Ross, and Donald, his son, died without issue.

John Mor, son of John, son of Angus Og, the Tanist to Mac Donald, married Mary Bisset, and it was with her the seven Tuaths of the Glens came into the possession of the Clan Donald.

Alexander Carrach, the third son, married the daughter of the Earl of Lennox, but she bore no children to him. Angus, son of Alexander, whose mother was a daughter of Mac Phee, but she was not married to him. Alexander, son of Angus, from whom are descended the race of Alexander, son of Angus in the Braes of Lochaber.

There you have the descendants of these four sons of John, son of Angus Og.

Marquis of Antrim.

Randell Og, son of Randell of Arran, son of Sorley Buy, son of Alexander, son of John Cathanach, son of John, son of Donald Ballach [the Freckled], son of John Mor, son of John, son of Angus Og. And his brother's son being now heir to the Marquis, namely, Randell Og, son of Alexander, son of Randell.

I know none of the descendants of John Mor, who have a title, except the Earl of Antrim and the Laird of Largie in Kintyre; nor of the descendants of Ranald Ban [i.e., the Fair], son of John Mor, Laird of Pingina in Kintyre: nor of the descendants of Angus of Islay, son of John Cathanach. The heads of these families lost their possessions in the posterity of James, the son of Alexander, son of John Cathanach: and Angus his son [lost] the superiority of South Oirear entirely, except a very small portion left by the two sons of Gillespie Dubh, son of Angus, son of James, namely, Alexander, son of John, and Gillespie, the two sons of John, and Angus and James, the two sons of Hugh, and these men had noble mothers. James Og, son of Angus, son of James, the lawful heir of the race of John Mor, died in London, in the year of the age of our Lord 1626. In the same year Rory Mor Macleod died in the Chanonry of Ross. The death of James Og and the death of Macleod of Harris was greatly deplored among the Gael at that time.

Norman Og, son of John, son of John, son of, namely, Rory Mor, son of Norman, son of Alexander, son of William, son of John, son of William, son of Gilliecalum, son of Tormod, from whom are called Siol Tormod [the Race of Tormod], son of Leod, from whom are called Siol Leoid, such as Macleod of Lewis and Macleod of Harris.

We were acquainted with the five sons of that Rory Mor, namely, John the Laird, Rory, Norman, William, and Donald, Isabel, the daughter of Donald, son of Angus, being their mother, daughter of the Laird of Strome and of Glengarry.

composed it.¹

Alba is without protection after Allan,
The heir of Ranald of the blue eyes;
My disposition since the death of these two men is such
That the greatest wealth is not coveted by me.

A hero by whom the the board of monks (?) was maintained,
 The son of Margaret of the greatest renown ;
 No loss more lamentable could be told,
 Although it is the final lot of every heir to die.

Allan by whom the plain of the Fingalls was defended,
 Of the race of Colla of smooth skin ;
 Until the death of the heir of O'Eachadh occurred
 All that departed from us did not concern us.

Ranald departed from the same power,
 He assumed the leadership of the Gael,
 He received, through death, the respect of every man,
 He was a branch of that bountiful wood.

The lamentation for Ranald of the purple blades
 Is not an agreeable course for my heart's disposition ;
 Whatever day he is regretted least,
 Our grief for him is a sickness to us.

I am not better off after Allan,
 The heir of Ranald, not a pleasing comparison :
 The leaders of our forces, our chieftain clan of warriors,
 My sorrow for the family is equal.

The lament for the two is an equal proportion,
 It is a trouble for us to treat of their jewels :
 It is not the departure of relatives from her high plains,
 But the united branches of the valour of Alba that have died.

The fame of Ranald has gone to decay
 After the death of Allan whose manner was noble ;
 He spent his time with us in fervor,
 Pity it were not we that died first.

Had Ranald departed after Allan,
 But in the death of any man I have no liking ;
 His fame excelled the deeds of the Gaels,
 No man after him is of any concern to them.

In the judgment of death there is no even decision
 Over the Clann Colla who took no refusal ;
 His death and that of his heir also,
 The branch of Moirne is without perfect sight.

Let me sing of you in silence like the swan,
 Thou descendant of Rory of the blue blades,
 My affection be with thee of the white coloured teeth,
 Though thy death now reproves me for it.

Your fame shall ever be in remembrance,
 The comparison of thy hospitality shall attend that fame ;
 Death will be a friend to us since the death of Allan,
 Thou art a branch never blamed.

Thou head tree of the Clann Cobhadh,
 Thy career has terminated, great was the destruction
 You inflicted upon them by preying,
 But more severe than that to Scotland is thy death.

The land is without corn in consequence of his death,
 The inheritance of Ranald is not a small portion ;
 Nuts, if on their trees, are without kernels.
 The woods are decaying, every tree is bare.

The sun has indicated thy deep mourning,
 It has not put blossom on the tops of branches ;
 The seasons are stormy without a change,
 Superior signs that his death was supremely lamented.

In his time impressive was the song of the Gaels,
 It was not a harsh tone on that account ;
 That thy death is a consequence
 Is false, as thou art away from the country.

In the territory of the Fingall in the time of Allan
 Noble to all was the dignity he bore,
 He obtained during his time of all its products,
 It seems to me that it is not the earth that gave him.

A little story I have about Cuchullain
 And of Cathfadh the Druid, intense the woe,
 The like of it everyone has not received,
 I give good information by relating their story.

Cuchullain the beloved of the Ulstermen ;
 The Ollamh of Tara on whom sorrow fell ;
 Death separated them both asunder,
 It could not subdue the love of Cathfadh.

The excessive grief of the learned man for Cuchullain,
 The end of their sorrow is no trifling question ;
 It is not remembered, though long it is since he flourished,
 That any champion ever excelled him in fame.

The grief of Cathfadh was not to be wondered at
 For the death of the Cu whose skin was like a wave ;
 But the greatness of my sorrow exceeds it
 For the death of the two of this race of Conn.

The grief of Cathfadh for Cuchullain,
 In comparing it with our case it is no degree of envy ;
 His deep sorrow for his mighty Fenian hero,
 That any man should die is no object to us.

The like of the grief which was on Cathfadh
 Is the extreme of the grief which has fallen on us ;
 Grief goes beyond settled sense,
 And our grief is not less painful.

Beyond the grief of all persons, that of Cathfadh exceeded
 A degree above every sorrow, intense was his love,
 It became our lot to bear with such a grief ;
 His anguish for Cuchullain was excessive.

Cuchullain was not better towards Cathfadh
 Than the friendship of Ranald of the blue eyes was ;
 Our pleasure from this clan of the blood of Fiachadh,
 It has compelled me to be sad.

Cuchullain who did not refuse a combat —
 The learned man of Fodla — 'tis sooth —
 Cathfadh died of sad grief for him,
 He died as one of the flock of the hill, he did not forsake him.

Were we to judge by the loss of one man,
 The death of two is a painful woe ;
 The grief of Cathfadh would be exceeded,
 It is a fit time to leave off his story.

There has been no forgetfulness of mourning after them ;
 The relations of the story are remembered by us,
 It is oppressive to us to hear them lamented,
 The two brilliant stars of the valour of the Grecial Gaels.

Cuchullain, the guardian of Fodla,
 A noble champion when he lived,
 The defence of his tribe against all in fighting
 He took upon him every time as his bounden duty.

This Cu defending Scotland,
 The mighty-deeded Allan, prodigious the loss,
 Protecting her hospitality and high plains
 His death is a melancholy case for Scotland.

Ranald died after his father ;
 Dressed in a fine coat of mail,
 He protected the territory of the Plain of the Collas,
 They could not find a better chieftain.

Allan was dexterous like Cuchullain ;
 The valour of Ranald of the vehement pursuits ;
 The severest death for every man is that of his heir,
 This is the saddest case of all.

A remembrance of him endureth for everlasting,
 He is the grief of his friend, it is a sad affair ;
 Those two men of the blood of Eimhear died,
 On which account we feel not the loss of any other man.

For now, O Ranald, I have lamented
 For thy society, thou fair skinned like the blossom ;
 My grief does not put an end to their loss ;
 The grief for all others is only feigned.

There exists a fame after every man,
 O Allan who wast not harmless in the conflict ;
 Although thy death is true, thou art not dead,
 Behold thy fame shall endure henceforth after thee.

Many battalions, always attending him, marched
 Around Allan of the old arms ;
 A wonder he should be alone in a grave
 Since he spent his life as he did.

Cathal M^c Vurich composed this for Donald, son of Allan.¹

Ye antiquaries of the learned men of the Hebrides,
 The best nobleman shall not be forgotten ;
 We must record his death after all that was bestowed
 By him over the land of the fair Gaels.

The son of Allan of the north Tiormfhonn,
 His prosperous career is no easy subject ;
 He made his way to the house of the Three
 With a fairy spear wielded in his hand.

Keen pursuings from strand to strand,
 On the days of the chase in the woods of the coast,
 As he had come from shooting birds,
 And accompanied with music on his departure.

 For the connections that arise about her ;
 The cause of his not championing the girl was
 That he and she occasionally played together.

The race of the Collas by whom the battle raged,
 The hilt of the sword was grasped by their hands ;
 They were the seal of the regal law
 Until the coming of the race of Euna from the battle.

 All that had been plundered from him

Be not erecting lime houses,
 Let grass huts be your dwelling at the shore,
 Let your spears be stacked on the cold field,
 These are your abodes of rest after the battle.

 Rising up together like a swarm on the field,
 With a furious wind on a ford,
 And the threads torn from the smooth standard.

 Prepared for your march, and not wishing for peace ;
 Be like the huntsman, watching his opportunity
 At the proper banks of the calm streams.

A spark flew from thy sharp blue sword,
 O Donald, at the fort's gate ;
 The moon is hidden above the banks of the coasts,
 The smoke of the plunder rose to it.

The cheeks are usually red in their natural colour
 Not by danger for which they seek,
 That is not the cause which reddened thy cheeks,
 But all thy prowess in battle.

A spoiling host from the poops of ships
 Into the country which they visit,
 The burning force which came to oppose thee
 Received their wounds from thy preying parties.

A queen whose weaving harness cannot be arranged
 By the great numbers who attend her ;
 The blood of her fingers on the web of silk,
 Which is set in proper order by the girls.

The end of it is not a prospect of peace for those
 Of the territories heated by fire ;
 Again shall be carried along the shore
 Your own preys with smouldering fires.

The prosperity of the race of Allan has quickly increased,
 It is necessary to state that they have been ennobled ;
 All those he left of them in his own country have been free,
 Not having been made hostages by any other forces.

The branches of trees are bent by the fruit,
 Although it is upwards the source of it goeth ;
 Man could not wish for better music from chords
 Than that of a narrow stream flowing through a shrubbery.

The rain of honey of the northern country
 Has caused its grass to bend ;
 Out of it, by flying, could not rise
 The birds by expanding their wings.

In the form of boughs usually are
 All the branches of the wood which increases in density ;
 Its united branches at the top are as jewels
 There are nuts on the natural hazel tree from the beginning.

A very straight wand of sound body
 Was the son of Allan who repelled every onset ;
 It is a proof of the usefulness of O' Erc of the cave,
 Tearing the plumes from the golden helm.

The knowledge of the disposition of a king's daughter
Is contemplated by the sparkling of her eyes ; [about her,
Thou mayest select a woman accordingly without enquiring
The blush of her cheeks discloses her love.

When a herd of cattle is secured, they are kept in confinement,
Just as soldiers are who do not observe justice ;
That enables a king to rule ;
Take the chord out of the chain of gold.

Women who were accustomed to livelihood
From exploits on the sea,
A woman who daily sets her house in order,
The maiden appearance has left her.

A host of brown heroes, to whom every science yielded,
Accompanied Donald wherever he marched ;
Why should the flush of his countenance cause
A rest from the shore, which he might do in the end ?

Until deeds-doing soldiers were satisfied with conflicts
He did not withdraw from his large forces ;
The hostages of enemies did not salute them ;
Golden wares are a wonder to a woman.

They were not balked in a nocturnal incursion,
Although it were dark and pouring sleet or snow,
The light equal that of the star is emitted by the horse-shoe ;
The horse-shoe requires not a better light.

Is not Donald full equal to rings of gold
Whose lips are generally ruby ?
The sword-blade is driven in at the pursuit,
And the golden hilt following it.

The enforcing of judgments under which they were ;
The dart of a person by which terror is disclosed ;
His finger goes into her side ;
It is a slender spear effective * in the battle. * of O'Enna ?

That is a web of straw by Anna for John,
Which is stitched near the sea-shore ;
A couple of charges while with an army,
It is a house of repose, a pay in his hand.

Brown shields by which the conflict is made close,
Through the descent from Colla is proper ;
Having been called from the northern countries
These descendants received their golden arms.

Invoke the mother of God to protect us
That he may send a host to the battle-field ;
Sufficient is the greatness of his miracles to us,
A new branch of the original parent seed.

The daughter of Angus, whose eye is like an icicle,
With slender hands that excelled all others in every coast ;
She put warmth along every strand,
By which kindred and every house talked of her.

Sufficient for her to have drunk enough
From the beast, rather than milk from the udder ;
Youthful hair of very great beauty,
A white firm set of teeth most evenly set.

The blood of Conn flows in her cheeks,
The waves are without storm like wine ;
It appertains to the clergy to relate stories,
One tree is her origin in the regal line.

She lives through the clergy without a particle of imperfection.
Having a tendency to the earth from which she sprang ;
She acquired no blemish from it,
A seal of the raspberry is on her fair cheek.

The same Cathal sang :¹

The grief for four hath confused me,
My eyes do not conceal my weeping,
Still the grief is more oppressive in my breast,
Which becomes more intense every day.

It is on account of four who have been taken away for ever,
And I every day lamenting them ;
The continued testimony of grief is torturing me,
My health in future will decline.

The loss of those good men is felt by their kindred,
Four who could not be taken prisoners in the battle ;
Since their bodies have been interred in the earth
It will be bad for us not to follow them.

They were the sons of princes who took the hold ;
From spring no payment is made to the people ;
Summer gave us no hand (i. e., relief) ;
We are sorrowful, we are pained for the clan.

Thou art badly off after
 The four that lie under the tombstone ;
 We have not incitement to battle, pledges or conflicts ;
 But we are only alive without gaining fame.

After the two Ranalds had departed from us,
 Without being sent to learn of a prophet,
 The death of Donald was melancholy at the time,
 We are equally grieved for John.

The four falcons of the land of Conn
 Are stretched under stones in the church ;
 The wood has not yielded so much fruit
 Since the death of the noble descendants of Fionn.

Four scions of the greenwood
 From Teamhair of the pure robes at the Boyne :
 The pure ones of Ile having gone to their graves
 The hosts of our country are in excessive sorrow.

The four lions of the territory of Brigia
 Who were supporters of the strangers at our schools ;
 Beautiful trees overshadowing in our close woods,
 A wood of trees in which the cattle were protected.

The water is frozen despite of our summer's sun,
 Through Ranald's death, which is a part of our misfortune ;
 Too manifest is every pleasure declining,
 The harp bewails the son of Allan.

Our heroes are never silent,
 Their grief is reducing their size ;
 The gem of our military weapons is under the sod,
 On account of Ranald Óg having died from amongst us.

No fruit is found in the wood,
 No produce is driven in by the wave ;
 On account of the son of Angus having departed from us,
 It has put dry blisters on every slender hand.

John, son of Allan, departed this life from us,
 A very ready hand who was powerful in the pursuit,
 And we followed him in every step,
 In close conflict, we are now in a demented state of sorrow.

No time was allowed to pass without making known
 The death to all persons as soon as they heard it,
 Our hosts conveyed it as a message,
 Around the grave they clapped their hands.

The generous men have departed from ourselves,
 The learned men receive no rewards after them,
 They brought the hospitality with them into the grave,
 The victory of battle, and the sway of the good sense of all.

Tears on their account come in floods,
 We are unwilling to compose their elegy,
 Very little obedience is yielded by the people after them ;
 Our beautiful wood in the earth in the church-yard.

After the sadness of the excited sorrow
 No one is called to the chase ;
 My tribute of grief attends me to beguile me,
 As if it were now I went to my trade.

A cluster of carbuncles of precious stones—
 Illiberality about gold they did not practise ;
 In every part of Scotland, alas !
 A pen-drop of my lamentation is not decreased.

Such sorrow as this which has taken root
 Should now be stated by us,
 A ship having met with a stumbling wave at Banba,
 That concerning the sons of Uisneach, wondrous, fair.

They were killed by Conchobar, the mild, the free,
 Through rude jealousy in drinking ;
 The sons of Uisneach, the powerful heirs presumptive,
 A story by which Banba acquired her sorrow.

Naosisi, Ainli, and Ardan the generous,
 Were slain in the thick of the battle ;
 That brought a great deal of pain and anguish
 Unto Ireland both east and west.

To-day throughout the Hebrides
 There is much of this lamentation of the plain of the Fians ;
 Every day in its full entirety increases
 Our deep melancholy by a degree.

Without the aid of chords in musical harps
 The grief which is in our country is expressed ;
 With deep sorrow the clergy remember
 In a degree exceeding that of the bond maid of Ireland

The death of the sons of Ranald is melancholy,
 On which account our opposition at the shore is feeble ;
 Like the moaning of a flood towards the strand
 Is our lamentation because they have all fled from us.

The balsam which brought healing over the land
 Oh ! that we had it, alas !
 From the bountiful wood in which the learned got it,
 That a drop might be in the mouth of every good man of them.

The Daghdha having fled to every quarter,
 Brought cures into all places along in his track :
 Unto us it was not so, without deception,
 To covet the art of fierce wounding hand.

The heroes of the Clam of Conn have departed,
 With severe grief we lament them in our breasts
 After them we cannot be longlived,
 It is dangerous for us to be separated from the party.

Their garments were not refused to the clergy,
 Their steeds or chains of gold ;
 Having abandoned their feathers they are under earth,
 To be after them is lasting sorrow.

They were lightly covered in the earth,
 Without an expectation of produce by the people ;
 In like manner the woods are unproductive at top,
 The fruit does not bend the united branches.

By their death the strand is not productive,
 The storm moans with grating tones ;
 There is little pleasure while drinking at
 The feast of sorrow which has happened in our country.

There is a sound of wailing in the mountain rivers,
 A voice of crying in the notes of birds,
 The net derives no profit from the pool,
 The storm has destroyed the corn and grass.

Dry weather is not known in our country,
 The grief is depriving me of my senses ;
 The lamentation of the schools has gone beyond concealment
 Since the clergy have assumed their mourning garments.

Our rivers are without profitable fishing,
 We are without hunting in the winding glens,
 There is little produce in all the land,
 The wave has stripped it bare to the bases of the bays.

The waves never cease roaring on the shore,
 Every sea is without driving its produce on its strand ;
 When taking wine at the time of drinking,
 The warriors grieve more than the women.

The cold of the Invers is enough to wound us,
 The gray birds have no opportunity of feeding ;
 Every river is fordable being full of ice-flags,
 The trout does not attempt to swim on account of the frost.

The wolves are truly ill-disposed,
 The notes of the cuckoo are not heard,
 The wind has assumed a maddened force,
 The rivers run over the heath carrying away the banks.

On account of the Clann Ranald having departed from us
 We cannot pursue our studies ;
 It is time for the Ollamh (doctor) to go after them,
 Making presents will be discontinued.

The end of our converse is away from us under the soil.
 Our organs and our echoing sounds ;
 A party who freely bestowed jewels,
 They were a flock that sprang from one seed.

From us departed unto God
 Our pillars of valour in the fight,
 They were always good men as you know,
 Their fame liveth for ever.

May the grace of the father from the abode beyond
 Convey me over to heaven,
 He is a personage difficult of access,
 The will of the Lord is best to guide me.
 The grief for four, &c.

Cathal M^c Vurich cecinit (sang):¹

It is right to welcome a man of thy news,
 O man with whom it has come from the shore ;
 I have news privately from him
 Over which my pride should excell all.

Sweeter than music of harps thy tale,
 Young man without wound, without blemish ;
 Thou art like organs when we are over wine,
 If true be the statement of thy lips.

It is most agreeable to me during my life to hear
 That news with which you have come ;
 Justice has more abounded every day with me,
 Powerful is my strength to-day.

I delight in thy coming, in my condition,
 To listen to thy words attentively ;
 From thy story of peace I do not dissent,
 Through it I sleep rightly to-night.

Thou has brought with thee thy recent news,
 Young man of the most skilful countenance ;
 A seal by which my breast is confirmed,
 News from the personage by which I have been gladdened.

Donald, son of John, the defender of the trenches,
 Is the secret of the excellent news which you have,
 The safe arrival of the hero over the sea,
 Love to tell it is due from me.

His safe arrival armed and young
 Is a cause of increase to my pleasure ;
 A scion of the united house, a tree that does not bend,
 I will take delight in him unto my death.

To visit him I go at once
 By the rule if I follow custom ;
 I am in haste to his society without restraint,
 His beauty will bloom in accordance with my expectation.

I behold him opening his eyes,
 The personage by whom my substance was bestowed ;
 I recognise him at a distance beyond the sea,
 His countenance flushed with blood like wine.

Why should I not know his ringleted hair
 Corresponding with my expectation as I judged ?
 The deeply beloved of the daughters of the queens of Ror,
 With round hands and beautiful brown nails.

I will know the words of his mouth,
 And his teeth like pearls in brightness,
 Which are not disclosed uncivilly to us,
 And the cheerful eye of mild lustre.

I know, though a gun-shot from me,
 His eyebrow neat, shapely, narrow ;
 A free young man with whom it is difficult to contend,
 And his smooth side like the floating of lime.

I would know the steps of his feet
 While leaping nimbly over the fence ;
 The heart of him of the victorious bands has taken away
 The lock of my mind from me secretly

O Donald, thou art my great courage,
 My supporter in combat when at my back ;
 My jewel in whom I take delight,
 Thou art my full star and my new apple.

My victorious tree who art esteemed,
 My own heart is that elegant man with curled hair ;
 The son of a prince from whom knowledge was not concealed,
 My battle belt is that intrepid fair drop.

Our water fountain that never runs dry,
 Our arms of war to subdue,
 The cause of our mirth, our freedom of joy,
 The precious ale which is drunk out of gold [goblets].

He is my sword and my rare slender spear,
 My choice of the Gael and the Gall ;
 He has in keeping a good disposition towards me,
 And the desire of my eyes is to see him there.

By hereditary descent we have been with his people,
 We have done our best endeavours through hope ;
 I deny not that my strength is from thine ancestry,
 Through thee I obtain right and justice.

It is right to welcome a man of thy news.

Elegy on Donald of Moydart, who died 1686.¹

There is an end to the pleasures of the Isles,
 The death of one man causes a burning bare ;
 It is, however, but the beginning of sorrow,
 Causing melancholy throughout the bounds.

Since the death of the champion of the blood of Conn
 There is no heart without a sore wound,
 Without honour from others for the clan,
 Easy ever to accept their pledge.

The son of John of Moydart, the great, the active :
 The shortness of his life is my bitter pain :
 Sad is my condition after the man,
 'Tis that has consumed my flesh and blood.

I have not seen one like him
 In affability, in purity of nature,

In hospitality, in practical goodness—
The favourite of our king is, alas! in the earth.

He was a fosterer and patron of our schools,
Our grievous loss, O God, is his departure,
His life commended my esteem,
There is but the usual casualty in our death.

A lion in the fierceness of his exploits,
But he would approach to nothing base ;
He was a leading man in making for peace—
My beloved was the protection of strangers and friends.¹

There is a wound in my breast lamenting him,
A pilgrim am I and a man without substance ;
I am mad whatever I am,
O God, it is about my chief and king.

Active was his mind on the field of battle,
A leader of an army who refused not an encounter ;
A hand not feeble in the hard conflict,
Was Donald, the victorious, the fair-handed.

At the friendly request of his king,
He carried arms from the time he could wield them ;
He was an encounterer of the fury of the battle,
A hero was my staunch and free-born darling.

A most active scion was he in every battle,
A most liberal bestower on the poor ;
He was the heart of true affection—
He is now laid low, the beloved of the learned.

King-fish of his race, the rapid salmon,
And the last of the princes of Ross,
He was the prosperity of this western land of grey swords,
I pledge myself about him, long since I heard it.

Since his body has been put in the grave,
My stay in this wan world is miserable ;
For I cannot, though his praise is my duty,
Find the chief of the people to whom to make my song.

Many a man in fair Uist
And woman, too, are in madness of grief ;
On account of the chief that is hid in earth,
The shield of warriors who fled not pursuit.

Donald did not prevent me to visit him—
 I never boasted like a slave—
 In the gap of danger he was not feeble,
 Such was my bright sun, who spared not wealth.

Elegy on Allan of Clanranald, slain at Sheriffmuir
 1715.¹

There has fallen a pillar of the race of Com ;
 'Tis a misfortune to the good blood of (Clan) Donald,
 Their men are confused with anguish,
 Which has completely broken the warriors of the Gael.

The light of Clan Colla has been lowered,
 Which watched the course of their exploits ;
 'Tis a cause of melancholy to the people,
 The death of the heir of the lords of Clanranald.

The race of Com are in heart consumption
 For the loss of the courteous presence of one man ;
 There are heroes in sorrow in the towns of Brigia²
 For the glory of the valour of the Gael.

'Tis a loss to the nobles of Ben-Brigia
 And death to the valour of the Gael—
 This death-blow to the descendant of Com in the fight ;
 Terrible it is to us and a burning bare.

The death of Allan in the battle he gained
 Was a slaughter on the men of Uist ;
 Through thinking on the pains of his wounds
 There is not the strength of a woman in our warriors.

Our Mainland does not treat of its interest
 On account of the leader of the army of the race of Fergus ;
 Every one is in pain lamenting him,
 And the call of every woman is confused.

From the Mull of Kintyre to Orkney there is not
 A man that is not deprived of power from his pain ;
 Every fair one enquired after has become gray
 Solely on account of the Lord of Uist.

The fall of our chief in the battle
 Has deprived the Gael of bravery ;
 Victory was gained for a time by the other army
 On account of his being dead in the field.

'Tis an impediment to the nobles of Scotland
The death of Macdonald, the goodly and brave ;
To the ratification of peace or a cause of war
Was the only leisure time they obtained.

To his own blood it is a matter of pride
To have his heroic deeds spoken of ;
Their heroes refused not kindness to the poor,
They were like wells of comfort and humbleness.

Their wisdom went behind [i.e., is lost],
On them fortune has turned her back ;
Pure armed heroes of the Clann Colla,
Unlively is the wail of their lament.

The mountains are issuing one by one
Snow, wind, and frozen sleet ;
And warmth shall not be in our land henceforth
On account of the death of Allan, the ever honest.

The wind blows fiercely, noisily, steeply,
And the sea responds to it very briskly,
The loud roaring of the waves falling,
And pools are flooded at dry towns.

Since the death of the heir of the sunny land,
Memorable has been our condition in the bad year ;
For in it there was no fruit in woods,
But the trees bare up to the very tops.

The salmon were in the pools lying,
In the centre of the frozen flags of ice ;
The well-sown seed [grass?] of every land without growing,
And birds did not bring forth young through dismay.

Since our chief has gone to his grave, there exists
Highway violence, the opposition to every good act :
And from the fruits of the bountiful land
Little has been obtained on account of his departure.

By the death of the mild Cormac, son of Art,
Ireland was without consolation,
Constantly lamenting him throughout the territories,
And there was deep anguish throughout Ireland.

Flathri, son of Fitheall, put on record
The dispositions and good acts
Of the grandson of Conn after his death,
As he obtained a share of his Royal Bounty.

By us are due the lawful debts,
 Consequent on the death of the Clanrald chief :
 We abandon music, we sleep not aright,
 And the wound in our heart cannot be comforted.

More lamentable than the departure of their fathers
 Is the death of the last heirs ;
 Hearing the purport of the ancient verses
 Hath set the recollections of my heart astray.

The desire of Cormac of the house of Tara
 Possessed the descendant of John of good mind :
 He is remembered with great pleasure
 Exchanging jewels of singular price.

Some of the wishes of the son of Moire were,
 When nobles assembled,
 That they be well worded, modest, peaceful,
 Agreeable, quiet, and well-ordered.

Another desire that should neither be concealed,
 Was to be at the head of a glorious host,
 To satisfy every chief's mind,
 And his followers to have plenty battles.

Playing music and inditing poems,
 Practising the order of every art,
 The attentive study of the military books of heroes,
 And dogs fully effective for deer.

To us our time is not cheerful,
 Mournful is our eyes continually weeping :
 The death of Conn's descendant of the golden armour
 Hath separated from us our ruler.

Every one is in the pangs of death
 Since the chief of our protection departed ;
 Our beloved, the condition he is in,
 And our slain in Inverpephry.

Many an act of danger and ingenuity,
 Of hospitality, nobility, and excellency,
 Are entombed in his resting-place,
 Our sure ark of the united party.

Since the garment closed round the body of O' Conn,
 Our power has fallen without hope of recovery ;
 The deep sorrow of the Gael of the deeds of valour,
 The like is not related for any one man.

The deeds of Felim's son (Conn), the great, the active,
 We have heard the account as it is written ;
 If true, they correctly resemble
 The victorious deeds of our good chieftain.

At the end of ten years, it is said,
 The noble son of Felim marched
 To fight against Caithar Mor,
 Without using treachery or dissimulation.

Caithar was defeated by Conn
 At Magh h-Aga of the heavy wounds,
 In which the Leinster men of Buighe fell
 Through the evil obstinacy of fighting.

The son of Felim Rectmor gained
 Victory in every battle by hard fighting,
 From the first year of his life
 Through the greatness of his ruling and regal prosperity.

In the reign of Conn, as I have heard,
 Ireland of the fair-green land yielded
 Full hundred fold produce of its fruits,
 Which got him praise for good effects and mercy.

The sons of Milé united
 In the race of Conn fighting with sharp blades ;
 The Clann Colla were in the action with valour,
 And our choice of them was the last.

The heir of the race of pure streams,
 Who commanded his clan for a time ;
 Justice was administered by law,
 And sensible champions controlling it.

Our Conn without any mistake of fortune was he,
 Our calm chief of peace,
 And our nobility of race in bravery,
 And the ancient organiser of the free clans.

The sons of Milé themselves and they not living,
 The race of Conn and Colla are equally lost,
 The Clann Donald following after them,
 Our sorrow being for the royal blood of Ranald.

The race of the Gael of valourous deeds
 Have set our senses into confusion ;
 They are away from us in strange countries
 Without a prospect of seeking their native land.

Such of our princes as have not departed from us
 Have long since become exiles,
 Without an expectation of possessions in Scotland,
 Or to assume their paternal name.

The scarcity of professors among the race of Conn
 Has awakened the want of our instruction
 Throughout the expanse of the world
 And over the blue land of the Gael.

We have been without the pleasures of music or games,
 Without any opportunity of learning instruction,
 On account of the strife in our beautiful country,
 And without treating of the tribes of warriors.

The want of one man above all others
 Has lost to us the knowledge of enquiry ;
 For ever without the language of books
 In the usual Gaelic literature.

From contemplating on the elegy
 Of the sole protector of the men of arts,
 The flow of my eyes bedims my sight ;
 So our grief is insufferable.

Every man with anguish in his heart,
 And there is no tribe of the choice princely line
 Living together since his body was interred
 And the last of the Fiamh are without consolation.

The day of judgment is coming as it has been deserved,
 No one has received a foreknowledge when it will,
 That people may receive their judgment variously,
 May want of severity characterise it for the clans of Scotland.

Death has extinguished our gladness,
 Since the day our lord departed,
 When he engaged in the adverse encounter,
 Which is our grievous, unhealing wound.

He is the death wound of the pure Gael,
 To his vindictive foes it is gladness ;
 The time of incitement to victory for our enemies
 Has commenced the presage of our want of joy.

The men of the Gaels from wave to wave [from shore to shore],
 Since the death of the Captain of Clanranald,
 Have no shepherd as a protection to them
 Since their only defending chief departed.

The valorous Pride of the Clann Colla
Is in a coffin at Inverpeffery,
The cause of our free gifts and our lucky journeys
Is laid to rest at the doors of Drummond.

Seventeen hundred years exactly,
And fifteen years directly close,
From the birth of God to the death of Allan,
Whoever should enquire.

Our importuning of the Chief over heaven,
Grant, O Mary, O Son, our request,
That he be in heaven of the angelic orders,
If it be the will of our Lord.

To the abode of the pure angels
Is the journey for his soul ;
It is not right to be sorrowful after him,
It is sufficient to remember our first redemption.

Such as have remained with us of his princely blood,
May the king of the elements well direct them,
And bring them to obtain their property by right.
And defend them against the power of the enemy.

Young Ranald, our country's chief,
May he come with a right royal intention,
To the patrimonial possessions of the ancients
To awaken the spirit of the warriors.

The King who redeemed all people—
We implore Him to send prosperity in our time,
And to send [Ranald] to our presence over the wave,
Since the nobility of our wishes has fallen.

It was at that time came the warriors, the wise, glorious fighting, chose worded, well counselled, noble, highly noble, active of deeds, high spirited, gold armoured Fingalians (men of the Hebrides), namely, the badged, luckful, silk-standarded, active, fiercely lively Macleans ; and the soldierly, spirited, brave

And they were in well-arranged battalions, namely, the proud, luminous countenanced, finely hued, bold, right judging, goodly gifting Clan Donald : the ready, prosperous, routing, very bold, right judging Clanrald ; the attacking, gold shielded Clan Alistair ; the protecting, firm, hardy, well enduring Macphees ; the fierce, strong men, the Macclachlans ; the lively, vigorous, liberally bestowing, courageous, austere, brown shielded Macdongalls ; the cheerful, chief renowned, battle harnessed Camerons ; the inimical, passionate, hardy Macneils ; the manly, sanguinary, truly noble Mackinnons ; the fierce, undaunted, great feated Macquarries ; the brave, defending, foraging, valiant, heroic, ale abounding Mackenzies ; the active, spirited, courteous, great bestowing Clan Morgan (or Mackay) and the men of Sutherland came as a guard to the Royal Prince ; and the powerful, lively active, great numbered, arrogant Mackintoshes, in a very large, powerful force around the chief of Clan Chattan, in active, hardy battalions with their champions. There came along with these warriors earls, princely high chiefs, knights, chiefs, lords, barons, and yeomen, at one particular place, to the noble son of Alexander ; and these numerous rejoicing heroes, and powerful, active, fierce sounding hosts gathered together. This is the manner in which they appointed the powerful, fierce, active, mighty deeded, white armoured, supreme King of the Gael, viz., the terror striking, leopard like, awful, sanguinary, opposing, sharp armed, fierce, attacking, ready, dexterous, powerful, steady, illustrious, full subduing, furious, well prepared, right judging earl, as he received on him the armour of conflict and strife against every tumult, that is, his fine tunic, beautifully embroidered, of fine textured satin, ingeniously woven by ladies and their daughters ; and that good tunic was put on him.

A silk jerkin which was handsome, well fitting, rich, highly embroidered, beautiful, many coloured, artfully done, gusseted, corded, ornamented with the figures of foreign birds, with branches of burnished gold, with a multiplicity of all kinds of embroidery on the sides of the costly jerkin. That jerkin was put on him to guard him against dangers.

the lithe Luga of Long Arms. John received a similar one in the name of the One Father to protect him in battles against the armies of his enemies. And there was put over that battle mail-coat an encircling belt, which was battle victorious, brilliant with blue stones, powerful, showy, branchy, artificial, ridgy, hard, with good clasps made of bronze, with figures of flying birds on its borders. An artist exercised his best skill in making that excellent girdle. And there was put over that an angular cape, gold bordered, even, with blue stones, of fine material, pointed, precious, buckled, close-fine, attractive, delectable, gold bordered, corded, ornamental, that the eye in continually looking at it would be melted by the brilliancy of the powerful cape.

And there was given to the powerful warrior, at the time of the meeting, a helmet of security, which was prosperous, crested, victorious, life preserving, whitish blue, excellent, awe striking, elegantly bordered, branch stoned; a star of prosperity in conflicts was that diadem ornamented with blue stones, never subdued in battles; fury seizes the armies on beholding that precious helmet.

And there was on the noble side of that powerful man a sword which was sharp, serviceable, long, very hard, sound, straight, of smooth surface, long bladed and of equal power throughout its full length. Mac-an-Luin was the like of it, which Fionn the Fenian Chief had; or the sword of the victorious Osgur, in the celebrated battle of Ventry; or such another blade as Cuchulinn of the Red Branch had, the son of the peaceful Sualtam; or the fine slaughtering sword of the battle victorious Connal Cernach, by which was effected the Red Raid. And although celebrated were their names, John happened to have better than any of them.

And he put on his fair hands his full military gloves that they should be a protection to the palms of his hands against the impression of the white ivory hilt made by the force of many blows in striking the powerful warriors.

And he received an axe which was blue-sided, thin, light, sharp-edged, substantial, of true steel remelted (tempered), which had been possessed by a manly giant, namely, the Baron of the Piaid, with the terrible blows of which by the hero the powerful men were defeated. In the time of the rebellion this battle axe was in the possession of his lord, i.e., Macdonald, to whom it had been presented.

On concluding their Council, settling their controversies, rising of their champions, removing their difficulties, they unanimously united with the noble son of Alexander, the heroic King of Fingall, in turning their faces against foreigners, in parties, in numerous companies, in troops, in crowds, in multitudes, in great armies, in battalions, in lines, in ranks, in kerns, in chasing parties, in defeating battalions; and there did not appear any forces equal to them from fortresses, strongholds, retreats, sequestered places, courts, cities, markets, or great towns, until the potent king obtained all the obedience granted to him; and it was to certify this that the poet sang these words:--

True is my praise of Macdonald,
 A champion with whom I unite;
 The hero of every conflict, the lion's heart,
 A hand that fails not, pride of the Gael;
 The champion of Ulster, the controller of Assemblies,
 The eye for causing the stopping of war.
 The sun of the Gael, the countenance of O'Colla;
 By the banks of Bann, quick sailing are his ships;
 A furious hound that checks plunders [Fodhla, Ireland?],
 A modest soul, the tree of Banba,
 The country with fire brands is red after him;
 His family ancestor came to Tara,
 Putting Meath in commotion, the leopard of Isla;
 Root of hospitality, powerful in every land;
 He refused no man, nor importunate bard;
 The bountiful branch of hospitality, of the land of Oileach,
 There did not spring from him but queens and kings,
 True are the statements.

True is my praise.

The Elegy for Sir Norman Macleod, which Niall Mac Murnigh made.

The pleasures of Innsigall have ceased,
 A deep felt sorrow has taken their place,
 There is anguish and affliction without concealment,
 For the awful loss of the noble.

The tribe of Leod of the highest spirit,
 The royal race of Scotland are in deep sadness;
 The greatest sorrow afflicts them
 Exceeding that of any other host of the Scotch.

The hospitality throughout Innsigall
Is not so bountifully nursed,
Yes, without the nourishing drink of metheglin ;
Dispirit rules the glory of the Gael.

As a man with wounds in his troubles,
Full of anxiety and extreme oppression,
The hospitality finds no place of rest
In the delightful blue land of the Gael.

As a foster son is after his foster father
Full of sadness and tribulation ;
The best of the good protecting men having departed,
No wonder this anguish should arise.

Sir Norman, who is now at the will of the worm,
Calmed the lamenting to pleasing looks :
And after all that, he is away from all parties,
His repute from him without shepherd.

The sway of the tribe of Leod is lessened,
Without a chief forthcoming of equal power :
The tribe of herds are in lasting sorrow,
Their hereditary sway is altered.

Their rulers are of short duration over them
Compared with other tribes of the Scots ;
To them it is dangerous, be they ever so guarded,
That he is not long lived among them.

Death gains a defeat by prostrating all on their backs,
Without war, without fighting a battle,
Everlastingly against all tribes that have lived,
Of the best and most powerful races.

There is but a remnant of a noble clan
By a loss sustained by the parties ;
Without disparagement to the Gael or Gall,
He was their chief champion, but he does not live.

In heaven there is no cause of jealousy,
Heaven draws their fortunes ;
The praise is conferred on the church,
The hour of their destiny has passed.

Heroes that failed not to gain the victory,
They passed their time in pleasures ;
Select princes of extensive lands
Are in a fervour of grief in one hour.

Too much has gone of their rightful share,
 The choice of the stock of Fionnlochlann ;
 Long shall he be piously in the remembrance of all,
 The extreme of all affliction is the loss.

Dearly beloved of the noble mind,
 On the death of the chief from the advantage of power,
 The truly grand clan of men selected him
 On account of his great military spirit

Every happiness came into the country
 Until the death of the Royal son of Rory ;
 On it has come the grievances,
 Every misfortune since you interred him.

Their excessive grief is no wonder for them,
 To the nobles of Fionngall it is death ;
 The pure-armed land on which no rout pressed
 On account of the chief mustering its forces.

Mournful they go from it after him
 His royal troops, his trusty forces ;
 The land of division walls of the best profit,
 Deep sorrow replaces her pleasures.

Every great engagement in slaughtering or fighting
 The clan of King Leod had their full share in them ;
 The end of the first hospitaller of each clan,
 Lamentable is the end of his justness.

The weeping at Babilon in bondage,
 It would appear to you it came into this country,
 By the greatness of the downfall of power
 Through the death of the defender of this territory.

Joy was in the affliction of sorrow,
 On account of its delightfulness being changed,
 Without an expedition it was plundered,
 The territory of the Isles is in a similar condition.

Our sorrowful case of anguish is similar
 To that which occurred after Conn and Conaire ;
 There was daily excessive grief among the learned,
 I believe that ours is an exact type of it.

A sadness which has not ebbed after him
 Is that for the son of Macleod, a cause of true sorrow ;
 On everyone therefore there is a gloom,
 On account of the decease of the chief of our protection

Long will be remembered by the Clan Leod
 The death of the warrior of the blood of King Leod ;
 They are preparing for heartfelt grief,
 Being full of excessive sadness and sorrow.

A death of the deepest anguish it is
 To his friends and his followers ;
 Over his grave as they perform a neachd
 They have their turn at the tomb which we cannot get.

As I used to receive from him, while along with him,
 As much pleasure as I desired ;
 Alas that I obtained so much friendship,
 Since he died in the hour of my praying.

The women of every country are in sadness,
 Also their heroes and ecclesiastics ;
 Their faithful freemen are in grief,
 The extremity of severe affliction is among them.

The hospitality, the pure generosity,
 The joyous exclamation, the ready welcome,
 They have all gone with him into the earth,
 For an age after him there will be but lamentation.

The anguish of the blood of Donald of the Isles
 Was unceasingly for a long time ;
 The loss of the branch of the tribe
 Was lamentation and skin-wound to the stock.

The Clan Maclean in mourning clothes,
 A degree which did not exalt their honour,
 Their sorrow is greater than any other affliction,
 Therefore they have on them their mourning

The elegies of Connor and of Conn,
 Of the grandson of Magnus of the house of Mau
 Long are they in the memory of all,
 The loss will be recorded in every leaf.

The Clan Leod are mournful after him,
 The hosts of the Scottish Isles are Without liveliness of heart for the loss that has been willed ;
 Sorrow has gained a sway over them.

They are in a state of expectation,
 The princes of the Macleods of the ships,
 Always under a load of sorrow,
 Good are their warriors at the time of mustering.

¹ Before this verse, at the top of the page, is a verse in Niall M^c Vurich's writing, much older, and on a different subject. It runs thus: -

A mbaile na ríogh romhuíñ inis so da seanchuidhib in short re labra líne
 n^o danbna a front firíne

¹ The salmon of the high stream of the Barrow,
And the Orkney Islands rising up simultaneously ;
Great softness of the heart which yielded sadness
Amongst the heroes of Norseland.

The learned were found in obscurity,
Their protector lives not ;
They overstepped the rest,
When they were grieved and sad.

He was the chief protector of the learned men of Scotland,
He was the knowledge of the order of sciences,
His death has confirmed their difficulties,
The literati are like trees without relief.

He was the lamp of true history,
Or a person in its nearest type ;
Why, O God, should it not be a grievance to us
That the earth is over his body, and I believe.

We are in want of gold and cattle,
Since the chief of Rushgarry died ;
The learned men since the hour of his death
Have forsaken their havens of watching.

Flaming troubles pervaded the stars of heaven,
They poured forth showers of lightning ;
The hills are not illumined by day,
Their grief for him mastered them.

The rivers are rising over the woods,
There is a scarcity of fish in the bays ;
The fruitage is not found in the land,
The roaring of the sea is very coarse.

At the last hours of his death
Dreadful tokens appeared to us ;
Foreboding clouds which denoted grief
Were of gold colour in the northern region.

¹ Here at the top of page 249—written in a different hand and much older than this elegy—are inserted these four lines, which have no connection with the rest :—

Tell this to its historians—
In short—to speak to us :

 Except the coffin in the earth in which he lies
 There was no column raised for his monument.

The death of a prince of a mighty tribe
 Is a want of honour to the learned professors ;
 Woe to the poet who received attention,
 His heart is gone without recovery.

Ours is greater than the lamentation for cities,
 Above the grief for the daughters of supreme kings,
 Or the death of a beloved spouse,
 You may judge the severity of our affliction.

Seventeen hundred and two to be reckoned,
 And three years the age of the supreme king,
 A gold wand the purest to be seen,
 To the death of the excellent son of Rory.

Were you to estimate the greatness of the anguish,
 The vastness of the sorrow would suffice,
 Among all persons, although lesser day by day,
 The grief for him the time he died.

The pleasures of Innsigall have ceased.

[Omitted].

Without a remembrance of the time of our prosperity,
 Bountiful was he in paying for poems ;
 The cause of our sorrow I behold in the love—
 The pure glory going to death.

Elegy on James Macdonald.¹

The grief for James is wounding heroes,
 As they shall ever be without him ;
 The floods of tears are flowing pitifully
 They are always speaking of him with anguish.

He was the child of the heroes, a pure handsome figure,
 Sad is the deed that he has been cut off,
 The son of the King of Cratuidh is in a girdle [i.e., coffin].
 Early for him to hear the eli [? call].

¹ Mackintosh says this is Sir James Macdonald of Sleat. He, however, died in 1723 ; while our James Macdonald here died in 1738. Possibly it is James Macdonald, the tanist of Benbecula and Clanranald, the half brother of Donald of Benbecula, who succeeded to the Clanranald chiefship in 1725, on the death of Ranald, brother of Allan of 1715.

He was a scholar without want of letters,
 From whom we received an impulse by emulating him ;
 He was well spoken and free from error,
 And his look mollient which was bountiful to me.

Far away he travelled to find his knowledge,
 He was a pupil of the scrutinizers of schools ;
 He proceeded from Scotland eastward by sea,
 His own free will urging him on to it.

He gained renown in every College,
 As it was easy with him to acquire knowledge,
 Wisdom and intellect were side by side,
 Although not one they were united in him.

France of feasts bears testimony
 To every language paid for you,
 Every thing beautiful found in the schools
 Was polished by you with true godliness.

A religious man who was much respected,
 A royal foster child, which was not too great for him ;
 They conferred the title of Tanaisde on him,
 And a mastership was applied to him.

Although it has been a great loss to us
 Since his death will be the breaking up of a clan,
 It is a want of understanding that leaves me as I am,
 A loss to them the greatness of which cannot be estimated.

Coming as on a free visit from the east by sea,
 With pleasure produced by the elegance of the man,
 Maintaining his reputation from school,
 And the love of the will being his reward.

To return back is impossible for us,
 And it is not clear where information may be got ;
 A damp mist fell on him of the ringleted hair,
 It is a woeful death to his kindred to hear it.

The gentle scion that would not break his word,
 And the free son that was not sparing of rich presents ;
 Far distant from the grave was his fame although but young,
 Hosts are on every road to hear if he died.

You may gather from the wood that has produced no nuts,
 You may pluck with your hand an apple if it has grown ;
 And there is not a dense tree over our heads
 Or an herb that has not become bare through their decay.

To be recounting, though loth I am,
 And there is not half to recount ;
 Short was the life of the valiant descendant of Colla and Conn,
 The pure protector is now a want to us.

The descendant of Ruald has followed them,
 He has been put to dwell in the earth ;
 It has penetrated my heart with anguish
 And my eyes are full of tears and without sleep.

One comparing with him in magnanimity and esteem
 Gained nothing by it but debasement ;
 He retired from the contest without protest—
 For by descent he could be reputed elegant.

Often he paid our tithes
 Until he lay under a flag in the grave ;
 This has sent our blood [or grievances] to the bone
 Because of our goodwill to them and their faces from us.

Macdonald loved not his praises ;
 On his going to be under earth,
 Every one was seized with dread
 When the King of Heaven visited him.

The anguish of lamenting him was all over the lands,
 Which was not less than that expressed in my verses ;
 He had the advantage of being a Gael with clear brown hair,
 Pure was his skin from the sole to the head.

A man of sufficient clemency with honor,
 According to the disposition of the tribe of which he was ;
 He attached himself affectionately to his kindred people
 By which he gained the good will of every man.

A man who displayed superior knowledge in every cause,
 In every good science his acquirement was perfect ;
 The King of Grace granted him his reward,
 And he obtained a deserving life through death.

In St Mary's Churchyard they buried his coffin,
 The fair bold piece is lying there ;
 His pillow is earth under a flag,
 And the frost encloses him all round.

As every man must prepare to go,
 According to the rule of the King from whom we are sprung ;
 Let us submit to the fate as is customary,
 Since near unto us is death that carries us away.

Let our will be controlled by the law of God,
 For by Him all have been cleansed ;
 The person who had been with us had, however, a termination,
 And he has been lamented by all.

When we shall see the Resurrection of the Lamb,
 He and we shall be together ;
 Then to be judged by the Eternal Judge,
 And we shall be called on the right side after him.

Seventeen hundred years exactly,
 And six fives to be reckoned along with eight
 By you since the time that Mary obtained a son,
 When James died from us to be deplored.

Every one shall uncover his face there,
 Consider how we shall all be gathered together,
 At an assembly where no secret can be concealed ;
 Under the judgment of the Lord through whom we have been kept.

The grief.

Sept. the 8th, 1727.

Exile of Ranald.

There are two affairs that are wasting our minds,
 To be thinking of them makes us miserable ;
 Their grip has reduced our affability by a degree,
 And our pleasures have retired back from us by a leap.

Love of justice and fear of injustice,
 At every time in our remembrance estimating them :
 Without being known which of them gains the sway
 Except when God gives a helping hand.

The nobles of the lands of the country of Scotland
 Are deprived of their place without justice ;
 Is it not a wonder while their will is to return,
 That they receive not their desire with respect ?

The right of the crown is with another,
 And the King of Britain has lost his rights ;
 That has awakened every man to his loss,
 And the Gael are not at ease from the contest.

Their relief is not to be obtained in Ulster,
 Although their people were beloved in Magh Fail :
 Since the parties have been taken,
 Leaving the King of England over sea.

There is news coming with a mustered force,
 Every day arousing amongst us ;
 On account of us being without them, except as a loan,
 The kingdom is not at ease by it.

To us it is more rueful than to all others,
 To the race of Colla of the warlike deeds (steeds ?)
 They are out of their inheritance and rank,
 The people that gave payment to the poets.

The royal blood of Ranald is the chief guardian,
 They are without the possessions of the blood of Conn ;
 The want of thy government lowered my pride,
 Thy arrival was the signal for our loyalty.

The grandson of John not being in his ancestral inheritance,
 Our minds have decayed contemplating it ;
 Nuts from a wood that bears no fruit,
 From a wood by which our hopes have been blasted.

Let us give a call with a fervence of will,
 To the Heir of Mary, the Son of God,
 Should they be in danger of sustaining a loss,
 Since He is the Head of our nobility.

May he come free to the rights of his kindred,
 To maintain the possessions of the ancient (house) ;
 Our chieftain calm and our prince hospitable,
 The guide of our nobles who would pay the troops.

As Ranald is the king of our choice,
 I implore Christ to send him to protect us,
 That he may come to pay us our will,
 In the right of the princes ever before him.

May the chief of our instruction come unto us,
 Who is descended from the blood of Conn and Colla Uais,
 In the government of the royal tribe of Ranald,
 His protecting clan by whom I have lived without danger

If it should be pleasing to the King of all Kings,
 To bring him to the inheritance of the blood of Conn ;
 He would not refuse the most hazardous meeting,
 He would bring us safe into security.

Praise be unto Him who created the world
 That the scion of our government should be freed by Him :
 As He divided the sea before Moses,
 And subdued the flood of every oppression.

O, son of Donald, thou blood of my heart,
 Implore often the Son of God
 For everything that is wanting to thee,
 And he will readily grant it.

Look continually on the path of Jesus,
 Since a Son came down to the Virgin Mary,
 Who took upon Him a crown to redeem us,
 Receive honor as a burden to thee.

From a man descended the heir of our fathers
 To pay the tributes which fell heavy [upon us];
 How his mother was praising him
 While proceeding on the hollow earth [i.e., earth below].

Since Mary's Son became incarnate,
 Until he was crucified on the tree ;
 Let us implore the chief of the shoulder cross,
 The joyous plant of all pride.

Go thou onward in the track of the child,
 Son of Donald of the pleasing figure ;
 Although you may not find this world agreeable,
 Accept the invitation by which you shall be saved.

As you may not find but sorrow and trouble,
 In submitting to the will of glorious heaven ;
 Believe that the sunshine of this world is short,
 More delightful is the beauty of the everlasting life.

Submit to the Father of all,
 The King from whom we shall receive the greatest goodness ;
 The tribute which is not neglected in demanding it,
 Is the tribute of your mind to be paid to Him.

Two causes.

 It was not a fallacious entertainment I received ;

 There was a large wine-hall and a numerous host.

¹ Immediately after the above poem there appears, on page 275, the English poem on Bishop Burnet, who died in 1715. The Whig bishop was detested by the Jacobites. We give the satire as it stands. The Robert referred to is doubtless Sir Robert Walpole. The poem is as follows:

The Divills was brawling when Burnet Descended Transported with joy they left of contending

The attendants of the house were on every side,
 It was a cheerful great clan ;
 As quietness was better for the prince's comfort
 The party of the tribe took their drink in retirement.

The merriment of the harp and of the full bowls,
 With which hatred and treachery are not usually accompanied ;
 The laughter of the fair-haired youngsters,
 We had inebriating ale and a blazing fire.

A prince from whom a good disposition is required,
 He keeps the fellowship of all ecclesiastics ;
 In his regal court drinking is not a dream,
 To his numerous company he is plentiful and hospitable.

We were twenty times drunk every day
 To which we had no more objection than he had :
 Our food * was in abundance which consisted of * [mead ?]
 Four, three, seven along with six of varieties.
 Six nights.

Welcome to Allan of Clanranald.

Hail to our Allan ! king of the Clanranald !
 I see how learned, beauteous, blue-bladed he is ;
 Neither he nor his high-stepping, wide-wandering Fingalians would shirk
 The close-fought fight. I will put in order verse right famous
 And glorious, without flaw, in honour of the Dragon of Clan Donald.

Not better as leader of men was the Chief Osgar,
 Whether for spirit or bravery for each pressure that arises,
 Or for close shield-conflict in the heat of battle ;
 On sea he is good at inciting ; at a ford, for rousing.
 On the breast of the sea on a stormy evening he can Well watch the rage of the rolling waters, taking them Side-ways. Though shipping heavy seas, he gets,
 Despite the mounting waves, to land scatheless.

Niall, the son of Donald M^c Vurich, sang.

Old Belzebub ran the archbishop apostate did greet. wt. a fa la la

¹ This name is lost in the genealogy of the Book of Clanranald.

² Milé of Spain was married to Scota, daughter of Pharaoh Nectonibus, who bore him six sons, inter alios, the famous three, Ir, Eber Finn, and Eremón. The sons of Milé "took" Ireland in 1700 B.C. from the Tuatha-Dé-Danann, or the God-race of Dana.

The pedigree from Milé to Adam is from the Irish Genealogies in the Black Book. Keating gives a like list.

² This name is not in Keating's historical account, but it is in his Irish pedigrees, which are founded on exactly the same authorities as the B. B. Irish lists, agreeing generally verbatim, even in the digressions.

³ Niul (Keating) was the contemporary and friend of Moses, and was married to Scota, Pharaoh's daughter—the bad Pharaoh.

THE TURNER MS. XIV.

THE first notice of the existence of this MS. appears in the preface to J. F. Campbell's Leabhar na Feinne (page viii., heading T). It was recovered or discovered, like so many others, in the Advocates' Library presses, by the late D. C. Macpherson, probably in 1872, when Mr Campbell was putting his work through the press, for he either could not or would not print any part of it in his book. The probability is that it was thus discovered too late for Leabhar na Feinne. Dr Cameron had a very high opinion of this collection, and carefully transcribed the whole of it. We print it here in its entirety.

The MS. is of course not included in Dr Skene's Catalogue of the Gaelic MSS. in the Advocates' Library, the number of which is 65. It belongs to the extra MSS. discovered or presented since Dr Skene formed his list. The number XIV. is possibly Turner's own catalogue place for it. That it was in Turner's possession is evident, for his name appears on it (p. 45), with the date 1808. Besides, Turner was an inveterate, if not notorious, collector of MSS., some of which, fortunately, have found their way into the Advocates' Library, notably numbers 54 to 57 of Dr Skene's Catalogue.

The Manuscript consists of two parts—the main body of the MS., which extends from page 25 to page 196, and the first part, which makes only five leaves of nearly quarto size, the leaves of the main work being somewhat smaller. Two detached leaves appear between these two ill-assorted parts. The first portion is possibly an attempt to renew the dilapidated leaves of the original manuscript, for it is newer than the main body. The main MS. belongs to the middle of the last century, and is written in good ordinary English script of the time. The date 1748 and the name Cameron appear on page 54, and the work is clearly of Argyllshire, or rather of Kintyre, origin. Its contents, in regard to this and other points, speak for themselves.

DEIRDRE AND THE SONS OF UISNEACH.

THE story of Deirdre and the Sons of Uisneach is known as no other is over all the lands of the Gael, both in Ireland and Scotland. It forms one of the three crowning tragic stories—the Three Woes—of Gaelic storydom (sgeuluigheachd). There are many modern versions of the tale. One of the best Scotch variants was got in the Isles by Mr Carmichael, and published in the 13th volume of the Inverness Gaelic Society Transactions. Commonly the literary shape which the story takes is the ballad form, and the ballads are numerous and varied, being found in practically all collections of Ossianic poetry.

There are many, more or less old, versions of the story. The oldest variant is in the Book of Leinster, a 12th century MS., and it is also one of the shortest versions of it. This is published in Windisch's Irische Texte, Volume I., where comparison is made with a 15th century form of the tale, found in a British Museum MS. O'Curry published a 14th century variant of the story in a defunct Irish periodical; and O'Flanagan, in 1808, edited two versions for the Transactions of the Gaelic Society of Dublin, republished lately in the Gaelic Journal.

The versions which follow are found in the Edinburgh MSS. 56 and 53. Dr Whitley Stokes has already published a complete and consecutive text from these two MSS. in Windisch's Irische Texte, Volume II. Dr Cameron evidently prepared the first text (MS. 56) for publication in the Scottish Review, both text and translation. MS. 56 is a paper manuscript of last century, and of Irish origin; it belongs to Turner's Collection in the Advocates' Library. Its text agrees for the most part with O'Flanagan's second text. MS. 53, which is on vellum, belongs to the 15th century, and is known as the Glenmasain MS.; it is doubtless of Scotch origin. The text is much the same as Turner's MS. 56 has; but owing to the state of the MS. it is imperfect at the beginning and still more so at the end. It begins with Conchobar's feast, and breaks off with the death of Ilann Finn, forming about three-eighths of the whole. MS. 56 is well punctuated, MS. 53 only at the end of sentences. The inverted commas and apostrophes are, however, editorial; so, too, are the parentheses save with ar (inquit); the capital letters are often so, especially in MS. 53. MS. 56 writes 7 or et for agus indifferently.

THE TALE OF DEIRDRE.

The Tragical Death of the Sons of Uisneach:¹ or the Third Sorrow of the Three Sorrows of Story-telling.

A noble, illustrious, and most powerful King² assumed the sovereignty of the Province of Ulster, whose name was Conchobar,³ the son of Fachtua Fathach,⁴ son of Rossa,⁵ son of Congal Claringnech,⁶ son of Rudhraighe Mor⁷ (from whom the Clanna Rudhraighe take their name), son of Sitrighe, son of Dubh, son of Foghmor, son of Airgetmar, son of Sirlaunh, son of Finn, son of Bratha, son of Labhraidh, son of Cairbre, son of Ollamh Fodhla, son of Fiacha, son of Finnseothach, son of Seadua, son of Airtri, son of Eibhric, son of Eumher, son of Ir, son of Milidh of Spain. And this brave, provincial, high-king⁸ went to partake of a feast and entertainment to the house of Feidhlim, son of Dall, Conchobar's story-teller: for this was the manner of partaking of a feast in Emain Macha at that time, namely, five and three score, and three hundred were the number of the household on a certain night in the house of each of them.⁹ And while the feast was being partaken of, the wife of Feidhlim gave birth to a daughter: and Cathbad the druid, who happened to be then of the company, foreboded and prophesied concerning the child¹⁰ that many calamities and evils would befall the Province on her account. And when the nobles¹¹ heard this, they proposed to put her to death forthwith. "Let not that be done," said Conchobar: "but I will take her with me, and send her to be reared, that she may become my own wife."¹² Deirdre,¹³ the druid, Cathbad, named her; and Conchobar put her into a fort apart, with¹ a tutor and nurse to rear her; and no one in² the Province durst go into her presence except her tutor and her nurse and Conchobar's conversation-woman, who was called Lebarcham. She continued under this rule until she was marriageable; and grew in beauty above the women of her own time.

It happened on a certain day, in time of snow, that her tutor killed a calf for food for her;³ and when the calf's blood was spilled on the snow, a black raven lighted⁴ to drink it. And when Deirdre observed this, she said to Lebarcham that she would like to have a husband having the three colours she saw—that is, his hair of the colour of the raven, his cheeks of the colour of the calf's blood, and his skin of the colour of snow. "There is such a man of Conchobar's household, whose name is Naesi, the son of Uisnech, son of Congal Claringnech, son of Rudhraighe Mor," from whom came Conchobar, as we have said above. "If that be so, Lebarcham," said Deirdre, "I beseech thee, send him to converse with me privately." Lebarcham disclosed that matter to Naesi. Then came Naesi secretly to meet Deirdre. And Deirdre told him how much she loved him from the report she had heard of him, and asked him to take her away by stealth from Conchobar. Naesi consented,⁵ but reluctantly, for fear of Conchobar. Then Naesi and his two brothers, namely, Ainne and Ardan, and three times fifty warriors along with them, journeyed to Alba,⁶ where they obtained a holding⁷ for military service from the King of Alba, until he had received an account of the beauty of Deirdre, and sought her as wife to himself. Great wrath took hold of Naesi on account of this, and he departed with his brothers from Alba, and came to an isle of the sea,⁸ having fled with Deirdre after they and the King's forces had engaged in many conflicts.

On a certain day thereafter, a feast of great magnificence was prepared by Conchobar in the softly beautiful Emain Macha, at which the people were joyful, in high spirits, and very merry. The musicians, singers, and poets arose to sing their songs, and strains, and famed incantations, and (to repeat) their trees of affinity and branches of genealogy in presence of the king and the nobles of the Province. And the following are the bards who then arose, namely, Cathbad, the generous druid, and Genan of the shining countenance, son of Cathbad, Misdeadha, son of Aimbergin, Fercertne the bard, and Breicne the son of Cairbre of the grey head.

It was then that Conchobar raised his lofty, light-clear voice, and this was what he said, "Ye young men and nobles of Ulster," said he, "know ye of any fault, or blemish, or want that you now have?" "We know not any, O! king and lord," said they. "It is not so with me," said Conchobar; "I know of a great want you have, namely, that the three torehes of valour of the Gael are absent from you: that is, that the three noble valiant sons of Uisnech, son of Congal Claringnech, namely, Naesi, Ainnle, and Ardan should be in exile on account of any woman in the world, and that Naesi the son of Uisnech is fit to be a king, and that he and his two brothers have defended the half of Alba by the might of their hands and the hardness of their swords." "O! king and lord," said the rest, "it is long since we would have said that if we had not been afraid¹ to say it: for these three would defend the whole province of Ulster against every other province in Erin, although the men of Ulster should not rise with them, for a lion in valour and prowess and a serpent in venom is each of them." "If that be so," said Conchobar, "send ye messages and messengers for them to Alba." "Who will go to bring them?" said the nobles of Ulster. "I know," said Conchobar, "that it is one of the *geasa*² of Naesi not to come to Erin except with Fergus, son of Rossa the Red, son of Rudhraighe, or with Conall Cernach,³ or with Cuchulainn; and I will know now which of these three loves me most." And he took Conall Cernach into a place apart, and this is what he said unto him, "Warrior-king, O! Conall," said he, "what wouldst thou do unto me if I should send thee for the sons of Uisnech, and that they should be destroyed for me—a thing which I do not purpose to do?" "It is not the death of one man alone that would result from that," said Conall, "but none of the Ulstermen of whom I could lay hold, would escape from me⁴ without being put to death." "That is true," said Conchobar, "it is now that I understand that the sons⁵ of Uisnech are more dear to thee than myself." And he sent Conall away,⁶ and requested Cuchulainn to be brought unto him; and this is what he said unto him—"Cuchulainn," said he, "if I should send thee for the sons⁷ of Uisnech, and they should be destroyed for me—a thing which I do not purpose to do—what wouldst thou do unto me?" "I pledge my word," said Cuchulainn, "that if thou wouldst do that, shouldst thou seek eastward to Western India, it would not protect thee from falling by my hand for that deed." "That is true," said Conchobar, "I understand that thou lovest me not." And Fergus was then brought unto him, and he enquired of him, "What wouldst thou do unto me, Fergus, if I should send thee for the sons of Uisnech, and they should be destroyed for me—a thing which I do not purpose to do?" "I promise not," said Fergus, "that I would touch thy blood or thy flesh; nevertheless there is not another Ulsterman whom I could lay hold of, who would not get the sorrow of death and shortness of life from me." "True is that," said Conchobar; "it is thou that must go for them; and move forward to-morrow, for it is with thee that they will come. And when thou landest in Erin after coming from Alba, go to the house of Borraeh the son of Cainte;¹ and pledge thy word to me that thou wilt send the sons of Uisnech without delay, without covenant, and without protection to Emain Macha the day they will come to Erin." Thereafter they came forward into the dwelling, and Fergus told that he was himself to go on that expedition.² It was then that Conchobar spoke to Borraeh the son of Cainte, and this was what he said—"Borraeh," said he, "hast thou a feast for me?" "I have, indeed," replied Borraeh; "and I am not able to bring it to thee, although I was able to prepare it." "If that be so," said Conchobar, "give it to Fergus when he arrives from the east; for it is of Fergus' geasa not to refuse a feast." They set off that same night; and Fergus rose early next morning, and took none with him except his two sons, namely, Illam the Fair and Buinne Borbruadh,⁴ and Cuilenn the bargeman, and the barge itself; and tidings are not told of them until they reached the fastness of the sons of Uisnech, namely, Loch Etive in Alba. And it was thus that the sons of Uisnech were—they had three hunting-booths, and the booth in which they cooked their food, it was not in it that they ate it; and the booth in which they ate it, it was not in it that they slept. Fergus went into the glen, and raised his sweet-voiced warning cry, until there was heard throughout the neighbouring bounds the echo of that great cry. And it was thus that Naesi and Deirdre were at that time—they had the cenncæm of Conchobar, that is, the chess-board, between them, and were playing on it. Naesi heard the cry, and said, "I hear the cry of a man of Erin," said he. Deirdre recognised the cry, and concealed it. Fergus gave a second cry; and Naesi said again that it was the cry of a man of Erin. "That is not the cry of a man of Erin," said Deirdre, "but the cry of a man of Alba." Fergus gave the third cry, and they all recognised that it was Fergus, and Naesi said to Ardan to go to meet him. And Deirdre said that she recognised the first cry from Fergus. "Why didst thou conceal that from us?" said Naesi. "A dream which I have had," she said, "to wit, that three birds came to us from Emain Macha, and brought with them for us three sips of honey, and left the three sips of honey with us and took away three sips of our blood in their stead." "What opinion hast thou (formed) as to that dream, Princess?" said Naesi. "My opinion is," replied Deirdre, "that Fergus has come to offer to us a message of peace, and that Conchobar has a design against you: for sweeter than honey is a message of peace." "Hearken!" said Naesi, "Fergus' ship is in the port, and Ardan, arise thou, to meet him." Ardan went forward until he came where Fergus was, and gave three kisses to him and to his sons. And he brought him with him to where Naesi, Deirdre, and Ainnle were; and they gave kisses affectionately and earnestly to Fergus and to his sons; and he asked of them tidings of Erin, and more especially the tidings of the province of Ulster. "The best tidings we have," said Fergus, "are that Conchobar has sent me for you with covenants and guarantees of peace, and that he is himself faithful and kindly disposed towards you: and my word is pledged in regard to the fulfilment of this guaranty." "It is not meet for them to go thither," said Deirdre, "for their own lordship in Alba is greater than Conchobar's lordship in Erin." "Better," said Fergus, "is the sight of one's native country than all that; for one is not happy however great may be his prosperity and state if he does not see his native country every day." "True is that," said Naesi, "although my lordship in Alba be greater." "Sure unto you are my word and guaranty," said Fergus. "They are sure," replied Naesi; and it was not with Deirdre's consent that Naesi said that; and she was forbidding Naesi to go to Erin for fear of Conchobar and the men of Ulster; for she was sure that it was with a treacherous design that Conchobar sent Fergus for them. Fergus pledged his word unto them that if the men of Erin were intending their injury and destruction, neither sword nor helmet would protect them from himself. "I know that," said Naesi; "and we will go with thee." After that they set off, and their journeyings are not told until they came to the house of Borrach the son of Cainte. And Deirdre looked behind her at the coasts of Alba, and uttered the following lay:—

Dear is Inis Draegen,¹ too,
 And its stream with sandy bed ;²
 I would not have come hither hence
 If I had not come with Naesi.³

After that lay, Fergus and the sons of Uisnech came to the house of Borrach, the son of Cainte, and Deirdre along with them ; and Borrach kissed them fondly and earnestly. "I have a feast for thee, Fergus," said Borrach ; "and it is an obligation of honour on thee not to refuse it." When Fergus heard this, he became a crimson mass from the foot-sole to the face. "Ill hast thou done that, Borrach," said he, "and that Conchobar has bound me under solemn promise that I should send the sons of Uisnech to Emain Macha without delay the day they came to Erin." And Fergus asked of Naesi, "What is to be done regarding that?" said he. "Let this be done," said Deirdre—"Thou hast thy choice, to forsake the sons of Uisnech, or to partake of the feast."⁴ "I shall not forsake them," said Fergus : "but I will send my own two sons with them, namely, Illann the Fair and Buinne the Fierce Red." "Upon my word," said Naesi, "I think that not little, for it is not any other that has ever defended me but myself." And Naesi moved from the spot with wrath ; and Deirdre, Ainnle, and Ardan, and the two sons of Fergus followed him. And they left Fergus behind them sad and sorrowful, only that he was certain that if the five Provinces of Erin were assembled on one spot, they would not be able to break his guaranty.

As to the sons of Uisnech, they went forward by every nearest way and kindly information ; and Deirdre said, "I would myself give you good counsel." "What is that counsel?" said they. "To go to the Island of Cuillim, between Erin and Alba, to-night, and stay there until Fergus will eat of that feast ; and that will be a fulfilling by Fergus of his word, and besides it is needful for you." The sons of Fergus spoke, and what they said was—"That is saying evil of us, Deirdre, as if we were not able to give protection, though such good hands as yours were not protecting along with us, and the word of Fergus besides." "Alas ! that we have come hither relying on that word," said Deirdre, "and that Fergus has forsaken us for a feast :—" and she uttered this lay :—

¹ Now "Inis Draighneach" (the Island of Thorns) in Loch Awe. ² The Glen Masan MS. has "a uisge ingaimin glan" (its water in pure sand).
³ For "le Naoise," the Glen Masan MS. has "lem iumain" = "le m'ionmhain" (with my dear or beloved one), the last word of the lay being thus, as usual, the same as the first word. ⁴ As these are not alternatives, there seems to be a mistake in the text. O'Flanagan's version has, "do rogha agat-sa, uic Uisnech do thréigion no an fhleadh" (thou hast thy choice, to forsake the children of Uisnech or the feast).

 Woe is me ! ye goodly sons,

 If Fergus comes not with short delay,
 Long and lasting will be the constant woe.

Alas ! I deem it long,
 Your step this night to Emain ;
 Your coming from bright and sunny Alba
 Not to me, 'tis full woe.

After this lay, they came to Finn-charn² of the watch-tower on the Mountain of Fuad, and Deirdre tarried behind them unobserved ; and a deep sleep and slumber fell on her from weariness. And Naesi noticed that he had left Deirdre behind him, and he turned back for her. "What tarrying is this that thou hast made, Princess?" said Naesi. "I lay down in sleep," she replied, "and a terrible vision and a horrid strange dream appeared unto me, to wit, that his head was not on any of you three, nor on Illann the Fair, and that his own head was on Bui'ne Borbruadh, and that his help was not with you?" and she made this lay :—

Woeful the vision that hath appeared unto me.

 His head was not on one of you,
 And none helping the other.

After this lay, they moved onward to Ardnasalech,¹ which is now called Ardmacha ; and Deirdre said, "I hate the thing which I see here," said she. "What thing is that, Princess?" said Naesi. "Thine own cloud I see over thy head in the sky, and it is a cloud of blood;" and Deirdre said, "I would myself give you good counsel, ye sons of Uisnech." "What counsel is that?" said they. "To go to Dun Delgan² this night, where Cuchulainn is ; and to come to-morrow along with him to meet Conchobar." "Since we are not afraid," said Naesi, "we will not take that counsel;" and they made this lay together:—

O ! Naesi, behold thy cloud,
 I see it here in the sky ;
 I see here over Emain green
 A cold cloud of crimson blood.

I have taken alarm from the cloud,
 Which I see here in the sky :
 Like unto a clot of blood
 Is the terrible thin-edged cloud.

I fain would give you advice,
 Ye comely sons of Uisnech ;
 Go ye not to Emain this night,
 Because of the danger before you.

We will go to Dun Delgan,
 Where dwells the Hound skilled in all arts :
 We will come to-morrow from the south,
 We and the Hound famed in feats.

After this lay, they went forward until they saw Emain Macha in the distance. "I shall tell you how you may know for certain," said Deirdre, "if they mean to act treacherously towards you." "How that?" said Naesi. "If you are allowed into the house in which are Conchobar and the nobles of Ulster," she replied, "you will not be treacherously dealt with." They came to Emain Macha, and knocked at the door; and the doorkeeper answered them, and went with tidings to Conchobar that the sons of Uisnech were at the door, and the sons of Fergus, and Deirdre. Conchobar called all his servants and attendants to him, and asked of them how the house of the Red Branch was provided with food and drink. They replied, that should all the men of Ulster come to it, they would find a sufficiency of food and drink. It was then that Conchobar ordered the sons of Uisnech to be taken to the house of the Red Branch; and Deirdre said that it were better to take her own counsel, "And depart forthwith," said she. "We will not depart," said Illann the Fair; "and great is thy fear, woman. We will go to the house of the Red Branch." Attendants were sent with them; and generous and pleasant foods and bitter cheering drinks were supplied to them, so that they were joyful and merry, and servants and attendants were all drunk and jovial; but they¹ were weary from the length of their journey. It was then that Naesi ordered the chess-board to be brought that they might play.

It was then that Conchobar said, "Which of you, youths, will go to see if her own form and beauty still remain to Deirdre? for if they remain, there is not in the world a more beautiful woman than she." "I will go myself," said Lebarchan, "and I will bring thee sure tidings." This was the way with Lebarchan—Naesi and Deirdre were more dear to her than any other persons in the world; for she often went through the regions of the world bringing tidings to them and from them. Lebarchan went to where Naesi and Deirdre were; and Conchobar's chess-board (was) between them, and they were playing on it. Lebarchan kissed

"Evil is the deed that will be done this night in Emain," said Deirdre, "namely, the three torches of valour of the Gael will be slain by treachery; and Emain will not be better for that for one night until the hour of doom;" and she uttered this lay:—

Sad to me is the treachery
That is done this night in Emain,
And because of that treachery henceforth
It will be fratricidal Emain.

After that lay, Lebarchan told the sons of Fergus to shut the windows and doors of the house. "And if they come to you," said she, "win ye victory, and do valiantly, and defend yourselves well." And Lebarchan shed hot showers of tears, and took leave of them, and came where Conchobar was. Conchobar asked tidings of her. "I have both evil tidings and good tidings," said she. "What are they?" said Conchobar. "It is good tidings," she replied, "that the three of best form and appearance in Erin have come to us, that the sons of Uisnech have come to the Province of Ulster. And these are the best tidings we have. And the worst tidings I have are, namely, that the woman of best form and appearance in the world when she departed from us out of Emain has not retained her own beauty or form." When Conchobar heard that, much of his jealousy left him; and he took to lamenting the loss of Deirdre's beauty, until he said a second time, "Which of you will go to see if her own form and

It was then that Conchobar said to Trendorn, “Trendorn,¹ who slew thy father and thy brother ?” “I know,” said he, “that it was Naesi the son of Uisnech that slew them.” “Then,² Trendorn,” said Conchobar, “go thou to ascertain if her own form remains to Deirdre.” Trendorn went forward to the door of the dwelling ; and he found the windows and doors shut. And fear seized upon him, and he said, “I ought not to approach the sons of Uisnech, for great wrath is upon them.” And he discovered a window of the dwelling that was left open by mistake, and he began to look at Naesi through the window. And Deirdre noticed that, and told Naesi. And Naesi looked and saw the man’s eye. And it happened that he had a dead chess-man in his hand, and he gave it a well-aimed throw, so that he put it into the fellow’s eye. And he came to where Conchobar was in that state, having only one eye. “I give my word,” said he, “Conchobar, that Naesi, the son of Uisnech, is meet to be King of Erin, and Deirdre has the best form and appearance of all the women in the world.” It was then that Conchobar said, “Arise, ye Ulstermen, surround the house, and set it in red flames” (of fire). Thereupon the rest rose up together, and sent forth three great shouts round the house, and they set it on fire. When the sons of Fergus heard those loud shouts round the dwelling, they asked who were there. “Conchobar and the Ulstermen,” replied they. “Sad is that,” said Illann the Fair, “if it is Fergus’ guaranty you wish to break.” “Upon my word,” said Conchobar, “it is a greater wrong for the sons of Uisnech to have my wife than that.” “Uch, alas ! sons of Uisnech, ye have been betrayed,” said Deirdre. “Upon my word,” said Buinne Borbruadh, the son of Fergus, “if ye have been betrayed, we will not betray you ;” and thereupon he seized his arms, and came forth and slew three hundred of the Ulstermen in that onset ; and he put out the fires, and threw the troops into confusion. Conchobar then said, “Who hath caused this routing of the troops ?” “I have,” said Buinne Borbruadh, the son of Fergus. “I will give thee great bribes,³ Buinne,” said Conchobar, “and forsake the sons of Uisnech.” “What are these bribes ?” said Buinne. “I will give thee a cantred of land, my confidence, and my counsel." "I will accept that," said Buinne; and he took the bribes. And a mountain was made miraculously of that canted that very night. And this is the same which is called to-day Dalbuinne in Ulster. When Deirdre heard that (conversation), she said, "Buinne has deceived you; and a son like his father is he." "I pledge my word," said Illann the Fair, "that I will not forsake you while this sword lasts to me." And Illann thereupon came forth, and made three swift circuits of a champion round the dwelling, and slew three hundred of the Ulstermen; and he came back where Naesi was, who was playing with Ainnle. And he drank a drink, and came out again, and had a lighted torch, and began cutting down the troops, until they dared not approach the dwelling. And a goodly son was this Illan the Fair, for he never accepted gifts or rewards from any except Fergus, and he never refused any in regard to gifts or rewards. It was then that Conchobar said, "Where is Fiacha the Fair, that is, my son?" said he, "for it was the same night that he and Illan the Fair were born; and it is his father's arms that Illan the Fair has; and take thou my arms with thee, namely, the Orchaen, and the Corrthach, and the Notched-bow."

It was then that these two attacked each other boldly (and) courageously. And Illann the Fair, the son of Fergus, prevailed against Fiacha, the son of Conchobar, at that time, so that he forced him to crouch behind the shelter of his shield; and the Orchaen roared with a horrible vocal sound because of the greatness of the distress in which Fiacha, the son of Conchobar, was. And the three chief Waves of Erin roared (responsive to it), namely, the Wave of Toth, the Wave of Clidna, and the Wave of Rudhraighe. And Conall Cernach, the son of Aimergin, was then at Dun Tobairce; and he heard the Waves roaring, and this was what he said—"Conchobar is in distress," said he, "and it is not meet that I should listen to it." And he took up his arms with agility, and came on to Emain Macha; and the Ulstermen dared not prevent him. And he came to Illann the Fair from behind him, and thrust the Colg-glas,¹ that is, his sword, through his heart. "Whoever hath pierced me at my back," said Illann the Fair, "I would have given him battle in front of me." "Who art thou thyself?" said Conall. "I am Illann the Fair, the son of Fergus," he replied ; " and this is Conall Cernach that has pierced me." " Alas ! that it is I," said Conall. " Great cause of sorrow is that deed which thou hast done, Conall," said Illann, " for¹ the sons of Uisnech are under my protection." " Uch, alas !" said Conall ; " I pledge my word that Conchobar will not rescue his own son from me without being slain to avenge that deed ;" and thereupon Conall gave a stroke to Fiacha the Fair, so that his head was severed from his body ; and Conall departed from them. Then the signs of death came upon Illann the son of Fergus ; and he put his arms into the house, and told Naesi to act valiantly, and that he had himself been wounded by Conall Cernach in mistake. It was then that the Ulstermen surrounded the house, and set fires into it. And Ardan came forth and put out the fires, and slew three hundred of the troops. And after being out a long time, he came in, and Ainnle went out the other third part of the night to watch the house ; and he slew a countless number of the Ulstermen until they departed helplessly from the house. It was then that Conchobar began to urge on the troops ; and Naesi came out at last, and it is impossible to reckon the number that fell by him. The Ulstermen gave the fight to Naesi ; and Naesi routed them three times. Thereafter Deirdre rose to meet him and said unto him, " Victorious has been that fight which thou thyself and thy two brothers have fought ; act valiantly henceforward. And that was evil counsel for you, to have put trust in Conchobar and the Ulstermen, and it is unfortunate that you did not take my counsel." It was then that the sons of Uisnech made an enclosure by joining their shields together, and placed Deirdre between them ; and made an assault together by the troops, and slew three hundred of them in that onset. It was then that Conchobar came to Cathbad the druid, and said—" Cathbad," said he, " restrain the sons of Uisnech, and practise enchantment upon them, for they will destroy the Province for ever if they escape in spite of the men of Ulster on this occasion ; and I pledge my word to thee that they will have no cause of fear from me." Cathbad believed these sayings of Conchobar, and went to the sons of Uisnech, and laid them under enchantment ; for he put a sea with high waves across the plain before the sons of Uisnech, whilst the Ulstermen were following after them on foot on dry land. And sad was the plight in which the sons of Uisnech were, being overpowered in the great sea, and Naesi holding up Deirdre on his shoulders to save her against drowning. It was then that Conchobar commanded the sons of Uisnech to be slain; and the Ulstermen all refused to do that, for there was no man among them who had not wages from Naesi. Conchobar had a servant whose name was Maine of the Red-hand, a son of the king of Lochlann, and it was Naesi that slew his father and his two brothers; and he said that he would himself behead them to avenge that deed. "If so," said Ardan, "slay me first, for I am the youngest of my brothers." "That is not what will be done," said Ainnle, "but let me be slain first." "It is not meet to do so," said Naesi, "but I have a sword which Manannan, the son of Lir, gave me, that will not leave remains of blow or stroke; and let us three be struck with it at the same time, that neither of us may see his brother beheaded." It was then that these noble [youths] stretched their necks on one block, and Maine dealt them a quick sword-stroke so that he cut off the three heads together on that spot. And every one of the Ulstermen raised three heavy shouts of sorrow on their account.

As to Deirdre, when the attention of the rest was directed towards one another, she came forward on the green of Emain, and was moving distractedly eastward and westward from one man to another until Cuchulainn met her straight in the face; and she placed herself under his protection, and told him the tales of the sons of Uisnech from first to last, how they had been betrayed. "Sorrowful to me is that," said Cuchulainn; "and do you know who slew them?" "Maine of the Red Hand, son of the King of Lochlann," she replied. Cuchulainn and Deirdre came to where the sons of Uisnech were; and Deirdre spread out her hair, and began to drink Naesi's blood; and the colour of burning embers came into her cheeks; and she uttered this lay:—

Great have been these deeds in Emain
Where the treachery has been done—
The death of Uisnech's guileless sons,
The stays of Erin's honour.

Meet to be King of Erin all
Was [Ardan, the wise, the] yellow-haired,
Eire and Alba without reproach
Was Ainnle's.

Thine, O Mighty Naesi,
Would all be; 'tis not untruth
If the great deed you [they?] had not done.

Let me be buried in the grave,
And there let my mound be raised,
Awaiting them, and thence will come my death
Since the great deed has been done.

After this lay, Deirdre said, "Let me kiss my husband;" and she began to kiss Naesi and to drink his blood, until she recited

the (following) lay :—

Long is the day without the sons of Uisnech,
 'Twas not wearisome to be of their band ;
 A king's sons who would strangers entertain,
 Three lions from the hill of the Cave,

Three dragons from Dum Monadh,
 The three champions of the Red Branch ;
 After them I cannot live,
 Three that broke every rout.

Three beloved by Britain's women,
 Three falcons of Sliabh Cuilleán ;¹
 Sons of a king to whom valour yielded —
 To whom warriors paid homage.

Three heroes not ready to pay homage,
 Their fall is cause of sorrow ;
 The three sons of Cathbad's daughter,
 The three supports of the hosts of Cuailgne.

Three lively bears,
 Three lions from the fort of Una,
 Three heroes of praise desirous,
 Three bosom sons of the Ulstermen.

Three who were reared with Aife,
 Who brought regions under tribute ;
 Three columns who broke battalions,
 Three foster sons reared at Scathach.

Three who were reared at Boghmuin,
 By whom every feat was learned ;
 The three noble sons of Uisnech,
 'Tis sad to be without them,

That I could live after Naesi
 Let no one alive suppose ;
 After Naesi and Ardan
 Not long will be my days.

Ulster's high-king, my first betrothed,
 I forsook for love of Naesi ;
 Short my life after them ;
 I will sing their mournful dirge.

delgan sad and sorrowful ; and Cathbad, the druid, cursed Emain Macha to avenge that great evil, and said that neither Conchobar nor any of his descendants would ever possess that town after that treachery.

As to Fergus the son of Rossa the Red, he came to Emain Macha on the morrow after the slaying of the sons of Uisnech ; and when he found that they were put to death in violation of his own guaranty, he himself and Cormac Condlongas, the son of Conchobar, and Dubhthach Daolsulach attacked the soldiery of Conchobar's household, so that Maine, Conchobar's son, fell, and three hundred of his people along with him. Emain Macha was burnt and pillaged, and the women of Conchobar's (household) were slain by them. And his countries from every side were assembled, and the number of his host was three thousand heroes ; and they marched thence to Connaught to Oilill Mor, who was King of Connaught at that time, and to Medb of Cruachan, where they received welcome and wages.

As to Fergus and Cormac Condlongas with their warriors, after their arrival in Connaught, they were not one night without sending out marauders to plunder and burn Ulster, and they continued so until the territory of Cualgne was exhausted by them—a deed from which resulted many calamities and acts of mutual retaliation between the two Provinces ; and they spent seven, or according to others, ten years in this way without respite for one hour between them. Before the end of that period, Medb became pregnant by Fergus, to whom she bare three sons at one birth, viz., Ciar, Core, and Conmac, as the poet says in the following stanza :—

Pregnant was Medb in pleasant Cruachan
By Fergus who earned not reproach ;
To whom she bare three faultless sons—not weak.
Ciar, Core, and Conmac.

It is from this Ciar that the Ciaruidhe of Munster have taken their name, and of his race are the O'Conor Ciaruidhe, from Core are the O'Conor Corcamruadh, and from Conmac are the Conmaiene who are in Connaught ; and whoever will read the poem which begins—proof of this be the territories that are named after them in these two Provinces. Fergus and the Dubhlongas, that is, the strangers who accompanied him to Connaught, were continually plundering and doing mischief to the Ulstermen on account of the death of the sons of Uisnech. The Ulstermen, likewise, were avenging themselves on them and on the men of Connaught on account of the Cattle-spoil which Fergus took from them, and on account of all the injuries done to them, so that the losses and injuries which they had inflicted upon each other were so great that books are written on them, which would take too long to read here.

An Account of the Death of Deirdre is given here.

As to Deirdre, on account of whom those deeds were done, she was with Conchobar in the household for the space of a year after the slaying of the sons of Uisnech; and even as much as the raising of her head or giving a smile with her mouth she did not do during that time. When Conchobar saw that neither amusement nor kindness interested her, and that neither pleasantry nor honour brought joy or courage into her mind, he sent for Eogan, the son of Durthecht, lord of Fernmagh. And some of the historians say that it was this Eogan that slew Naesi, the son of Uisnech, in Emain Macha. And after Eogan had come into the presence of Conchobar, (the latter) said to Deirdre that since he had not himself been able to change her mind from her sorrow, she must go for a while with Eogan; and with that she was placed behind Eogan in his chariot, and Conchobar went to give her away. And as they were journeying onward, she would give a look fiercely at Eogan in front of her, and a look back at Conchobar behind her; for there were not two men in the world whom she hated more than them both. But when Conchobar noticed her looking alternately at himself and Eogan, he said in sport, "Deirdre, the look of a ewe between two rams is that look thou givest me and Eogan." When Deirdre heard that (saying), she took fright, and made a wild leap out of the chariot, so that she struck her head against a pillar-stone that was before her, and made small fragments of her head so that her brain suddenly leapt out; (and) in that wise occurred the death of Deirdre.

Cathbad, son of Maelcro of battles,
Was the first king who possessed Magach ;
(There were) other two, of enduring wrath,
Rossa Ruadh (and) Cairbre Cenn-derg.

Three to whom Magach bore offspring fair—
Rossa Ruadh, Cairbre, and Cathbad ;
Three were they prosperous
Whom Magach, the brown eye-browed, espoused.

She had three sons by Rossa Ruadh
And four sons by Cairbre—
Scions pure-white without blemish ;
Three daughters she bare to Cathbad.

Sons of Uisnech, shield of men,
They fell, but not overpowered in fight ;
Pleasant (was) their fellowship, white their skin :
There you have the Third Sorrow.

Magach bare to Cathbad druid
Three daughters of fair countenance ;
They grew in beauty above all else

GAELIC PROVERBS AND PHRASES,

HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED, OR VARIANTS OF PUBLISHED ONES.

THE Proverbs and Phrases which follow were intended by Dr Cameron to supplement and complete, as far as possible, Sheriff Nicolson's collection of Gaelic Proverbs and Familiar Phrases, published in 1881. Several of them are merely more or less interesting variants of those which Sheriff Nicolson has; but the vast majority of them are not contained in the Sheriff's monumental work.

 Thig dàil gu teach, is ruigidh each mall am muilinn.
 Thig dàil gu dorus.
 Thig fuaim mhòr a tosgaid fhalaimeh.
 Thig mac o dhroch altrun, ach cha tig e o 'n eug.
 Thig sin a do shròin fathast, 's théid an cabhadh innte.
 Thig math is ole a faighidin.
 Thig smal air an òir.
 Thig traoghadh air muir làn.
 Thigear a dh' easbhuidh nan càirdean, ach cha tigear a dh' easbhuidh nan coimhearsnach.
 Thig daoine dh' easbhuidh nan càirdean, ach cha tig iad a dh'

 Thig, thig, là math a dheanamh nid.
 Thig thu sin mar gu 'n tilgeadh bó buachar.
 Thoir do chuid do dhuine falamh, is gheibh thu air ais dùbailt 'i.
 Thoir an tarbh do 'n taigh mhòr, is iarraidh e do 'n bhàthaich.
 Thoir mìr do 'n leanabh an du, is thig e a m-bàrach.
 Thoir urram dhomh is bheir mi pòg dhuit.
 Thug e car mu thom air.

TRANSLATIONS OF ENGLISH HYMNS AND POEMS.

THE following translations appeared in the Gael and in Bratach na Fìrinn during the years 1871 to 1873 :—

AN IERUSALEM NUADH.¹

O mhàthair chaomh, Ierusalem !
A d' ionnsuidh cuin thig mi ?
O cuin a chrìochnaichear mo bhròn ?
Is t' aoibhneas cuin a chi ?
O thìr 'tha taitneach sòlasach !
O chala àit nan saoi !
Cha 'n fhaighear bròn am feasd a' d' choir,
Nò cùram, saoth'r, no caoidh.

Cha 'n fhaighear tinneas annad féin,
Nò creuchd air bith no leòn ;
'S cha 'n faighear bàs no sealladh grànd' ;
Ach beatha ghnàth a' d' chòir.
Neul dorch cha chuir ort sgàil' a chaoidh,
Is oidhch' cha bhì nì 's mò ;
Ach dealraichidh gach neach mar ghréin,
An solus Dhé na glòir'.

Cha 'n 'eil innt' samt no ana-miann,
No farnad fòs, no strì ;
Cha 'n 'eil innt' ocras, tart, no teas,
Ach taitneasan gun dìth.
Ierusalem ! Ierusalem !
Mo mhiann bhì annad shuas ?
O b' fheàrr gu 'n crìochnaicheadh mo bhròn,
'S gu 'm faicinn t' aoibhneas buan !

Cha 'n 'eil innt' guin no cradh, no pian.
No fiamh, no deòiridh truagh ;
'S cha chluinnear osna innt', no éigh,
Is teinn cha léir a sluagh.

¹ This is the old hymn entitled The New Jerusalem, or the soul's breathing after her heavenly country. The first line is, "O mother, dear Jerusalem."

'N Ierusalem, am baile naomh,
 Tha Dia, ar Rìgh, a' tàmh ;
 'S tha 'n t-Uan e féin, mar sholus di,
 'N a chaithir-rìgh a ghnàth.

O Dhé ! mo mhianu Ierusalem
 Gun dàil gu 'm faicinn féin !
 Oir tha i làn do shòlasaibh
 Nach eòl domh chur an céill.
 'S ro-shoil'èir 'tùir 's a binnein àrd',
 Le deàrsadh mhòran leug,
 Le Iasper, crisolit, 's gach clach,
 A 's taitnìche na chéil'.

Do thighean tha do ìbhori,
 'S gach uinneag 's gloine ghrinn,
 Do shràidean 's òr ro-fhìnealta—
 'S ta ainglean annt' a' seinn.
 Tha d' bhallachan do chlachaidh taght',
 Do dhaingnich 's daoimean gearrt',
 Do gheatachan is neamhuidean—
 Mo mhian bhì 'n sud gu h-àrd !

Ni neoghlan grànd' cha tig gu bràth
 A steach troimh d' gheataibh féin ;
 Liu dhamhan-allaidh cha bhì ann,
 No smal, no sachar breun.
 Iehobhah Dhé, thig 's crìochmaich féin
 Mo bhròn gu léir, 's mo chaidh ;
 Thoir leat mì do Ierusalem,
 Gu bhì gu bràth le d' naoimh,

"Tha crùint' an sud le glòir ro-mhòir,
 A' faicinn aghaidh Dhé ;
 Rì caithream àrd is aoibhneas sior—
 'S ro-shona iad gu léir.
 Ach sinne, 'tha 'n ar fògaraich,
 Tha 'n còmhnuidh brònach truagh ;
 Ag osnaich, caoidh, 's a' sìleadh dheur,
 'S a ghnàth ri gearan cruaidh.

Ar mìlseachd measgaicht' tha le seirbh',
 Ar taitneis eiod ach pian ?
 Is fada buan ar làithean bròin,
 'S ar n-aoibhneas 's beag a 's fiach.
 Ach tha 'n toil-inntinn shuas cho mòr,
 'S an sòlasan gach ré,

'S nach measar leo-san mìle bliadhn'.
Ach mar an là an dé.

Mo dhachaidh chaomh, Ierusalem !
Cuin chi mi t' aoibhneas mòr ?
'S do Rìgh 'n a shuidh' 'n a chaithir shuas,
Do shonas buan, 's do ghlòir ?
Do liosan-ubhal 's d' fhìon-liosan,
A 's iongantaiche cliù,
Tha làn do thoradh do gach gnè,
A 's taitniche do 'n t-sùil.

Do ghàraidhean le 'n ròidibh réidh',
Tha ùrar uain' a ghnàth ;
'S tha luibhean taitneach cùbhraidh annt',
'Tha fàs an sud a mhàin.
Tha canal agus siùcar fàs,
Is ioma òcshlaint' annt' ;
Gach àdh 'tha 'n sud cha smuainich crì,
'S cha chuir an teangaidh 'n càinnt.

Tha 'n deoch 's am biadh a 's mils' an sud --
Tha 'n ceòl ann binn a ghnàth ;
'S tha ioma ni 'tha dreachmhor grinn
Fo 'n cosaibh air an làr.
Le fuaim ro-chaoin tha 'n amhainn bheò
A' sruthadh feadh gach sràid ;
'S mu 'bruachaibh glasa air gach taobh,
Tha craobhan beatha fàs.

Na craobhan-s' toradh bheir gach mìos,
Is fàsaidh iad gach ré ;
'S bheir uile shlòigh an domhain mhòir,
Dhuit féin an glòir gu léir.
Ierusalem, àit-comhnuidh Dhé,
Gu 'm faicinn 's e nò mhiann :
O b' fhearr gu'n crìochnaicheadh mo chradh,
'S gu 'n tàmhainn innt' gu sìor !

Tha Daibhidh 'n sud le 'chruit 'n a làimh,
Air ceann na coisir-chiùil ;
'S bu shona neach le 'n cluinnt' a cheòl,
'S e 'n còmhnuidh seinn le lùth.
Tha Màiri ann seinn moladh Dhé,
Le fuinn a tha ro-bhinn ;
'S na h-oighean eile an co-ghleus,
'N a cois gu léir a' seinn.

Laoidh-mholaidh Dhé tha Ambros seinn,
 Is Austin naomh le chéil' ;
 Tha Sachariah 's Simeon aosd',
 A' seinn le bilibh gleust'.
 Dh' fhàg Magdalen a caoidh 'n a déigh,
 'S i seinn le iolach àrd,
 Am measg nan naomh, is fuaim an ciùil,
 A' seirm air feadh gach sràid.

Ierusalem ! Ierusalem !
 Cuin chi mi t' aoibhneas mòr ?
 Gun dàil, a Dhé, thoir dachaidh mi,
 Is crìochnaich m' uile bhròn.
 A' m' eudainn, Dhé, O sgrìobh-sa t' ainm,
 'S thoir mi á so gu luath,
 Chum tàmh leat fèin an sonas àrd,
 A' seinn do chliù gu buan.

Ierusalem, 's i dachaidh 'n àidh—
 Rìgh-chaithir àrd ar Dé !
 O bhaile naoimh, a bhan-rìgh mhòr,
 A chéile Chrìosd gach ré !
 A bhan-rìgh mhaiseach, còmhdaichte
 Le urram, inbhe 's glòir,
 'S ro-àillidh thu, 's ro-loineil geal,
 Gun smal air bith a' d' chòir.

O cuin a chi 'm Ierusalem—
 Ar comhfhurtachd gu léir ?
 Oir tha thu àillidh dreachmhor glan,
 Gun chroin air bith no beud.
 'N Ierusalem cha 'n fhaighear oidhech',
 A chaoidh no sgàile chiar,
 No duibhre dorch, no geambradh fuar,
 'S cha mhùth innt' ùin' gu sìor.

Air coinneil no air gealaich innt',
 No reultaibh cha 'n 'eil feum ;
 Oir Crìosd, Ard-rìgh na fìreantachd,
 Sìor-dhealraidh innt' mar ghréin ;
 An t-Uan gun sinail, 's e soilleir geal,
 Bheir solus doibh gun dìth,
 Oir bidh a' ghloir a ghnàth cho mòr,
 A chithear leò 'n an Rìgh.

Is Esan chaoidh Ard-rìgh nan dùl,
 An sealladh sùl' a shluaigh ;

'S tha iads', a theaghlach sona féin,
 Ri seirbhis da gach nair.
 Tha buidheann ainglean imat' a' seinn ;
 'S tha 'mhuinntir nèamhaidh chaomh,
 A ràinig shuas troimh àmhghar cruaidh,
 Gu buan ri sùgradh naomh.

Na fàidhean naomh' tha uile 'n sud,
 'S na h-Abstoil—dà fhear dheug—
 'S na fianuisean a ròghnaich bàs
 Mu 'n géilleadh iad do 'n bhréig.
 Bidh 'n sud gu léir na firein chóir',
 'S na slòigh do Ios' 'thug gaol,
 Na h-òganaich 's na h-òighean 'dhiùlt
 An taitneas an 's an t-saogh'l.

Na h-uain 's na caoraich 'thug tre ghràs,
 Air bàs 's air ifrinn buaidh,
 Bidh shuas ri caithream ait gach ré,
 Nach urrainn beul a luaidh ;
 Is ged nach ionann meud an glòir',
 Tha 'n sòlas do 'n aon ghnè,
 'S tha sonas ionlan aig gach aon
 Do 'n mhuinntir shaoirt' air néamh.

Tha gràdh an sud a' rìgheachadh ;
 'S e Crìosd an uile mhiann ;
 Is chithear leo le sealladh sùl',
 A ghnùis an aoibhneas sìor.
 A' tabhairt gràidh is cliù—'s a' seinn
 " Is naomh, is naomh " gun tàmh,
 Cha 'n fhannaich iad 's cha 'n fhàs iad sgìth,
 A' moladh 'n Rìgh gu bràth.

Bu shona 'bhithinn' mìle euairt
 An déigh mo làithean bròin,
 Nam feudaim féin, le cluasaibh geur',
 Bhi 'g éisdeachd ris a' cheòl,
 Do 'n Rìgh 'tha sìorruidh 'sheinnear shuas,
 Air néamh le sluagh an àidh—
 Le an'maibh saoirt' 's le ainglibh naomh',
 'Thug gaol do Dhia a' ghràidh.

Bu shona sona 'bhiodh mo staid,
 Nam faighteadh fiùghail mi
 Air cliù a sheinn air feadh gach linn,
 Aig cosaibh Dhé mo Rìgh ;

'S air comunn Chrìosd a mhealtainn shuas,
A ghràdh 's a ghràs gach uair,
A réir nan gealladh 'dh' fhàg e sgrìobht',
'S a bhios mi nis a' luaidh :—

“Biodh iad-san,” deir e, “Athair chaoinh,
A thug thu dhomhs' le coir,
'N an tàmh a' m' fhianuis féin a chaoidh,
A' dearcadh air mo ghlòir—
A' ghlòir a bh' agam maille riut,
Mu 'n robh an saoghal ann,
'S a bhithreas shuas mar thobar mòr,
O 'n éirich glòir gun cheann.”

'S a rìs, “Ma ni neach seirbhìs domh, Dlù-leanadh esan mi ;

Oir 's àill leam far am bheil mi féin,
Mo sheirbhìseach gu 'm bi ”

'S a rìs, “Ma ghràdhaicheas neach mis', Bheir m' Athair dha-san spéis ;

'S do 'n neach sin ann an glòir 's an gràdh,
Làn-fhoillsichims' mi féin.”

O m' thruaighibh saor mi, Dhé, gun dàil.

A chum le dānachd mhòir,
A' m' chòmhuidh leat 'n Ierusalem,
Gun deare mi air do ghlòir :

'S gu 'm faic mi 'n Sion gnùis an Rìgh,
Mo Dhia, mo ghràdh, 's mo rùn,

A chi mi nis tre ghloine dhuirch,
Ach shuas le sealladh sùl'.

O 's beannaicht iads' 'tha glan 'n an erì,
Oir gnùis an Rìgh dhoibh 's léir :

O sibhs' a mhuinntir shona naomh,
A ta do theaghlach Dhé !

O Dhé, gun dàil mo chuibhreach sgaoil,
Mo lin, 's mo gheimhlean cruaidh',

Oir tha mi tuilleadh 's fad' a' m' thàmh,
Am bùthaibh Chédair thruaigh !

Ach rammsach mi, is faigh mi mach,

'S thoir mi do d' chrò, a Dhé ;

S ni t' ainglean nìle aoibhneas 'n uair

A nì'm do thoil gu léir.

O mhàthair chaoinh, Ierusalem !

A d' ionnsuidh cùin thig mi ?

O cuin a chrìochnaichear mo bhròn ?
'S do shòlas cuin a chi ?

Ach fathast guidheam ort, a Dhé,
Mo shaoradh o gach strì,
A chum gu 'n còmhnuich mi gu bràth,
A' d' thulaich àrd an sìth,
Le Cherubim is Seraphim,
Is an'maibh naomh ; gum sgìos
A' seinn do chliù, O Dhé nan sluagh,
Gu buan ;—gu 'm b-amhluidh 'bhios.
A' chrìoch.

TEACHD GU CRÌOSD.¹

Ceart mar a tàim—gun ni a' m' làimh,
Ach toilltinneas do bhàis a mhàin,
Air cuireadh fialaidh saor do ghràis—
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

Ceart mar a tàim—'s gum fhuireach seal
Gu m' ionnlad féin o lochd no smal,
Oir glanaidh t' fhuil mi o gach sal—
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

Ceart mar a tàim—gun tàimh iomluaisgt'
Le iomadh còmhrag 's imecheist thruaigh,
Le eagal stigh, muigh cogadh cruaidh—
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

Ceart mar a tàim—bochd, dall, is truagh,
Chum sealladh, saoihbreas, 's leigheas buan,
Seadh chum gach beannachd fhaotainn uat—
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

Ceart mar a tàim—'s cha diùltar mi,
Ach fàilte' is saorsa gheibh gun dìth ;
Do bhrìgh gu 'n d' chreid mi t' fhocal fìor,
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

Ceart mar a tàim—oir bbris do ghràdh
Gach bacadh sìos, is dh' ullaich slàint' ;
Nis gu bhi leat, seadh, leats' a mhàin—
Uain Dé, dhuit thigean dlù.

SOLUS A' DEALRADH MACH A DORCHADAS.¹

An dòighibh dìomhair gluaisidh Dia,
 Thoirt 'iongantais mu 'n cuairt ;
 Mar charbad dha tha 'n doimionn dhian,
 'S tha lorg a' chois' 's a' chuan.

An doimhneachdan do ghliocas sior
 Tha 'rùintean taisgte suas ;
 Is cuirtear leis a thoil an gnìomh,
 Mar 's miann leis féin gach nair.

Ur-mhisneach glacaibh, naoimh gun treòir,
 Na neòil a's duirch' tha làn
 Do thròcair chaoimh, is doirtear leò
 Oirbh maithneas mòr gun dàil.

Na measaibh Dia tre shealladh mhàin,
 'N a ghràs cuiribh 'ur dùil ;
 Air cùl an fhreasdail dhuirch tha gràdh
 A' lasadh ghnàth 'n a ghuais.

A rùintean abaichidh gu luath,
 'S iad fosgladh suas gun tàmh ;
 'S ged robh a' ghucag searbh 's an nair,
 Bidh mills' is buaidh 's a' bhlàth.

As-creidimh dall théid eì 's gach ceum,
 Gnìomh Dhé a chaoidh cha sgrùd ;
 'S e Dia 's fear-mìneachaidh dha féin,
 'S ni soilleir réidh gach cùis.

IEHOBHAA SEDCENU²

(Iehòbhah ar Fìreantachd).

Bu choigreach mi aon uair do Dhia is do ghràs,
 Gun aithn' air mo chionta, gun eagal roimh 'n bhàs ;
 Ged àrd-mhol mo chàirdean domh Criosd air a' chrann
 Iehòbhah Sedcénu—bu neo-ni dhomh 'bh' ann.

Le nigheanaibh Shìoin bu deurach mo shùil,
 'S na tuiltean dol thairis air 'anam gu dlù—

¹ Cowper's "Light shining out of darkness." See any Hymnal, the first line being, "God moves in a mysterious way."

² From the Songs of Zion of the Rev. R. M. M'Cheyne. See Bonar's Memoir and Remains of Rev. R. M. M'Cheyne.

Gun smuain gu'm b'è m' aing'dheachds' a thàirng ris a' chrann,
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu—bu neo-ni dhomh 'bh' ann.

Bu tric mi a' leughadh, le éibhneas is deòin,
Dàn buadhach Isaiah is càinnt shìmplidh Eoin ;
Ach eadhon 'n uair 'sgrìobh iad mu Chrìosd air a' chrann,
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu—bu neo-ni dhomh 'bh' ann.

Ach 'n uair 'dhùisg saor-ghràs mi le solus o 'n àird',
Rinn eagal mo luasgadh is b' uamhas dhomh m' bàs ;
Dhomh fasgadh no furtachd cha robh annam féin,
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu b' fhear-saoraidh dhomh 'm fheum.

Roimh 'n ainm ud 'tha milis chaidh m' uamhas air chùl,
Chaidh m' eagadan fhuadach, is tharruing mi dlù
Gu tobar a' bheò-uisge dh' òl as gu saor—
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu, mo Shlànuighear caomh.

Iehòbhah-Sedcénu, m' uil' ionmhas is m' uail ;
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu bheir saors' dhomh o thruaigh' ;
Air tìr is air eum bheirear buaidh leam tre m' Thriath—
Mo chàball is m' acair, m' uehd-éideadh 's mo sgiath.

'N uair 'shiùbhlam troimh ghleann agus sgàile a' bhàis,
An t-ainm so 'tha buadhach bheir fuasgladh 's a' chàs ;
'S o fhiabhrus an t-saoghails' 'n uair 'shaorar mi chaoidh,
Iehòbhah-Sedcénu àrd-luaidheam a' m' laoidh.

SALM NA BEATHA.

LE LONGFELLOW.¹

Na can rium am briathraibh dubhach,
Beatha 'n duine 's bruaradar faoin ;
Is tha 'n t-anam marbh a choidleas,
'S cha 'n 'eil ni réir barail dhaoin'.

Beatha 'n duine 's fìor ni luachmhòr !
'S cha 'n i 'n naigh dhòrach ceann a réis ;
Ris an anam rianh cha dubhradh,
“'S dùslach thu 's gu dùslach théid.”

Cha 'n e sòlas 's cha 'n e àmhghar
'Tha mar ard-èbrìch dhuinn fo 'n ghréin,
Ach bhì gnìomhach chum bhì fàgail
Astair ùir gach là 'n ar déigh.

Ealdhain 's mall 's tha ùin' ruith seachad,
 'S tha ar crì, ge calm' is treun,
 Ghnàth mar dhruma 'bhròin a' bualadh
 Caismeachd thiamhaidh thruaigh an éig.

Ann an àrfhaich mhòir an t-saoghail,
 'N camp na Beatha so na bi
 Mar an t-ainmhidh balbh a ghreasar !
 Bi mar ghaisgeach anns an strì !

Earbs' na cuir 's an latha màireach !
 'N ùin' 'chaidh seach fàg air do chùl !
 Saothraich anns an àm 'tha làthair,
 Treun an cridhe 's Dia a' d' shùil !

Nochdaidh eachdraidh laoch gu 'm faod sinn
 Ar beath' dheanamh buadhach àrd,
 'S luirg air cos 's an t-saoghal fhàgail
 As ar déigh 'n uair 'thig am bàs.

Luirg 'n uair theagamh 'chi neach eile,
 'S e air cuan na Beath' gun iùl,
 Bràthair faondrach 'rinn long-bhriseadh,
 Glacaidh thuige misneach ùr.

Eireamaid nis 's biomaid gnìomhach,
 Le treun chrì 'bheir buaidh 's gach càs ;
 'S fòghlumaid, tre chosnadh 's leanmhuinn,
 Dichìoll 's foighidìn gach là.

SEALLTUINN RIS A' CHRANN-CHEUSAIDH.¹

Ri peacadh b' fhada lean mi dlù,
 Gun nàire orm no fiamb,
 Ach choinnich cuspair ùr mo shùil,
 'Phill mi o m' chùrsa dian.

Do chunncas aon leam cròcht' air crann,
 An spàirn 's an éigin chruaidh,
 A shuidhich orm a shealladh fann,
 'S mi faisg do 'n chrann 's an uair.

An sealladh sud gu dearbh cha téid,
 A m' chuimhne féin gu bràth ;

¹ See No. 69 of "Tonic Sol-fa Melodies," by C. H. Bateman and R. Inglis.

Chuir e, ar leam, gun fhosgladh béil,
Gu sèimh á m' leth's a bhàs.

Mo choguis dhùisg fo dhìteadh geur,
Ghlac éigin mi ga teann ;
Oir chunnaic mi mo pheacadh féin,
'G a cheusadh's air a' chrann.

Mo thruaigh' ! cha b' aithne dhomh mo ghnòmh :
Ach 's dìomhain nis mo dheòir ;
Do m' anam e' àit' am faigh mi dìon ?
Oir cheus mi Triath na glóir'.

Ach sheall e rìs is thuirt le gràdh,
" Làn-mhaitheam t' eucoir mhòr ;
Chaidh m' fhuil-sa dhòrtadh ann ad àit',
'S tre m' bhàs bidh tusa beò."

Mar so mo pheacadh féin 'n a bhàs,
Chi mi ro-ghràineil breun ;
Gidheadh chum cliù rùin-dìomhair gràis,
'S e 'bhas mo shlàint' gu leir.

Le sòlas dubhach 's le caoin bhròn,
Mo chrì tha 'n còmhnuidh làn,
Do bhrìgh gu 'n d' cheus mi Triath na glóir',
Ach 's beò dhomh troimh a bhàs.

GEALLAIDHEAN LUACHMHOR.¹

O sibhse a shaoradh, nach daingean an stéidh,
'Chaidh leagadh do 'r creidimh an gealladh 'ur Dé !
Ciod 'b' urrainn da labhairt nach dubhairt gu fìor,
Chum misneachd dhuibh 'theich air son fasgaidh gu Crìosd

'S gach cor anns am bi thu, ma 's tinn no ma 's slàn,
Dol fodha am bochdainn, no 'm pailteas a' snàmh,
Aig bail' is o 'n dachaidh, air tìr is air cuan,
Mar dh' fheumas do latha, do neart bidh gu buan.

¹ This hymn, by one Keen, appeared in Rippon's Collection in 1787. The first verse is—

How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent word !
What more can He say than to you He hath said,
You who unto Jesus for refuge have fled ?

Garbh-thonnan an uamhais mu 'n cuairt duit geal iadh,
 Na cuireadh sin geilt ort, oir 's mise do Dhia ;
 Is bheir mi dhuit cabhair is neart anns gach càs,
 'S tu 'n crochadh ri deas-làimh mo chumbhachd a ghnàth

'N uair 's éigin duit imeachd troimh uisgeachan mòr',
 Cha chòmhdhaichear tur thu le tuiltean a' bhròin,
 Oir bithidh mi faisg dhuit le furtachd a' d' fheum,
 'S a naomhachadh cràidh dhuit is àmhgharan gear'.

Troimh dheuchainnean teinnteach 'n uair 's éigin duit triall,

LECTURES AND ADDRESSES.

OLDEST PRINTED GAELIC BOOKS.¹

I PROPOSE, gentlemen, in the following address, to give you some account of the earliest printed Gaelic works. We cannot, unfortunately, boast of the extent of our literature; but, notwithstanding, that literature contains some works which will be read and studied even after the language in which they are written will cease to be spoken. The poetry of Ossian is not unworthy of a place beside the poetry of Homer and Virgil. The songs of Macdonald, Macintyre, and Ross contain genuine poetry, and will always be read by Highlanders with delight. It, therefore, we cannot boast of the quantity of our literature, we have no reason to be ashamed of the quality of much of it. And let us hope that, now that more interest is being manifested in Gaelic studies than has ever been, additions will be made to our literature of such a kind as will not be unworthy of our native language. I am very hopeful, gentlemen, that some of your own number will enter with eagerness upon the very inviting field of study which your native language and its kindred dialects present to you. It is not greatly to our credit that Celtic philology should at the present moment be more eagerly studied in Germany than in Scotland, and by persons who are obliged to spend much time in obtaining possession of the key to those studies—a knowledge of the Gaelic language—than by us, who possess that key from our infancy. This reproach, I do earnestly hope, will ere long be wiped away from us.

Although our language is confessedly very ancient, we have no account of any book having ever been printed in it previous to the year 1567, when Knox's Liturgy, translated by Bishop Carswell, was published. This work is now extremely rare, only one perfect copy of it being known to exist. That copy is in the library of the Duke of Argyll at Inveraray. It is supposed that there is another copy in some library on the Continent, from the fact that Adeling refers to it in his "Mithridates." An imperfect copy was discovered a few years ago in some shepherd's house in Stratherrick, near Inverness. It has since been purchased by the British Museum (for, I believe, £15), and has been completed in fac simile from the Duke of Argyll's copy. It is not improbable but some stray copies of this book may still be existing in the Highlands.

It is not known that any other book was printed in Gaelic until the year 1631, when Calvin's Catechism was published at Edinburgh. This book also is extremely rare, only one or two copies of it being known to exist. It is a translation of Calvin's Catechism, preceded by some Gaelic Hymns, which Reid has re-printed at the end of his "Bibliotheca-Scoto-Celtica."

The next work published in Gaelic was the Synod of Argyll's metrical translation of the first fifty Psalms, and which appeared in 1559. The Gaelic title is "An Ceud Chaogad do Shalmaibh Dhaibhidh." This book also is very scarce, but copies of it are known to exist. I have seen only one copy, which belonged, I believe, to Mr David Laing, of Edinburgh.

Kirke's Psalter appears to be the fourth book published in Gaelic. It appeared in 1684. This book also is very rare, although some copies of it are known to exist.¹ I have been fortunate enough to secure one of them. You can easily see that it formed the foundation of our present metrical Psalms.

Robert Kirke was minister of the parish of Balquidder at the time of the Revolution, and laboured much in his day for the spiritual instruction of his countrymen; for besides his Psalter he published also an edition of the Irish Scriptures in the Roman character for circulation among the Highlanders of Scotland.

In 1694 the Synod of Argyll finished their metrical version of the Psalms, but that edition I have never seen.

These are all the books known to have been published in Gaelic until Kirke's Bible was published in 1690.

The New Testament was translated into Irish Gaelic in 1603. It was the first time, in all probability, that any portion of the Scriptures was translated into any of the Celtic dialects. A second edition was published in 1681, and four years afterwards, in 1685, the Old Testament was published by Bishop Bedell. Two hundred copies of the Old Testament were sent over to Scotland for the benefit of the Scotch Highlanders. A number of copies were circulated, generally one copy in a parish, and some of the copies have not been circulated, I believe, to this day. How could our countrymen but be ignorant when this was all the provision which, so far as Bible circulation was concerned, was made to meet their spiritual wants? In those days few of our countrymen could themselves read, and the minister, on the Sabbath day, translated the Scriptures from English into Gaelic, a custom which still continues in some parts of the country (Caithness).

Bedell's Bible was printed in the Irish character; but in 1690, as I have already observed, Kirke published an edition of the Old and New Testament in the Roman character, for circulation among the Scotch Highlanders. This edition consisted of 2000 copies—a small provision for the thousands of Highlanders who inhabited in those days the whole Highlands and Islands of Scotland. The Old Testament in this edition was Bedell's, and the New Testament O'Donell's, as may be readily seen by comparing them. This supply, however, although scanty, was doubtless a great boon to the Highlands, and Kirke of Balquidder deserves to be remembered as one of the greatest benefactors of his Highland countrymen. He certainly deserved a better fate than that which tradition says he met with, for the worthy people of Balquidder believed that their minister was carried away by the fairies.

In 1688 a small catechism was printed in London by Robert Everingham, the printer of Kirke's Bible, which leads me to suppose that it must have been prepared by Kirke. Reid places it among the Gaelic original prose works, but I cannot say whether it is an original work or a translation. I have never seen a copy except one which I happen myself to possess. It once belonged to a very indefatigable collector, the late Principal Lee.

These are all the books which are known to have been printed in Gaelic before the beginning of the last century, and none of them was written in Scotch Gaelic. They were all written in Irish, which continued to be the written language for several years thereafter.

But although there were few printed books in those days, it must not be supposed that the Highlanders had no literature, for their literature was oral, not written, and consisted almost exclusively of genealogy. When people learn to read and write they cease, in great measure, to take the trouble of committing to memory, and that is the reason why so many of the last generation could repeat accurately from memory long genealogies and numberless poems and tales which have now been entirely forgotten. We have no reason to regret that so many of our countrymen can now read and write, and are, therefore, no longer dependent upon oral tradition for their literature, but there is great cause to regret that the rich stores of poetry and of genealogical and historical information which our ancestors possessed have not been carefully preserved.

From the publication of Kirke's Bible in 1690 until the publication of the Confession of Faith in 1725 no Gaelic books were published except a few editions of the Synod of Argyll's Psalter, and also of the Shorter Catechism, if we except a small vocabulary, extending only to a few pages, published in Nicolson's Historical Library in 1702. The first edition of the Confession of Faith was published in 1725. It is stated on the title page that it was translated by the Synod of Argyll. A second edition was published in 1727, and a third in 1756. There have been three other editions since, the last of which was published in 1838. It is a great pity that the Confession of Faith is not more extensively circulated among the people of the Highlands.

I do not know of any other books that were published in Gaelic until near the middle of last century, but during the latter half of that century and the first half of this century several works appeared, the most important of which I shall now notice. They may be divided into original works and translations.

I. ORIGINAL WORKS.

Under the head of original works I may notice—

I. Vocabularies and Dictionaries.

The first Gaelic vocabulary was prepared by Alexander Macdonald, the poet. It was published in 1741, and is now more curious than useful. Before Mr Macdonald's Vocabulary was published a very small vocabulary, or rather glossary, of 6 pages was presented at the end of Kirke's New Testament. Another vocabulary of a few pages was printed, as I have already stated, in Nicolson's Scottish Historical Library in 1702, and another of a few pages, or rather a specimen of one, was published among Macome of Duddeyston's Celtic Tracts in 1732; but the first attempt of any importance to write a Gaelic vocabulary was Macdonald's, to which I have just referred.

In 1780 an important addition was made to Gaelic literature by the publication of Shaw's Dictionary in 2 vols. 4to. As a Lexicon of the Gaelic language Shaw's work is very poor indeed, but still it is valuable. It was founded upon the Irish Lexicons previously published, and contains a large number of Irish words, for which it is now chiefly valuable.

In 1795 Robert Macfarlane's Vocabulary was published, and in 1815 a vocabulary by Patrick Macfarlane, who translated so many Gaelic works, appeared in two parts. These two vocabularies are very meagre, but they may have been useful in their day.

It was not until the publication of Armstrong's Dictionary in 1825 that there was anything in Gaelic really worthy of the name of a Lexicon, but the importance of that work and also of the Highland Society's Dictionary, published in 1828, it is impossible to overestimate. But, valuable as they are, they are imperfect, and in this important department of Gaelic study very much yet remains to be done. There are genuine Gaelic words without number existing in the Highlands which have yet found no place in any Gaelic Lexicon, and he who helps to collect them will be conferring an unspeakable benefit upon Gaelic literature.

Since the publication of the Highland Society's Dictionary other three dictionaries have appeared. Macleod and Dewar's Dictionary, which is but an abridgment of the Highland Society's Dictionary, with some additional words, was published in 1831; Mac Alpine's Dictionary, the first and only attempt to produce a pronouncing dictionary, was completed in 1832; and a small pocket dictionary was published in 1862 by a Roman Catholic clergyman of the name of Ewen Mackechnie.

2. Grammar.

No Gaelic Grammar of any value appeared before O'Molloy's Irish Grammar, which was published in Latin at Rome in 1677. There were several previous attempts, but none of them of any great importance. The next important contribution to Gaelic grammar was Mr M'Cuirtin's Elements of the Irish Language, which was published in 1728. Since Mr M'Cuirtin's several Irish grammars have appeared, the most important by far being O'Donovan's, published in 1845. The Irish and Scotch Gaelic are so similar in structure that an important contribution to the grammatical knowledge of the one language may be regarded as also an important contribution to the grammatical knowledge of the other, and, therefore, in a notice of Gaelic grammars I could not have avoided referring to the Irish grammars which I have mentioned.

Shaw's Analysis, published both in 4to and 8vo in 1778, was the first attempt, professedly, to write a grammar of the Scottish Gaelic. This work, which is now more curious than useful, was superseded (although I believe it was never much studied, and can, therefore, scarcely be said to be superseded), by Stewart's Grammar, of which the first edition was published in 1801. Of the value of this work it is unnecessary to speak. The second edition, collected and considerably enlarged, was published in 1812, and a very good abridgment of it was prefixed to the Highland Society's Dictionary. The grammar prefixed to Armstrong's Dictionary, although not very copious, is useful.

It chiefly follows Stewart. There is also a grammar prefixed to M'Alpine's Dictionary, which may be consulted.

In 1828 a grammar was published by Archibald Currie, who was a teacher at Rothesay, and since a valuable grammar, with which you are acquainted, by Mr James Munro. The first edition appeared in 1835, and the second edition, very much enlarged, in 1843. If I except Dr Mackay, I do not know that any one now living has done so much as Mr Munro to advance Gaelic literature, and his services deserve an acknowledgment from his countrymen which they have not yet received. It often fills me with indignation when I hear ignorant men who cannot write two consecutive sentences of correct Gaelic applauded as great Gaelic scholars, forsooth, and genuine scholars such as Mr Munro virtually neglected.

Two grammars have appeared since Mr Munro's, one by the late Established Church minister of Sleat, and another, a small tractate, by the late Dr Macgillivray, who was himself well acquainted with Gaelic.

3. I come now to glance at Gaelic Periodicals. Several attempts have been made to publish a Gaelic periodical, but after a time all of them proved a failure. This I regard as a great pity, for it indicates a want of interest in Gaelic reading.

The first known attempt to issue a Gaelic periodical was in 1803, when in July of that year the first number of the "Rosroine" was published in Glasgow. It reached the fourth number and died.

The next effort was much more successful. It was the "Gaelic Messenger"—the famous "Teachdaire Gaelach"—the first number of which appeared in May, 1819. It was edited, as is well known, by the late Dr Macleod, and after an apparently prosperous career of two years, it died.

In May, 1835, the "New Gaelic Messenger" was commenced, and after reaching its ninth number it also came to an end.

In May, 1840, the first number of "Cuartear nan Gleann" was issued. It was more fortunate than its predecessors, for it reached its fortieth number; but a dialogue on the Church question brought it at last to an end about the time of the Disruption. It also was edited, it is understood, by the late Dr Macleod.

"Caraid nan Gàidheal" was commenced in April, 1844, but it only reached its fifth number.

In January, 1845, the "Gaelic Witness," edited by Dr Mackay, was commenced. Thirty-six numbers were published, when it was discontinued.

In January, 1848, "Fear Tathaich nam Beann," a periodical in connection with the Established Church, and edited by Mr Clark of Kilmallie, was commenced. It existed for two years. The twenty-fifth number was printed, but never published.

In 1853 a periodical was attempted in Inverness. One number was published, but so far as I remember, the second never made its appearance.

These are all the attempts that have been made in this country to publish a Gaelic periodical, and none of them was successful. Whether a new attempt would succeed better I cannot tell. It is much to be regretted, however, that we have not one single periodical in the Gaelic language. There has been an attempt both in Australia and America to issue Gaelic periodicals, but I cannot speak of the result.

4. I come now to speak of Gaelic Prose Works other than periodicals, and these, I am sorry to say, are not only few, but also unimportant.

Reid notices only thirteen original prose works which were published before 1832, and none of the thirteen is really of much value. One of them is the small Catechism which was published in 1688. Two of them are only different editions of one sermon, and that sermon is a mere translation. The most important of them—M'Dermid's Sermons—is supposed to be a translation of some of Walker's sermons. Two of them are small works—one of them very small—on baptism, by Dr Beith of Stirling. Two of them are small Episcopalian Catechisms. One of them is a very short account, very much in the form of a tract, of Dr Love's life. The rest are sermons.

Since 1832 very few original prose works have been added to our literature, for, except a few Gaelic sermons, the following are the only ones that I remember:—A History of Prince Charles, by Mr Mackenzie, editor of Beauties of Gaelic Poetry; a volume of sermons by the late Mr Macmillan of Arran; a small Treatise on Gaelic Astronomy, by Mr Cornel, Fortingall; Campbell's Highland Tales; and Mr Mackenzie's Gaelic History of Scotland.

So far, therefore, as Gaelic original prose works are concerned, our literature is very barren.

5. I come now, but only to pass from it until another opportunity, to the department in which our literature is richest. I mean Original Poetry. Indeed, this is almost the only literature we possess, and portions of it are not only of real, but also of permanent value. Some of the finest songs ever written have been written in Gaelic, and Ossian's Poems, though a translation, which is itself unquestionably a work of genius, although much inferior to the Gaelic, exercised an influence upon the literature of Europe. There is much genuine poetry still among the people which has never found its way into print, and any one who would help to collect it before it perishes altogether would be rendering signal service to the literature of his country. Let me, therefore, earnestly entreat you, gentlemen, when you come across a good song, more especially if it be an old song, to be careful to take it down, and ways and means can be found for putting it into print. I hope none of you, gentlemen, would wish our native language to be extinguished, and if it is to be preserved, it can only be by means of a native literature, and, therefore, it becomes the duty of all the lovers of that language eagerly to seize hold of every floating fragment of genuine poetry with the view of putting it into a form in which it may become a portion of our permanent literature.

Let me now address to you a few words in regard to the importance of studying Gaelic. Need I say, gentlemen, that those who are to be engaged, as you expect to be engaged, in teaching others should be well acquainted with the medium through which their instruction is to be conveyed? The clearness, force, and point of preaching greatly depends upon an accurate knowledge of the language in which you preach. You know how true this remark is in regard to English, let me assure you that it is equally true in regard to Gaelic. If you wish to be effective Gaelic preachers you must possess an accurate knowledge of the Gaelic language. It is no answer to this statement that many have been very effective preachers who never studied Gaelic grammar, and who even could not speak the language accurately, for how much more effective would they be if they possessed an accurate knowledge of the language in which they spoke, when they were so effective notwithstanding that disadvantage?

Many who cannot distinguish a grammatical from an ungrammatical sentence in Gaelic think that they know that language sufficiently well, and need not be at any pains to know it better. Now it is remarkable that those who know it best are the very persons who feel most keenly that they have need of knowing it better. A little knowledge is necessary here, as in other things, to make us sensible of our ignorance. Very few, indeed, know Gaelic so well as not to need to know it better. At all events, I am not one of them, for there are few days of my life that I do not learn something about Gaelic which I did not know before.

Some, again, think that no one can speak Gaelic ungrammatically, and I have heard it said that there is no such thing as Gaelic grammar. Now it is quite true that some speak Gaelic grammatically who never learned Gaelic grammar, as there are many who speak English grammatically who never think about the rules of English grammar, and some who never even acquired a knowledge of them, and as there are many who reason accurately who have never heard of the rules of reasoning. But as we do not argue that on that account, English grammar and logic need not be studied, neither should we argue that Gaelic grammar needs not be studied because some persons speak Gaelic grammatically who have never studied Gaelic grammar. As for those who think that there is no such thing as Gaelic grammar I shall leave them in undisturbed possession of their opinion. Let me, however, tell you, gentlemen, what some of you already know, that you will find the study of Gaelic, the study of the structure and affinities of that language, to be a source of mental discipline not inferior to the study of the ancient classics, while it leads you, at the same time, into new and attractive fields of study. There is no more interesting study than comparative Celtic philology, and for its successful prosecution a knowledge of Gaelic is, of course, indispensable. On this account alone our language is being at present eagerly studied by Continental scholars. Why should Highlanders allow all the laurels in this field, into which they have so much right to enter, to be plucked by the hands of strangers?

But apart from these higher considerations, the lower one of mere money advantage should at present stimulate students to the study of Gaelic, as some gentlemen who take a deep interest in this matter are offering valuable bursaries for competition among Gaelic-speaking students. It is worth while to pay some attention to the study of Gaelic even for the sake of winning a bursary of £20, £15, or even £10. Besides, by the generosity of the same parties, I have reason to believe that a certain sum will be distributed this year, as there was last year, as prizes among the students attending in this place. Allow me, then, gentlemen, to express the hope that the classes which we are now about to commence will prove at least as successful as the class which was taught here last year. The principal condition of success is regular attendance, for the preparation of the prescribed exercises will not entail upon you a very great sacrifice of time.

GAELIC—ITS HISTORY AND LITERATURE.¹

Tha mi a' rùnachadh aig an àm so labhairt ruibh mu 'n Ghàidhlig—ar càinnt dhùthchasaich, agus mu chuid do na leabhraichibh a sgrìobhadh innte.

Faodaidh sinn a bhì ag eadar-dhealachadh ann am beachd do thaobh aois na Gàidhlig, ach tha sinn uile do 'n aon beachd do thaobh cliù agus buadhan na càinnt sin a dh' fhoghlaim iomadh againn aig glùn ar màthar, agus a labhair sinn mu 'm b'aithne dhuinn a bheag mu chàinnt air bith eile. Dhuinne, air an aobhar sin, cha 'n 'eil càinnt ann a ta cho blasda no cho buadhach ris an t-sean Ghàidhlig, ged nach urrainn duinn a ràdh mu déighinn, mar thubhairt am bard—

“'S i 'labhair Adhamb, ann am Pàrras féin,
'S bu shiùbhlach Gàidhlig o bheul àlainn Eubh.”

Ach cha ruigear leas cron fhaotainn do 'n Ghàidheal air son a bhì a' meas nach 'eil càinnt air bith cosmhuil ris a' chàinnt a's faisge a thig air a chridhe féin, agus le 'n dùisgear smuaintean ann nach dùisgear le aon chàinnt eile. Tha e nàdarra, uime sin, dhasan a bhì do 'n beachd

“ Gur h-i a's crìoch àraid
Do gach càinnt fo 'n ghréin,
Gu 'r smuaintidh fhàsmhor
A phàirteachadh ri 'chéil';
Ar n-inntimean a rùsgadh
Agus rùn ar crìdh',
(Le 'r giùimh 's le 'r giùlan)
Sùrd chur air ar dè;
'S gu laoidh ar beòil
Dh' iobradh do Dhia nan dùl,
'S i 'h-àrd chrìoch mhòr
Gu bhì toirt dha-san cliù.”

Ged bhitheas e draghail a dheanamh a mach gu 'n

“ Robh a' Ghàidhlig ullamh,
'N a glòir fìor-ghuineach cruaidh
Air feadh na cruinne
Mu 'n d' thuilich an Tuil-ruadh,”

¹ This lecture belongs to the same period as the first one.

aontaichidh sinn, mar Ghàidheil, ri beachd a bhàird cheudna, an uair a thubhairt e :—

“ Ge h-ìomadh cànan
O linn Bhàbeil fhuair
Sìochd sin Adhaimh,
'S i a' Ghàidhlig a thug buaidh
Do 'n labhradh dhàicheil
An urram ard gun tuairms',
Gun mheang, gun fhàillinn,
Is urrainn càch a luaidh.”

agus cha mheas sinn gu 'n robh e fada cli an uair a thubhairt e,

“ 'S i an aon chànan
Am beul nam bàrd 's nan éisg,
'S i a's feàrr gu càineadh
O linn Bhàbeil féin,
'S i a's feàrr gu moladh,
'S is torrunnaiche gleus
Gu ram no laoidh
A tharruing gaoth troimh bheul ;
'S i a's feàrr gu combairl'
'S gu gnothuch a chur gu feum
Na aon teang' Eorpach
A dh' aindheoin bòsd nan Greug ;
'S i a's feàrr gu rosg
'S air chosaibh a chur duain,
'S i cruaidh uchl cosgair
A bhrosnachadh an t-sluaigh.”

Ni mò a mheasas sinn gu 'n dubhairt Duncha Bàn tuilleadh 's a' chòir mu 'n Ghàidhlig 'n uair a labhair e na briathra snasmhor a leanas :—

'S i a's feàrr gu togail inntinn
Le binn-ghuth còmhraidh thlàth,
'S i a's sgaitiche gu mi-mholadh
'S a's mìne 'nochdas gràdh ;
'N àm cruinneachadh nam mìltean
Le piob gu iomairt lann,
'S i a dhùisgeadh colg air òigridh,
'N uair 'thogtadh sròl ri crann.”

Tha mi an dùil nach 'eil Gàidheil 's an tigh so an nochd nach aidich, an nuair a bheachdaicheas e air cliù agus air buadhaibh na Gàidhlig,

“ Gu 'm bu mhòr am beud gu 'm bàsaicheadh
A' chànan a's feàrr buaidh ;”

agus gur h-e dleasdanas nan Gàidheal do 'n d' fhàg an aithrichean i mar oighreachd gach oidhirp a thabhairt a chum a cumail suas. Tha cuid, gun teagamh, leis an nàir a bhi ag aideachadh gur urrainn doibh a' Ghàidhlig a labhairt, ged nach urrainn doibh làn am beòil do 'n Bheurla a labhairt gu cuimhir, ach tha mi an dùil nach 'eil an àireamh ach tearc. Is mi-chiatach an nì bhi a' cluinntinn duine, ann an droch Bheurla, a deanamh uaille as gu'm bheil e air a' Ghàidhlig a dhì-chuimhneachadh.

Is e an ceud nì mu 'm bheil mi gu labhairt ruibh aig an àm so Dàimh na Gàidhlig ri cainntibh aig am bheil càirdeas rithe, nì o 'm faod sinn 'fhaicinn ciod e a b-àite am measg chainntean eile an Ìomhain.

O na thubhairt nì cheana, tha sibh air 'fhaicinn nach 'eil mi de 'n bheachd gu 'm bi a' Ghàidhlig

“An labhairt 'bha 's a' ghàradh
'Dh' fhàg Adhamh aig an t-sluagh ;”

Ach ged nach gabh i lorgachadh air ais cho fada 's bu mhath le cuid a bhi 'ga lorgachadh, cha 'n eil teagamh air bith nach 'eil i glè aosda. Tha iomadh do luchd fòghluim, a ta mion-ramsachadh na cùise so, a' cumail a mach gu 'm bheil i, co dhiubh, cho sean ris a chànan Eabhraidhich, anns an deachaidh a' chuid a's mò do 'n t-Scann Tiomnadh a sgrìobhadh, ach nach 'eil nì 's faide air a labhairt. Tha e air a dheanamh a mach, mar an ceudna, gu soilleir, gu 'm bheil dàimh fhaisg aig a' Ghàidhlig ri cainntibh eile, dhe'm bheil cuid fathast beò, agus air an labhairt le àireamh mhòr do shluagh an t-saoghail.

Tha cainntean a' chinne-dhaoine air an roinn 'n an teaghlachibh, a réir agus mar tha na freumh-fhocail o 'm bheil iad a' teachd a mach a' comh-chòrdadh r' a chéile. 'N uair a ghabhas sinn cainnt mar a ta a' Ghàidhlig, a' Bheurla, no an Laidinn, chi sinn gu'm bheil na focail air an deanamh suas do dhà chuibhrinn—na freumh fhocail agus na litrichean a ta air an cur ri na freumh fhocail a chum bhi a' nochdadh mach dàimhean sònruichte agus eadar-dhealaichte anns am feudar beachdachadh air an smuain a ta am freumh-fhocal a' combarrachadh. Ma sheallas sinn ris an fhocal gabhadh, airson eiseimpleir, chi sinn gu 'm bheil e air a dheanamh suas do dhà earrann—gabh agus idh—gabhadh. 'S e gabh an fhreumh, agus tha idh a' cumail a mach an tim a ta ri teachd mar eadar-dhealaichte araon o 'n tim a bha ann, agus o 'n tim a ta nis ann. Ach o 'n fhreimh cheudna tha focail eile a fàs a ta eadar-dhealaichte o chéile ann am brìgh, ach aig am bheil dlù chàirdeas r'a chéile, mar a ta ghabh, gabhadh, gabhair, ghabhainn. A nis an uair a lomas sinn na focail sinn de na litrichean a ta toirt brìgh fa leth do gach aon diubh tha sinn a' faotainn na frèimhe o 'm bheil iad uile a' fàs, eadhon gabh; agus ma théid sinn gu seann sgrìobhaidhibh gheibh sinn a mach gu 'm bheil gabh féin a' teachd o fhreimh ni 's sine—eadhon, gab. 'N uair a ruisgeas sinn, air an dòigh cheudna, focail eile na cainnte nach 'eil iad féin 'n am freumh-fhocail, ruigidh sinn na ceud fhocail air am bheil a' chàinnt a ta sinn a' labhairt air a stéidheachadh. Agus an uair a bhuinear air an t-seòl cheudna ri cainntibh eile, agus a nithear am freumh-fhocail a choimhmeas r'a chéile, chithear ciod iad na cainntean aig am bheil am freumhan a comh-chordadh ri 'chéile. Agus mar sin tha cainntean air an roinn 'nan teaghlachibh a réir agus mar a ta am freumhan a' nochdadh gu 'n d' thàinig iad a mach o 'n aon bhonn. Air an dòigh so tha 'n Eabhra, a' chainnt Shirianach, agus a' chainnt Chaldéach do 'n aon teaghlach, ris an abrar anns a' Bheurla an Semetic do bhrìgh gu 'n robh iad air an labhairt le sliochd Sheim; tha 'n Sanskrit, a' Ghreigis, an Laidinn, agus cainntean eile a tha càirdeach dhoibh, do theaghlach ris an abrar an t-Indo-European, do bhrìgh gu 'n robh iad air an labhairt araon ann an Innsean na h-àirde-an-ear, agus anns an Roinn-Eorpa; agus tha cainntean eile air an roinn, air an dòigh cheudna, 'nan teaghlachibh eile mu 'n nach ruig mi leas labhairt aig an àm.

A nis ciod an teaghlach do 'm buin a' Ghàidhlig? Bha daoine fòghluimte a' meas, ré ùine fhada, gu 'm buineadh a' Ghàidhlig do 'n aon teaghlach ris an Eabhra. Agus gu 'n teagamh air bith tha 'n dà chàinnt a' comh-chordadh ri 'chéile ann an tuilleadh agus aon ni. Tha àireamh lionmhor de 'm freumh-fhocail glé chosmhuil r'a chéile, mar thug ar ceann-suidhe urramach fainear anns an òraid ris an d'éisd sinn o cheann ghoirid le 'leithid do thoil-inntinn. Tha nithe eile, mar an ceudna, anns am bheil comh-chòrdadh iongantach eadar an dà chàinnt. Ach ged tha sin mar sin, tha e nis air a dheanamh a mach cho soilleir agus a ghabhas ni air bith deanamh a mach nach ann de 'n teaghlach do 'm buin an Eabhra a bhuineas a' Ghàidhlig, ach do 'n teaghlach eile a dh' ainmich mi—an t-Indo-Europeanach. Do 'n teaghlach so buinidh na cainntean a leanas:—Sanskrit, Zend no seann chainnt Phersia, Gréigis, Laidinn, na cainntean Ceilteach, na cainntean Gearmailteach (Beurla, &c.), Lituanach, agus Slabhonach (Ruisianach, &c.)

Tha daoine fòghluimte a ta ri mion-rannsachadh air comh-chòrdadh nan cainntean Indo-Europeanach r' a chéile, ag eadar-dhealachadh ann am beachd do thaobh an àite a bhuineas do 'n Ghàidhlig anns an teaghlach. Tha cuid a' smuaineachadh gu 'm bheil i ni 's càra do 'n Laidinn agns do 'n Ghreigis, ach gu sònruichte do 'n Laidinn, na do na cainntibh Gearmailteach, agus tha cuid eile a' smuaineachadh gu 'm bheil i ni 's càra do na cainntibh Gearmailteach na do 'n Laidinn agus do 'n Ghrèigis. Cha 'n 'eil teagamh air bith do thaobh càirdeis na Gàidhlig do na cainntibh sin air fad ach is e mo bheachd, cho fada 's a tha mi air bhi comasach air a' chùis so rannsachadh air mo shon féin, gu 'm bheil i ni 's càra do 'n Laidinn agus do 'n Ghrèigis na do chainnt air bith eile. Tuigidh sibh nach 'eil mi a' labhairt aig an àm mu'n Ghàidhlig Albannaich mar eadar-dhealaichte o mhèuraibh eile na seann Ghàidhlig, ach gu 'm bheil mi a' labhairt mu 'n Ghàidhlig gu coitchionn—mu 'n Ghàidhlig de nach 'eil a' Ghàidhlig Albannach ach a mhàin 'n a meur.

A chum bhi a' nochdadh dlù-chàirdeis na Gàidhlig ris an Laidinn agus a' Ghrèigis, ach gu sònruichte an Laidinn, bheir mi air aghaidh cha 'n e a mhàin focail anns am bheil na cainntean so a' comhchordadh r' a chèile, ach mar an ceudna, cuid de na laghannaibh no seòlaidhibh a rèir am bheil na litrichean air an atharrachadh eadar na cainntean sin—an ni ris an abrar anns a' Bheurla, "The laws of letter-changes."

Nan ceadaicheadh ùine dh' fhaodainn mòran a labhairt mu na rioghailtibh a rèir am bheil focail air an atharrachadh eadar an Laidinn agus a' Ghaidhlig, ach o na thubhairt mi chithear nach 'eil cainntean a' fàs suas o'n freumhaibh gun rian, gun riaghailt, ach gu 'm bheil iad a' fàs a rèir riaghailtean sònraichte a dh' fhaodar fhaotainn a mach, agus a ta comh-chòrdadh, mar dh' fhaodar leigeil ris, nan robh cothrom air sin a dheanamh, ris an doigh anns am bheil na litrichean gu nàdarra air an fuaimneachadh.

Ach tha 'n dlù-chàirdeas a ta eadar an Laidinn agus a' Ghaidhlig leis a' chomh-chordadh shoilleir araon ann am fuaim agus ann am brìgh a ta eadar iomadh focal anns na cainntibh sin, mar a ta na focail a leanas : sin-o agus sìn ; cel-o agus ceil ; linguo agus leig ; tenuis agus tana, &c.

Ach tha na focail a ta leigeil ris dlù-chàirdeis na Laidinn agus na Gaidhlig cho lionmhor, agus gu'n sgèithichinn sibh 'g an aithris.

Tha e soiller, ma ta, gu 'm buin an Laidinn agus a' Ghaidhlig do 'n aon teaghlach. Mur d' thàinig aon diubh a mach o 'n aon eile cha ghabh e àicheadh nach d' thàinig iad le 'chèile o 'n aon fhreámh. Bu mhath leinn gu 'n teagamh, mar Ghaidheil, gu 'm b' urrainn duinn a dhearbhadh gur h-i an t-sean Ghaidhlig chòir màthair nan cainntean eile ris am bheil càirdeas aice, ach ged is mòr ar gràdh do 'r cainnt dhùthchasaich cha 'n fhaod sinn ni a ràdh mu déighinn nach seas ri aghaidh dearbhaidh ; agus, air an aobhar sinn, ged tha sgoilear cho fòghluimte ri Dr Newman, Fear-teagaisg Laidinn ann an aon do àrd-oil-thighibh Shasuinn ag oidhirpeachadh bhi a' feuchainn gu 'n d' thàinig an Laidinn o 'n Ghàidhlig, 's e a 's teàruinnte dhuinn gu 'n dol ni 's fhaide na gràdh gu 'm bheil na comharraidhean càirdeis a ta iad a' giùlan cho lionmhor agus cho soilleir, agus nach gabh e àicheadh gu 'm bheil an dà chàinnt o 'n aon fhréimh, agus air an aobhar sin gu 'm buin iad do 'n aon teaghlach. Is call, agus cha bhuanachd, do fhìor fhòghlum a bhiodh a' tarruing comhdhùnaidhean o bhunaitibh nach seas ris an dearbhadh a's géire a ghabhas cur orra, leis a' mhuintir a ta a' mion-sgrùdadh na dàimhe a ta eadar na cainntean sin.

Ach mar faod sinn a bhì a' comh-dhùnadh gur leoir focail a bhì ni-éigin cosmhuil r' a chéile ann am fuaim gu bhì a' dearbhadh gu 'm bheil iad o na h-aon fhreumhaibh, cha 'n fhaod sinn, air an làimh eile, a bhì a' comh-dhùnadh nach faod focail a ta gu tur neo-chosmhuil r' a chéile ann am fuaim a bhì ann an dlù-chàirdeas d' a chéile. Ma ghabhas sinn na focail eveque agus bishop cha 'n fhaigh sinn anns an aon fhocal aon litir a ta 's an fhocal eile, ach ged nach faigh, tha 'n dà fhocal, mar tha Morair Neaves a' feuchainn duinn a' teachd o 'n fhocal Ghréigis episcopos. Cha 'n 'eil na focail eun, ite, pen, feather, cosmhuil r' a chéile aon chuid 'n an litreachadh no 'n am fuaimibh, gidheadh tha iad a' teachd, mar tha Ebel a' nochdadh, o 'n aon fhréimh, ach o fhréimh nach 'eil cosmhuil ri son do na focail a dh' ainmich mi. 'S i an fhreumh o 'm bheil iad uile teachd pet. Tha i againn slàn anns an fhocal Ghréigis petomai, itealaich. O 'n fhréimh pet, le bhì a' leigeil sìos p, a réir aoine de na riaghailtibh a dh' ainmich mi cheana, gheibh sinn ite agus itealaich. Tha pen a' teachd o 'n fhocal Laidinn penna, a ta a ciallachadh ite no iteag, agus tha penna o fhocal Laidinn a ta ni 's sine, petna. Tha feather a' teachd o 'n fhocal feder, agus chithear gu soilleir an dàimh a ta eadar am focal sin agus an fhreumh pet. Chithear a ris an dàimh a ta eadar eun agus am focal Breatannach edn, aig am bheil an aon bhrìgh, agus a ris eadar edn agus ethn, agus eadar ethn agus pet, petna.

Dh' fheudaim mar an ceudna, fheuchainn duibh gu 'm bheil na focail, gnìomh, gin, gineal, kin, kind, genus, gentile, agus focail eile, nach 'eil gle' chosmhuil ri' chéil ann am fuaim, a' teachd gu léir a mach o 'n aon fhréimh gen, a ta againn anns an fhocal Ghréigis egenomen. Chithear gu soilleir le còmhadh na seann Ghaidhlig, a ta gu mòr eadar-dhealaichte o 'n Ghaidhlig a ta sinn a nis a' labhairt, gu 'm bheil an dà fhocal gnìomh agus *gin*¹ o 'n aon fhréimh.

Ged thubhairt am bard :—

“Cha 'n fheum i iasad
'S cha mhò a dh' iarras uath' ;

¹ Dr Stokes now takes the root gen of English know, ken, Greek gignosko, &c., as the root of gnìomh.—Ed.

O an t-sean mhàthair chiatach,
Làn do chiadaibh buaidh !"

tha e fìor gu 'm bheil àireamh mòr do fhocalaibh iasaid anns a' Ghàidhlig. Cha 'n 'eil mi a' labhairt aig an àm mu na focail Bheurla leis am bheil a' Ghàidhlig air a measgachadh agus air a truailleadh anns na ceàrnaibh a tha crìochadh ris a' Ghalldachd, ach mu na focalaibh a bhuineas do chainntibh eile a ta air faotainn àite anns a' chainnt, air chor a 's gu 'm bheil iad a' deanamh suas cuibhrinn do 'n chainnt a ta sinne a nise a' labhairt. Tha mòran do na focalaibh iasaid so air an toirt o 'n Laidinn agus o 'n Ghréigis troimh an Laidinn. Bha iomadh dhiubh, mar ta eaglais, sagart, creud, air an toirt a stigh do 'n chainnt leis a' Chreidimh Chrìosdaidh. A nis is fheadar na focail sin, agus mòran eile, ma ta scriòbh o scribo; leugh o lego; creud o 'n fhocal credo; avradh ('s an t-sean Ghaidhlig alrad) o adoratio; ceist o 'n fhocal questio; seirbhis o servo; agus teistean o 'n fhocal testis, a bhi air an cur a thaobh an uair a thathar a' rannsachadh a mach dàimhe na Laidinn agus na Gàidhlig r' a chèile. Ach an deigh sin a dheanamh, bithidh focail ni 's leoir air am fagail mu nach gabh teagamh a bhi nach fìor fhocail Ghaidhealach iad, gu bhi a' dearbhadh gu soilleir gu 'm buin an da chainnt so do 'n aon teaghlach. Agus eadhon do thaobh nam focal iasaid féin gheibhear freumhan iomadh dhiubh anns a' Ghàidhlig an uair a ni sinn an lorgachadh suas troimh an Laidinn gu 'm fìor fhreumhaibh. Tha m focal syriobh, gun teagamh, a' teachd o 'n fhocal Laidinn scribo. Tha 'm focal Laidinn gravis agus am focal Gàidhlig garbh dlù-chairdeach d' a chèile, ged nach treagair e a ràdh mu dhuine mu 'n can sinn: "He is a grave man," gu 'm bheil e 'n a dhuine garbh. Agus tha so a' toirt a ris fo 'm chomhair gu'm bheil am focal, garbh, ni 's faisge air an t-seann Sanskrit, garu, na 'm focal gravis, agus gu 'm faod an ni ceudna bhi air ràdh mu iomadh focal eile a' ta cairdeach r' a chèile anns an Laidinn agus anns a' Ghaidhlig, ni a dh' fheumar a thoirt faimear ann bhi a' coimhneas nan canntean so ri 'chèile a chum bhi a' deanamh a mach cò aca a 's sme.

Cha cheadaich ùine dhomh mòran a labhairt mu dhàimh na Gàidhlig ris a' Ghréigis, no dòighibh anns am bheil na litrichean air an atharrachadh eadar an dà chainnt, agus air an aobhar sin cha dean mi ach àireamh do fhocalaibh a chur fo 'r comhair a ta leigeil ris gu'm bheil dlù-dhàimh eadar an da chainnt.

Tha 'm focal Greigis chortos a ciallachadh àite air a dhùnadh (enclosed place). Comh-chordadh ris an fhocal so tha againn anns an Laidinn hortus (lios), agus anns a' Ghaidhlic gort no gart, focal ris an coinnich sinn gu tric ann an ainmibh àiteachan, agus a ta againn mar an ceudna anns an fhocal gortan, achadh beag. Tha na focail garden agus yard anns a' Bheurla càirdeach do 'n fhocal so. Tha 'm focal heimu a' ciallachadh anns a' Greigis geamhradh, reodhadh, fuachd. Comh-chordadh ri na focail sin tha 'm focal Laidinn hiems, agus an seann-focal Gaidhlig geamh o 'm bheil geamhradh a' teachd, mar a ta samhradh o 'n t-seann-focal sàmh. Tha chairo a' ciallachadh bhi deanamh aoibhneas, agus comh-chordadh ris tha 'm focal gairdeachas. Chomh-chordadh ri gignomai o 'n fhreimh gen, tha gigno anns an Laidinn agus gin anns a' Ghaidhlig, agus faodar a thabhairt fainear gu 'm bheil gin uì 's faisge air an t-seann fhreimh na aon chuid gignomai no gigno. Tha 'n t-seann fhreimh againn ann egenomen anns a' Ghréigis agus ann an rogensam, anns an t-seann Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ris an fhocal Ghréigis tegos, mar an ceudna stegos (còmhach air son tìghe), tha tectum o 'n fhocal tego anns an Laidinn, agus tìgh agus teach anns a' Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ri dakru anns a' Ghréigis tha lacryma anns an Laidinn (l air a eur air son d cosmhuil ri lingua agus dingua, teangadh) agus deur anns a' Ghaidhlig, comh-chordadh ri dakru anns a' Ghréigis. Comh-chordadh ri kurios anns a' Ghréigis tha curaidh anns a' Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ri krites anns a' Ghréigis tha ceart anns a' Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ri olena anns a' Ghréigis, tha ulna anns an Laidinn, agus uileann anns a' Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ri klino anns a' Ghréigis tha clino anns an Laidinn agus clao anns a' Ghaidhlig. Comh-chordadh ri kuon, kunos, tha canis anns an Laidinn, agus cu, con, anns a' Ghaidhlig.

O na focail sin, agus o iomadh focal eile a dh' fhaodainn a chur fo 'r comhair, chithear gu 'm bheil dàimh dhlù eadar a' Ghaidhlig agus a' Ghréigis agus an Laidinn, o 'm bheil e soilleir gu 'm buin iad do 'n aon teaghlach.

Nan ceadaicheadh ùine dh' fhaodainn dol air aghaidh a nis gu bhi a' nochdadh a' chàirdeis a ta eadar a' Ghaidhlig agus cuid eile de na cainntibh a bhuineas do 'n teaghlach Indo-Europeach, mar a ta na cainntibh Gearmailteach (the Germanic); ach do bhrìgh agus nach ceadaich an ùine sin domh, is ann a labhras mi beagan —ni 's lugha gu mòr na bha mi aon uair a' rùnachadh a bhi labhairt—a nis anns an dara àite, mu na meuraibh anns am bheil an t-seann chainnt Ghaidhealach air a roinn.

Tha sèa cainntean air teachd a mach o fhreimh na seann Ghaidhlig, agus faodar iad sin a roinn 'n an dà theaghlach a tha gu mòr ag eadar-dhealachadh o chèile, ged tha e soilleir gu 'm bheil iad o 'n aon stoc. Do aon de na teaghlachibh sinn buinidh a' chainnt Bhreatanach, no a' chainnt a ta air a labhairt ann an Wales; an Armerie a ta air a labhairt le aireamh mhòr anns an earrann sin de 'n Fhraing ris an abrar Brittany, agus a' chainnt a bha aon uair air a labhairt ann an Cornwall, ach a ta nise r' a faighinn a mhàin ann an leabhraichibh, agus cha 'n 'eil iad sin lionmhor. Do 'n teaghlach eile buinidh a' Ghaidhlig Albannach, a' Ghaidhlig Eireannach, agus a' Ghaidhlig Mhanainneach. Cha 'n e a mhàin gu 'm bheil na cainntean a' comh-chordadh r' a chéile ann am mòran de 'n cuid fhocal, ach tha iad a' comh-chordadh anns an dòigh no rian anns am bheil am focail a' leantainn a chéile, agus a' riaghladh no atharrachadh a chéile, an uair a ta iad air an cur cuideachd ann an sgrìobhadh, no ann an labhairt; agus ged a tha iad ag eadar-dhealachadh o chéile ann an dòigh fuaimneachadh nam focal, gidheadh, eadhon anns an ni sin féin tha mòran comh-chordaidh eatorra. 'Nuair a chluinneas tu a' chainnt Bhreatannach air a labhairt no air a leughadh, is gann gu 'n tuig thu focal di, ach an uair a ramsaicheas tu na focail, agus an dòigh anns am bheil iad air an cur an alltaibh a cheil, agus anns am bheil na litrichean air an atharrachadh an uair a ta na focail air an cur an taic a chéile ann an sgrìobhadh no ann an labhairt, chì thu gu soilleir an dlù-dhàimh a ta eadar a' chainnt sin agus do chainnt féin.

Chi sinn cho faisg agus tha focail na cainnt Bhreatannaich air focail na cainnt againn féin, agus aig an àm cheudna an t-eadar-dhealachadh a ta eatorra, an uair a choimhmeasas sinn r' a chéile na focail a leanas: Bardd agus bard; blynedd agus bliadhna; bôn agus bun; bywyd agus beatha; byd agus bith; bychan agus beagan; caer (cadar) agus cathair; cad agus cath; cam agus cam; cam agus ceum; ci agus cu; cládd agus cladh; clock agus clog; cogail agus cuigeal; cóll agus call; chwaer agus piuthar, no siuar; chwerw agus searbh; chwant agus sannt (chw airson s); dáll agus dall; du agus dubh; dwern agus dorn; dwfn agus domhain; dant agus deud (n air a gleidheadh—cant=ceud); gwr, gwyr, agus fear, fír; gwyl agus féill; gwyr agus fíar; gwir agus fìor; gwín agus fiòn; halen agus salainn (h agus s); hanes agus sanas; hesp agus seasg; hun agus suain; llafar agus labhar (loud); llain agus lann; llam agus leum; llaw agus làmh; llawn agus làn; lléa agus leugh; llo agus laogh; Mab, map, agus mac (c agus p); pen agus ceann; plant agus clann; pren agus crann; pedwar agus ceathair; pimp agus cuig; rhann agus rann; rhin agus rùn; rhyn agus ruinn; syllw agus sealladh; tant agus teud; oen agus uan; ydlan agus iodhlán; yymyl agus iomal; ynys agus inis; ystrét agus streath; mawr agus mòr; dyn, dynwn, agus duine, daoine.

O chuid de na focail a dh'ainmich mi faodar 'fhaicinn gu'm bheil a' chainnt Bhreatannach ann an iomadh de 'focail, mar tha dant, cant, tant, ni 's faisge air an Laidinn na a' Ghaidhlig Albannach.

Ach 's e a' Ghaidhlig Eireannach agus a Ghaidhlig Mhan-

ainneach a s faisg gu mòr do 'n Ghaidhlig Albannaich ; agus tha iad sin cho faisg di 's gu 'm faodar a ràdh nach 'eil anna, da rìreadh, ach an aon chàinnt, ged nach 'eil e furasd do'n Albannach an t-Eirannach a thuigsinn a' labhairt na Gaidhlig. Tha nithe, gun teagamh, anns am bheil a chàinnt Albannach agus a chàinnt Eireannach ag eadar-dhealachadh. Tha a' chàinnt Eireannach a cur an ceill nì a tathar a' deanamh anns an àm a ta làthair le aon fhocal, ach tha a' Ghaidhlig Albannach agus a' Ghaidhlig Bhreatannach, co-ionnan ris an Eabhra, gu 'n chomas sin a dheanamh. Anns na cainntibh sin tha am focal a ta nochdadh an ama a ta ri teachd (the future tense) gu tric a' seasamh àite an fhocail a ta nochdadh an ama a ta làthair (present tense). (Illustration—An ti a chreideas). Agus tha na nithe sin, agus nithe eile anns am bheil a' Ghaidhlig agus a' Ghaidhlig Bhreatannach a' comh-chordadh ris an Eabhra nach 'eil do 'n aon teaghlach riu, a' dol ceum a chum bhì a' dearbhadh na fìrinn a ta air a foillseachadh ann am focal Dé, eadhon, gu'n "d' rinn Dia do aon fhuil uile chinnich dhaoine," agus is taitneach gu cinnteach 'n uair a ta na comh-dhùnaidhean gus am bheil daoine foghluinte, mar a ta Max Müller, troimh bhì a' coimheas ri 'chéile chainnte a' chinneadh-dhaoine, agus teistean focail Dé, a' comh-chordadh ri 'chéile.

Ach ged tha a' Ghaidhlig Albannach agus a' Ghaidhlig Eireannach ag eadar-dhealachadh, mar thug mi fainear, ann an cuid do nithibh, tha iad, da rìreadh, cho faisg air a chéile 'n am focail agus 'n an rianaibh gramaireal, 's gu 'm faod neach air bith a leughas agus a thuigeas an aon chàinnt, a' chàinnt eile a leughadh agus a thuigsinn mar an ceudna, ged, theagamh, nach teid aige air na focail fhuaimneachadh gu cothromach anns a' chàinnt nach do chleachd e bhì labhairt. Leughaidh mi nise dhuibh beagan do'n Ghaidhlig Eireannach, air tùs, cho faisg agus a's urrainn domh air an dòigh anns an bheil i air a leughadh le na Eireannach féin, agus a ris anns ann an dòigh anns an léigh sinn ar cainnt féin, a chum agus gu 'm faic sibh cho faisg agus a ta iad air a chéile, agus, aig an àm cheudna, mar a ta iad ag eadar-dhealachadh 'n am fuaimibh.

Cha d' fhàg mi dhomh féin mòran ùine a chum bhì a' labhairt, a nis anns an treas àite mu chuid de na leabhraichibh a chaidh sgrìobhadh ann ar cainnt féin, ach feumaidh mi mu 'n co-dhùn mi beagan a labhairt mu 'n déighinn.

Chinnear muinntir gu tric ag ràdh nach deachaidh mòran a sgrìobhadh anns a' Ghaidhlig, agus ma tha iad a' ciallachadh nach deachaidh ach beag a sgrìobhadh anns a' Ghaidhlig ann an coimheas ris na chaidh sgrìobhadh anns a Bheurla, agus ann an iomadh cainnt eile, aidichidh sinn gu 'm bheil iad ceart ; ach their sinn aig an àm cheudna, gu 'm bheil sgrìobhaidhean anns a' Ghaidhlig nach leigear air dhì-chuimhne am feadh 's a mbaireas an saoghal, agus tha iad ni 's lionmhoire na tha iomadh am barail, ged nach urrainn domh labhairt aig an àm ann am farsuingeachd mu'n déighinn.

Is e an ceud leabhar a bha riamh air a chur a nach anns a' Ghaidhlig "Foirnna Nurmuidheadh," no "Knox's Liturgy," dh' eadar-theangaichteadh leis an Easbuig Carsuel. Bha 'n leabhar so air a chur an clò 's a' bliadhna 1567, dà cheud bliadhna mu 'n deachaidh an Tiomnadh Nuadh a chur a mach 's a' Ghaidhlig Albannaich. Tha 'n leabhar so a nis ro-ainneamh r' a fhaotainn. Tha aon diu ann an leabhar-lann Diuc Earraghaidheil, agus cha 'n 'eil cunntas air aon eile dhiubh air nach 'eil easbhuidh.

B' e Leabhar Cheist Chalbhìn, a réir coslais, an dara leabhar a chuireadh a mach 's a' Ghaidhlig. Tha 'n leabhar, mar an ceudna, ro-ainneamh. Bha e air a chlà-bhualadh 's a' bhliadhna 1631. Anns an leabhar so, maille ri Leabhar-Cheist Chalbhìn, tha cuig sean laoidhean : Faosaid Iain Steuairt Tighcarn na H-Apaimn, agus feadhainn eile.

B' e 'n treas leabhar a chuireadh a mach anns a Ghaidhlig, cho fada a's fiosrach sinn, "An ceud Chaogad do Shalmaibh Dhaibhaidh" air an tarruing as an Eabhra, "Am meadar Dhana Gaidhlig, le Seanadh Earraghaidheil." Chuireadh an Leabhar so an clò 's a' bhliadhna 1659. Tha e nis fìor ainneamh, ni air am bheil deadh fhios atg cuid de na Leabhar-reiceadairean.

B' e 'n ceathramh leabhar, a réir coslais, "Salma Dhaibhidh a nmeadrochd, le Mr. Raibeard Kirke, Minisdir Soisgeil Chrìosd aig Balbhuidir (Balquhiddier)." Chlò-bhualadh an leabhar so 's a' bhliadhna 1684, agus tha e mar an ceudna ainneamh r'a fhaotainn, ged is aithne dhomh mu leth-dusan diubh. Tha na Sairm gu leir air an cur am meadrachd anns an leabhar so le Mr Kirke, duine 'bha ro fheumail 'na latha do Ghaidheil na h-Alba leis na leabhraichean a chuir e mach 'n an measg.

Anns a bhliadhna 1688 bha leabhar beag cheist air a chur a mach, a réir mo bharrail le Mr Kirke, agus is cosmhuil gu 'm b' e sin an cuigeamh leabhar a chlà-bhualadh 's a' Ghaidhlig.

Anns a' bhliadhna 1689, bha 'n Seann Tiomnadh agus an Tiomnadh Nuadh air an cur a mach anns an litir Ròmanaich a chum leas nan Gaidheal Albannach le Mr Kirke. Bha dà mhìle anns a' chlà-bhualadh, agus b' e sin a' cheud uair a bha am Biobull, faodaidh mi a ràdh, air a chraobh-sgaoileadh am measg Ghaidheal na h-Alba; ach bha e dlù air ceud bliadhna an déigh sin mu 'n robh earrann air bith dheth air a chur a mach 'n an càinnt jém, oir cha d' rinn Mr Kirke ach am Biobull Eireannach, a bha roimh air a chur a mach an Eirinn anns an litir Eireannaich, a chur anns an litir Ròmanaich.

Bha 'n Tiomnadh Nuadh air a chur a mach air tùs anns a' chainnt Eireannaich 's a' bhliadhna 1603. Bha e air 'eadar-theangachadh leis an Easbuig O'Donnell, agus b' e sin an ceud uair bha cuibhrionn air bith do na Sgrìobtuiribh air a chur a mach ann an aon air bith do na cainntibh Gaidhealach. Cha robh an Seann Tiomnadh air a chur a mach gus a' bhliadhna 1685. Bha e air 'eadar-theangachadh leis an Easbuig Bedell; agus chaidh dà cheud de na Biobuill so chur gu Alba airson feum nan Gaidheal. Bha 'n Tiomnadh Nuadh air 'ath-chlò-bhualadh 's a' bhliadhna 1681, agus bha 'n Seann Tiomnadh agus an Tiomnadh Nuadh air an cur a mach le Mr Kirke, mar thug mi a cheana fainear, 's an litir Ròmanaich, 's a' bhliadhna 1690.

Bha Tiomnadh Nuadh Mr Kirke air 'ath-chlò-bhualadh 's a' bhliadhna 1725, agus cha d' thugadh oidhirp tuilleadh air focal an Tighearna chraobh-sgoileadh am measg nan Gaidheal gus an robh an Seann Tiomnadh air 'eadar-theangachadh a chum na Gaidhlig Albannaich, agus air a chur a mach 's a' bhliadhna 1767, agus cha robh an leabhar a ta teagasg eòlais na slainte r' a fhaotainn gu h-iomlan ann ar cainnt dhuthechasaich gu ruig a' bhliadhna 1801, agus tha ministear 's an Eaglais Shaoir an diugh a rugadh mu 'n robh cuibhrionn idir do 'n t-Seann Tiomnadh r' a fhaotainn anns a' Ghaidhlig Albannaich. Nach iongantach gu 'm bheil ar luchd-duthecha cho fiosrach a 's a ta iad mu theagasgaibh na slainte, oir cha ghabh e ràdh gu 'n d' fhuair iad mòr chothrom air fòghlum a thogail anns na linnibh a chaidh seach.

Is fheudar 'aideachadh gur iad na leabhraichean a ta air an eadar-theangachadh o 'n Bheurla a 's liònnaibh ann an àircamh na na leabhraichean a bha air tùs air an sgrìobhadh anns a' Ghaidhlig féin, agus tha a' chuid a 's mò dhiubb ro-fheumail a chum fiosrachadh a thoirt do 'n t-sluagh. B' e "Gairm an Dé Mhoir do 'n t-sluagh neo-iompaichte" aon do na ceud leabhraichibh, cho math ri aon do na leabhraichibh a 's feumaile, a chuireadh a mach anns a' Ghaidhlig Albannaich. Bha 'n leabhar so air 'eadar-theangachadh le Mr Alasdair Mc Farlain, Ministear Chil-Mhèlpeird, duine a shaothraich gu mòr 'n a latha a chum leas nan Gaidheal. Bha "Turus a' Chrìosdaidh" air a chur a mach air tùs 's a' bhliadhna 1812. Bha e air 'eadar-theangachadh le duine a chuir na Gaidheal fo chomanaibh mòra agus liònnaibh—Patrie Mc Farlain. Bha iomadh leabhar feumail air 'eadar-theangachadh leis an duine so.

Am measg nan leabhraichean a dh' eadar-theangaicheadh gu Gaelig buinidh àite àrd do leabhraichibh Bhostoin agus Uillison; ach is fheudar dhomh gabhail seachad orra, agus air iomadh leabhar feumail eile a dh' fheudas an Gaidheal a nis a leughadh 'n a chainnt féin, agus thèid mi air aghaidh gu beagan a labhairt mu na leabhraichibh a chuireadh a mach air tùs anns a' Ghaidhlig féin.

Cha 'n 'eil na h-ùghdairean Gaidhealach a sgrìobh ann an rosg ach ro-theare ann an àireamh, agus cha ruig mi a leas luaidh a dheanamh aig an àm ach air aon diubh a bba combharraichte do thaobh a' chumhachd agus na buaidhe leis an do sgrìobh e a' Ghaidhlig. Is lionmhor Gaidheal a chuimhnicheas le taitneas air an Teachdaire Ghaidhealach agus air Tormod Og. Feudar a radh gu 'm bu bhàrdachd rosg an Olla Leòduich.

Ach is ann tromh bàrdachd a mhaireas a Ghaidhlig, agus a leughar i, an uair, mo thruaighe, nach bi i ni 's faide air a labhairt air Gaidhealtachd no am measg Eileanan na h-Alba. Agus tha a' bhàrdachd sin ni 's pailte, agus ni 's buadhach na tha iomad do nach aithne a' Ghaidhlig am barail. Gu 'n labhairt mu Oisean, c'àite am faighear òrain anns am mò am bheil do'n fhìor bhàrdachd no ann am "Màiri Bhàn Og," agus "Cead deireannach nam beann," le Duncha Bàn; ann am "Madainn chiùin chéitein" le Uilleam Ros; ann an "Oran Allt an t-sùgair," agus òran an t-Samhraidh le Mac Mhaighstir Alastair, ann am "Mìran a' Bhàird Aosla" agus iomadh òran buadhach eile a dh' fhaodainn ainneachadh. Tha uiread do bhlas agus do shnas na fìor bhàrdachd air na briathran a leanas agus a ta air roinn air bith a gheibhear anns a' Bheurla, no ann an cainnt air bith eile:

O caraibh mi, &c.,

agus air a' cheathramh a leanas le Duncha Bàn:

Chaidh mi do 'n choill, &c.

No ma théid sinn gu bàrdachd dhiadhaidh, am faighear ann an cainnt air bith laoidh a 's òrdheire na Laoidh "La a' Bhrèitheanais" le Dughall Buchanan, agus ann an Laoidhibh Bean Torra Dhaub, Am Bàideanach, agus ann an iomadh laoidh eile a thig gu deas gu 'r cuimhne gheibhear araon mìlseachd an t-òisgeil agus òr shnas na bàrdachd. Cha 'n aithne dhomh laoidhean a 's mìlse na laoidhean Bean Torra Dhaub, mar chi sibh o na rann a leanas:

"Tha gach la dhomh mar bhliadhna," &c.

Ann an laoidh eile a ta air a cur sìos ann an Co chruinneachadh an Olla Leòduich mar air a deanamh leis an duine ainmeil sin, an t-Olla Iain Gobh, tha i ag ràdh:

"Nuair bhios fiaradh ann ad chrannchoir."

Agus tha teagasgan an t-òisgeil air an cur sìos ann am briathraibh snasmhor le Seumas MacGregoir agus le Parra Grannd. Tha Seumas MacGregoir ag ràdh mu 'n t-soisgeil :

“ B' e sgeul an àigh e, air beatha 's slainte,” &c.

Agus tha Parra Grannd ag ràdh mu ghlòir an Uain :

“ Tha Sion a' seinn cho binn a 's urrainn,” &c.

Nach 'eil an fhiòr bhardachd ann am briathran an Ollainh Dhombuullaich a bha 's an Tòisidheachd ?

A nis, an uair a dh' ainmicheas mi gu 'n deachaidh, eadar òrain agus laoidhean, còrr mòr agus cuig fichead leabhar a chur a mach anns a' Ghaidhlig, agus iomadh dhiubh sin 'n an co-chruinnichean mòr agus eireachdal mar ta Leabhar Oisein, Leabhraichean Alastair Mac Mr. Alasdair, Dhuncha Bhain, agus Rob Dhuinn, co-chruinneachadh nan Stiubhardach, agus co-chruinneachadh Mhic Coimnich, chithear nach 'eil ar càinnt gu 'n fhoghlum-sgrìobhta innte, air sgàth am bheil i fìnghail air bhì air a fòghlum agus air a cumal suas. Ach ged dh' fhaodadh e bhì feumail fiosrachadh ni 's farsuinge a thoirt mu na sgrìobhaidhean anns am bheil bardachd na Gaedhlig air a eur siòs cha cheadaich ùine dhuinn.

III.

PLACE-NAMES OF DUMBARTON.¹

Topography is an important as well as an interesting subject of study. It is closely connected with the study of history, antiquities, and philology. The names of places serve very frequently to inform us of the people who, ages before, inhabited these places, and of their customs and pursuits. The name of a place often tells us of some bloody conflict of which it was once the scene, or of some great exploit or achievement some time performed there, and, therefore, the study of topography is of great interest to the antiquarian and historian. But it is also of great interest and importance to the philologist. The mountains and valleys, the lakes and rivers of our native land, for example, have preserved many of the most ancient forms of language which centuries ago was spoken by our ancestors. Many of these forms have been so changed and corrupted as to be now all but illegible, but the deciphering of them forms a most interesting department of philological study.

The increasing interest which of late years has been manifested in this study is shown by the number of works published on the subject. On the topography of Scotland a very interesting work, and one which contains a great deal of information, was published a few years ago by Col. James Robertson. The object which Col. Robertson had in view in publishing his work was to prove that the language now spoken by the Highlanders of Scotland is identically the same with that spoken many centuries ago by our warlike ancestors the Caledonian Picts, and this he endeavours to do by an appeal to the topography of Scotland, which is, confessedly, to a very great extent, purely Gaelic.

About the same time, a very able and learned work on British topography was published by Mr Flavell Edmunds. The title of this work is "Traces of History in the Names of Places," and it deserves to be read and studied by the student of Scottish topography, although it chiefly deals with the topography of England. Another very important work on this subject was published about eight years ago by the Rev. Isaac Taylor, son of the author of the "Natural History of Enthusiasm." The title of this work is "Names and Places," and it contains much valuable information.

¹ This lecture was delivered at Renton in 1872 or 1873, nor was it afterwards revised by the Doctor, Hence some points are a little antiquated.

But by far the ablest work on topography that I have ever seen, a work of which a reviewer in the Scotsman said that it should form an era in the study of topography, was published two years ago by Dr Joyce, of Dublin. This work, which deals, as its title indicates, with the Irish names of places, is of the greatest interest to the student of Scottish topography, from the fact that very many of the names of places in Scotland, and especially in Argyllshire and the west of Scotland, are identical with many of the Irish names of places. The ballys, glens, monadhs, knocks, kins, bens, dails, lochs, achadh, carraigs or crags, allts, lins, and many other words, are common to the topography of both countries. Even our national name of Scotland we have derived from Ireland, which was the ancient Scotia. Argyll is Ainer-Ghaidheal, the territory of the Gaidheal, who came across from Ireland. Dublin is Dubh linne, the black linn or loch, and we have our own Duplin. The Lurgans, low ridges projecting into plains, are common in Ireland and in Scotland, and the kills or cels, the Latin cella, an ecclesiastical name generally associated with the name of some saint, are innumerable in both countries.

The topography of Scotland contains three great elements:— (1) Gaelic; (2) the British or Cymric; and (3) the Scandinavian or Norse.

The Gaelic element is by far the largest and most important, and is not confined to the Northern or Highland counties, but extends over the whole of Scotland. Gaelic names are very common not only in Aberdeenshire and in the Midland counties of Scotland, but also in Ayrshire, Dumfriesshire, and Wigtonshire.

The British or Cymric element is found in those places which were anciently possessed by the British Celts, now represented by the Celtic inhabitants of Wales. We may, therefore, expect to find many British names in our own neighbourhood, since Dumbarton was the ancient capital of the Strath-Clyde Britons. It is, however, chiefly in the south east of Scotland, where lans and abers abound, that the British element is chiefly found. Many of our rivers, Tromie, Feshie, Drnie, Garry, Eriochty, end in y or i, like so many Welsh rivers. The Ochil Hills are the high hills, from a British word uchil, which signifies high, and Ochiltree is the high town, or place of habitation.

The Norse element is chiefly found in the north-east of Scotland. In Caithness it abounds, and also in Islay and the Lews, in the west, territories which were long subject to the rule of the northern sea-kings. The sters, which are so frequent in Caithness, Ulster, Leibster, Scrabster, Thrumster, Shebster, and also in some of the Western Isles, Elister, for example, correspond to the Gaelic Bally and the Saxon Ham. The a's in Ailsa, Jura, Rona, &c., are the Norse ey, island.

To interpret accurately the old names of places is often no easy task. Many of those names have been handed down to us in a form very different from that in which they originally existed, and many of them no longer exist in the living language of the people. It requires, therefore, much careful study of ancient documents, as well as of existing traditions and of the natural features and characteristics of the places, to make some approximation to an accurate interpretation of their names. To the student of Scottish topography an accurate acquaintance with the Gaelic and Welsh languages, not only as now spoken, but also as they exist in ancient MSS., is absolutely necessary, and not less necessary is the power of resisting the temptation to adopt fanciful interpretations based upon mere resemblance in sound between the names to be interpreted and words still used by the people. It would be easy to give illustrations of the danger of yielding to this temptation. A friend of mine who has devoted many years to the study of topography, has got the length of discovering in the Gaelic language a key to the right interpretation of the topography of three-fourths of the globe. No wonder that he is convinced that Gaelic—the present Gaelic of the Highlands of Scotland—was the fountain-head of all languages—that, indeed, in which Adam and Eve conversed in Paradise. My friend does not know that the Gaelic now spoken in the Highlands is very different from that which was spoken in the country a thousand years ago, and of which we have still many monuments, so different, indeed, that I find it much easier to read Greek or Latin than to read the oldest forms of my own language.

If you ask a Highlander what is the meaning of Tilliechewan he will tell you at once that it signifies the knoll or hillock of Ewen. Tillie is the Gaelic word Tulaich, and Ewen is plainly Ewen, a man's name. Or, if Ewen be not a man's name, it must be the Gaelic word uaine, which signifies green, and Tilliechewen must in that case mean the green knoll or hillock, just as Tilliegorum signifies the same thing, a very beautiful and appropriate name. But when we turn to charters that are not very old, we discover that all this is nonsense. Tillie, no doubt, is tulaich. That admits of no mistake. But the last part of the word is neither Ewen nor uaine, but Colquhoun, and Tilliechewen is just a corruption of Tillie-Colquhoun—the knoll or hillock of Colquhoun.

The topography of this county is partly British and partly Gaelic—the British element being probably the older. We know from history that this formed part of the territory of the Strathclyde Britons, that, indeed, Dumbarton was the capital of their kingdom, and, therefore, we would naturally expect to find numerous traces of their occupation in the local names of places. By and bye the British receded as the Scottish or Gaelic advanced, and when the latter came to possess these districts, they too left numerous traces of their occupation on the surrounding mountains, and valleys, and lakes, and rivers. By far the largest number of the names of places in this and the surrounding districts are Gaelic. In the remainder of this lecture I shall give you examples of the interpretation of these names. In doing so I shall carefully avoid fanciful interpretations. When I shall have occasion to refer to names about the interpretation of which I do not feel satisfied, I shall not conceal it from you.

As Dumbarton is situated on the Clyde, which is now the chief cause of its prosperity, it is but right that we should begin with it, although it does not promise well that I should begin with a name about the meaning of which I am not quite satisfied. Had I to begin with the Forth, I would have felt less difficulty, for it comes from fiord, the Norse for an arm of the sea.

The Rev. Isaac Taylor refers the Clyde, together with the Clwyd, Cloyd, and Clydach in Wales, and the Glyde in Ireland to the Gaelic word Clith, strong, while Edmunds derives it either from llwyd, brown, or from Clwyd, a British hero who conquered the Gwyddel or Gael in Wales. I think it probable that the Clyde is a British name, and that both it and the Welsh river of the same name were called after the British hero to whom Edmunds refers.¹

If we take next Dumbarton, from which the county takes its name, we all know what is meant by Dun, which enters so largely into our topography, and which is common to the Welsh, Scottish Gaelic, and Irish. It signifies a fort, and, therefore, it gives name to many fortified towns, as Dun-eidin, Edinburgh, Dunfermline, Dumfries, Dunblane, Dundrum, Dungall, and many more. It sometimes signifies a hill. Hence Dumbuck, the buck's Dun, the Dun mountain in Perthshire, and many more. Its original meaning seems to have been a heap, in which sense it is still used in the spoken Gaelic, as Dun arhair, a heap of corn. From that it came to be applied very naturally to hills and mountains, and then to fortified places, which were very frequently built on hills, as we find at Dumbarton and Dun-eidin (Edinburgh), Edwin's Dun.

The last part of Dumbarton was originally Britain—the port of the Britons—but the meaning of Britain is not so obvious. A friend of mine used to interpret it wave-begetting (breth thonn), but that is a mere fancy. In Armstrong's Gaelic Dictionary Britain is explained as signifying Braigh-tonn, the land on the top of the waves, from the appearance of Britain as seen from Calais.

The old name of Dumbarton was Alelyd, which signifies the rock of Clyde, from al, an old and now obsolete Celtic word for rock.

After Dumbarton, the Leven, from which our Vale takes its name, and upon which its prosperity so much depends, is, perhaps, the next most important local name. Some derive the word Leven from the Gaelic word leamhan, the elm tree, and think that the river derives its name from the abundance of elms which grow upon its banks. Chalmers, in his Caledonia, derives it, it seems to me with more reason, from the British or Welsh word, lleven, which signifies smooth. The Leven would therefore signify the smooth flowing river, and "smooth-flowing" is characteristic of the river of which the poet said:—

No torrents stain thy limpid source,
No rocks impede thy dimpling course,
That sweetly warbles o'er its bed,
With white round polished pebbles spread.

The river gives its name to the district, and to several places on its banks. Lenox,¹ a name well known in the history of Scotland, was anciently Levenax, from Leven-ach, the field of Leven, the Gaelic word signifying field. Strath-leven, the strath of the Leven, is from the Gaelic word strath, a river-holm. This word enters largely into Scottish topography. We have Strathblane, Strathmore, Strathdearn, Strathnairn, Strathearn, and Strathtay.

The old name of Lochlomond was Lochleven, before it took its present name from Ben Lomond.

The name Lomond, now applied to both mountain and loch, is sometimes derived from Laomainn, a Caledonian hero, perhaps the ancestor of the Mac Laomunns, or Clau Lammont.² Sometimes it is derived from the British word Llunnon, which signifies a beacon, a conspicuous object. It is deserving of notice that where we have the three Lomond hills in Kinross and Fife, we have a Lochleven and a river Leven at their base.

¹ The name Lennox, Old Gaelic Leamhan, Levenach, is clearly from the word leamhain, elm. The Ptolemaic Lemannonius Bay, which was here, also lends proof. The river name Leven is in Gaelic Lì-un, of Pictish descent. The word restored to its original form would be Livona. There are two rivers Lhivon in Wales, and a lake of mythic renown—Llivan or Llion, formed by the overflowing of a well. With it is connected the Celtic goddess, "The Lady of the Fountain," the Irish Liban, with the country of Liones, &c. (Rhys, Arth. Leg., p. 361). The root is li or lei, as in Greek leios, Lat. levis, smooth, Sanskrit ri, flow, Gaelic lighe, flood.—ED.

² The Lamonts are descended of the Lawmen of the Isles. Norse gen., Lögmanns.—ED.

If we come nearer home, our own important village furnishes an illustration of the danger of relying too much upon local pronunciation for the meaning of a name. "The Ranton" has nothing to do with ranting, although it is sometimes noisy of a Saturday night, for it has derived its name from Cecilia Renton, who married a Smollett of Bonhill.

The name of the parish is derived from caer and ros, the d being merely euphonic. Caer signifies a fort, and is common to the British and the Gaelic. It enters largely into our topography. We have Caerlaverock, Carphin, Carmyllie. It is one of the most frequent constituents of Welsh names, as Caermarthon. It also frequently occurs in Irish topography, as Caher, Caher-baruach, Cahergal, Caherkeen, Cahermoyle, Caherlarig, Cahermurphy, Caherduggan. Carman is from this word, the other part being monadh, mynedd, hill, and therefore signifies the fort on the hill. Cordel is, perhaps, derived from the same word, although it might also be derived from car, a turn or bend, the other part being dail, a dale.

Ros, the other part of Cardros, signifies a promontory or point of land jutting out into the water. It is common to both the British and the Gaelic, and enters very largely into both British and Scottish topography. It gives name to one of our counties, Ross-shire, which, on the east, projects into the sea. In our own neighbourhood we have Rossdhu, the black point, and Rosneath, which may signify the naked point, although the name is no longer applicable to the well-wooded point on which Rosneath House stands.

The meaning of Cardross is, therefore, the fort on the point the point being that opposite Dumbarton Rock, on which, until comparatively recent times, the Parish Church of Cardross stood.

As might be expected, the word dail, which signifies a meadow or plain beside a river, and which is cognate to the German Thal, and English dale, if the latter has not been derived from it,¹ is pretty frequently found along the banks of the Leven. We have in this parish Dalreoch, not, as is often supposed, from King Robert Bruce having lived in the neighbourhood, the dale of the king, which would be Dalrigh or Dalry, but the brindled or brown dale. The word riabhach occurs frequently in our topography, as do indeed the names of all the colours. We have Am braigh riabhach, the brindled height, as the name of one of the highest mountains of the Grampian range, and we have Iunis riabhach, the brindled sheltered valley, and Luban riabhach, the brindled bends, and many other names containing this word.

After Dalreoch we have Dalmoek, but I do not feel certain in regard to the meaning of moek. Then we have Dalquhurn, the dale of the cairn, or Cairndale. This word is spelled Dalchurne in an old charter published in the Cartulary of Lenox, so that we may feel satisfied that what I have now stated is the correct interpretation. We have Cordale, to which I have already referred. We have Dilichip, the dale of the block. This name deserves to be noticed as an example of regressive assimilation—a euphonic principle which largely influences the Gaelic language. Cyp is the genitive of ceap, a block. It is governed by dail, which becomes dil by the assimilating influence of the second syllable, on which, being a compound word, the voice rests.

We have also Dalmouach, the dale of the monks, or Monksdale, and Dalmuir (Dalmore in an old charter), the great dale. This word dail enters largely into Scottish and Irish topography. In this parish are many other names of places the meaning of which is very evident. Colgrain means behind the sun, from cul, back, and grian, sun.

Braehead is partly Gaelic and partly English. rae is a Gaelic word signifying the upper part. It enters very largely, as you know, into topography. We have, indeed, braes without number.

Camiseskin is made up of two Gaelic words, camus and eskin. Camus, which frequently occurs in names of places, signifies a bay, and sometimes a neck in the land, without any reference to water. We have in this county Camustraddan, and opposite to it, on the other side of the loch, Camuslorgainn. Eskin signifies an eel, and also a fish pond.

Craig-an-Doran is the otter rock, from craig, a rock, and doran, an otter. Craig, as you are aware, enters very largely into our topography. There is a Craigend in this parish. Doran is from dobhar, water. Dobharchu is indeed another name in Gaelic for otter.

Ardmore is the great height, from aird, height, and the adjective mor, great. Arbeg is the little height, from aird, and beg, little. These words, aird, more and beg, occur very frequently in both Scottish and Irish topography.

Kilmahew is the kill or cell of a saint of the name of Mathew or Mahew, not St Matthew of the New Testament, but probably an Irish saint.

Drumhead is partly Gaelic and partly English. Drum (in Gaelic, druim) is a ridge. This also is a word of very common occurrence in the names of places, as Tyandrum, the house on the ridge, Drummore, Auchendroma, Drumfad.

Ardoch signifies either the high field, from arl (high) and achadh (field), or the high davach, from arl, and dabhoch, a measure of land considered sufficient to pasture sixty cows. This word, contracted into doch, occurs often in Gaelic topography. We have Dochinassie, the cradle of my clan. We have Dochfour, and many other dochs.

Ardochmore is the great high dabhoch, and there is also an Ardochbeg, little ardoch.

Achadh, a field, is one of the most common words in both Scottish and Irish topography. In this parish we have Auchenfroe, probably the field of the heath, or heathfield; but I am not quite satisfied in regard to froe. We have also Auchenreard, the field of the high town. Auch is achadh, a field, en is the Gaelic article, and ard is high. Tre, I take to be the British tre, a town. If not I do not know what it is. This British tre occurs very frequently in our topography. Ochiltree is the high town, and Trenant is the town on the stream.

In a neighbouring parish there are Auchnaheaglais, the field of the church, and Auchendennan, the field of probably some ecclesiastic, from whom also Rowardennan and Ballyhennan have taken their names.

There are several other achadhs in the county, as Auchnaeloch, the field of the stone, and Achenkerroch, the field of the sheep, Achadtulich, the field of the hill or hillock.

Blairconnel is the field or plain of Connel. The word Blair, which signifies also a moss, occurs very frequently in Scottish and Irish topography. We have Blair Adam, the field or plain of Adam, and we have Blair in Athole, and many more. We have several in this county, as Blarvottich, the field of the old man; Blarrennich, the field of the ferns; Blarnshogil, the field of the rye; Blarfad, the long field; Blarnairr, the field of Nairn; Blarindeas, the south field, and others.

Drumfork is the ridge on the summit, from druim, a ridge, and fork, top or summit.

I have referred already to the word kill, a monkish cell. We have several of them in this county. There are Kilpatrick, Kilmaronock (St Marnock's cell), Kilsyth, Drumakill, the ridge of the cell.

I am not sure whether Mollandhu is the black mill, from muillein, a mill, and dubb, black, or the black little hill or mound, from molan, a little hill, and the adjective dubb. This, however, can easily be decided by any person acquainted with the place. I find a stoney mollan above Woodbank, where it must, I presume, signify the stoney mound. There is a Mollanbuie (Mollan-buidhe) in the parish of Bonhill.

Asker may signify either a rocky ridge or a leap, but as I am not acquainted with the place I do not know which is the most appropriate interpretation.

Ardmore is the great height, from airde, height, and more, great. Ardmores and Ardbeys are very common in Gaelic topography.

Arden seems to be a diminutive of airde, and, therefore, signifies the little height. It is so understood by Dr Joyce, who tells us that it occurs frequently in Irish topography.

Ardarden is, therefore, although it appears contradictory, the high little height. When, however, we consider that of two ardens, one may be higher than another, we shall find nothing strange in one of them being called Ardarden. We have several ardens in this county. Ardan is also the Gaelic word for pride, and is applied to a high or lofty look.

Keppoch signifies a plot of land laid out for tillage. There are several places of this name both in this country and in Ireland. Keppoch near Fort-William is famous on account of a bloody massacre which took place there.

I have some difficulty in regard to Kipperoch and Minnsheog. Minnseog is a young she goat. Ceap is a piece of land, and arrech is a little shieling. Kipper-minnseog may, therefore, be the place to which the people living on the plain below sent their young goats to pasture in the olden times.

Succoth, or Sokkoth, signifies beaked, or pointed. It is the name of several places in the Highlands.

In connection with Succoth in our neighbourhood, it deserves to be noticed that Succat was St Patrick's name before he took the Latin name of Patrick or Patricius, after he had gone to the continent. Whether there was any connection between St Patrick's name and Succoth I do not know, but when we consider that St Patrick was born at Alclud (the modern Dumbarton), and that Succat was his original name, it is curious to find Succoth as the name of a farm in the immediate neighbourhood of the place of his birth.

Cladach is a shore or beach—often a stoney beach. The Cladach between Cardross and Helensburgh is on the shore.

Several of the names of places in the parish of Bonhill, as Dilichip, Dalmonach, Auchencerroch, I have already noticed, but I shall now call your attention to some more of them.

Bonhill itself is quite a puzzle. In old charters it is spelt Buthelulle, Bohtlul, Bullul, Buchnul, Buchul, Bullill, Bulhill, and now it is Bonhill. Were it not for these old forms, we could conclude, no doubt erroneously, that Bon is bun, foot, or lowest part, and that hill is English, making the meaning of the word to be the foot of the hill. Chahmer's derivation of it from Bon-uillt (bun, foot, and allt, gen. uillt, a burn or stream) is equally inadmissible, although the parish is situated at the foot of a burn. The letter t is a strong consonant, and invariably retains its place in a word, more especially when, as in allt, it is the final letter. It very frequently passes into its media d, but it does not disappear as the weak consonants l and n frequently do. Cumbernald, for example, is now pronounced Cummernaud. The l disappears from the pronunciation, although it is retained in the written word, and t becomes a d. All these changes take place in accordance with well-known euphonic laws, but the t does not disappear. It merely passes into the corresponding medial letter. Cumbernald is from cummer, a confluence, the meeting of two or more streams, and allt, a burn or stream, so that the meaning of the word is the confluence of streams. Allt occurs very frequently, both in the nom. allt and the gen. uillt, in our topography, and we have some cummers. I know of a Magh-commer, the field of the confluence, in Lochaber. It is the name of a farm at the confluence of the Roy and the Lochy. There is another cummer at Taymouth in Perthshire, and Comrie must be referred to the same word. Two rivers meet at the village of Comrie.

If Bonhill meant Bun 'n uillt, the burn-foot, the t in allt would have been retained as in Tynuillt, the house of the stream, or it would have passed into d, as in Cumernaud.

Balloch signifies an opening or pass—not, as is often supposed, beul loch, the mouth of the loch. The Gaelic word is bealach. It is pronounced differently from beul loch. There are many bealochs in Scotland.

Croftingea is the croft of the geese, from ercit (croft), and geadh (goose).

Drumkinnon is the white-headed ridge, from drum, a ridge, ceann, a head, and fionn, white.

Ballagan is the townland of the little hollow, from baile, a town or townland, and lagan, the diminutive of lag, a hollow. All these words occur time without number in the topography of Scotland and Ireland.

Dumbain is the white dun, from dun, and ban, white. The surname Bain is Gaelic, and signifies white.

Passing on to Kilmaronock, the cell of St Marnock, we find nearly all the names of places on the map to be Gaelic. I can notice only a few of them.

Ladrish, or Ledrish, appears to be from leathad, a slope, and dris, briar. The meaning of Ledrish would, therefore, be the briar slope. Leathad and letir, both signifying a slope, and often a hillside, occur repeatedly in the topography of this country. Letdowald, Latterdowald, signify the the slope of the black burn.

Cameron is either a crooked point or crooked nose, from cam crooked, and ruinn, a point, or sròn, a nose. I have not, however, much faith in the accuracy of making the Clan Cameron the descendants of some person whose distinguishing feature consisted of a crooked nose, and the Clan Campbell the descendants of some person distinguished by a crooked mouth. These explanations are very simple, but they will not, I am afraid, stand the test of ancient documents.

Darleith seems to be daire liath, the green wood, from daire, a grove, thicket, or wood, and liath, grey. Both words occur very frequently in both Scottish and Irish topography. The town of Derry derives its name from this word ; and we have the Doire dubh (the black grove), and many other doires, in Scotland.

Anchenreoch is the field of the heather, or heath field, from achadh, a field, and fraoch, heather.

Knockshamoeh is the hillock or knock of the fox, from knock, enoe and siomach, fox.

Blairynult is the field, or moss, of the burn or stream.

Spittal is a corruption of the Latin word hospitium, a place for entertaining strangers, who in those days were, no doubt, boni fide travellers. There are several spitals in Scotland. There is Dalmaspidal on the Hill of Drumuachdar, where, no doubt, a place where the traveller could be entertained was greatly needed. There is a Spital in Glenshee, and I know at least two more—one in the far north county of Caithness, and one in the south of Scotland. The traveller from the banks of Leven to Stirling would no doubt require a spital by the way.

Gallingad is the wood of the withes—the wood which supplied the farmers of the neighbourhood with the withes, which served them, in those days, as a substitute for the leather from which, in modern times, horse harness is manufactured. I have myself seen the bridle and traces formed of withes, which, for this and other purposes, were once more in requisition than now.

Badshalloch is from bad, a tuft, bush, or thicket, and seileach, willow, and, therefore, signifies the willow thicket.

Gartocharn is the field of the cairn, from gart, a field, and earn, a cairn ; Gartachraggan (of the little crag) and Gartfearn (of the alder). The word gart, or gort, and its diminutive gortan, occur very often in Scottish topography. We have Garth in Perthshire ; Gartmore, the great field, is nearer home. There is a Gorton on Loehlong, and a Gort-na-Leirg, the field of the plain, between the Gareloch and Lochlong. Ardgartan is opposite Arrochar.

Cambus-moon is the curved moss. Camus, as I have already noticed, signifies a bay, but it is also applied to any curved or winding place, both in Scottish and Irish topography.

Moon must be mòin, peat or moss.

Finnary is the white shieling,, from fionn, white, airidh, a shieling or grove—a place where osiers grow.

There is a Finnary in Morven, in Argyllshire, where Dr Macleod's father, the late Dr Norman Macleod, was born, and to which he composed a song known to many Highlanders—"Farewell to Finnary."

Drumglas is the green ridge, from druim, a ridge, and glas, green, also grey.

Aber is the British, as inblir is the Gaelic, term for a confluence of waters, or a place where a stream or river falls into another stream or river, or into the sea. There are several inblhers in this county, as Inbheruglas, Inbhergroin, Inbhersnaid: but there are not so many abers, which are more numerous on the East Coast, as Aberdeen, Abernethy, Abernyte.

Drymen is the white ridge, from druim and fionn.

Duncryne is the round hill, from dun and cruinn, round.

Shandon is the old dun or fort, from sean, old, and dun, a fort or hill.

Portnellan is the ferry of the isle.

Boturich I cannot explain. The first syllable may be the same as the first syllable of Bonhill, as it appears in the old name Buchnell, and may signify a booth or baile. Thus, Buchanan would be the town of the canon (an ecclesiastical dignitary), and Bohespie, the bishop's town (both = town).

I must pass by many names of places in Kilmarnock, to which, had there been time, I would have liked to call your attention. I must also, for the present, leave unnoticed, except such as I have already noticed incidentally, the Lunises or Isles of Lochlomond, and most of the names along its shores, all of which are, of course, purely Gaelic. I should like, however, before I conclude, to notice a few of the names in the parish of Row.

Row is itself a Gaelic word signifying a point or headland. The parish derives it came from the point near which stands the parish church.

Shandon, like the Shandon of Kilmarnock, must be the old dun, or fort.

The Gareloch is the short loch, from garr, short, and loch, a lake or loch; but Lochlong is not the long loch, which would be in Gaelic Lochfad. It seems to be the loch of ships, from long, a ship.¹

Ardencaule is the arden, or little height of the horse, from capull, a horse.

Letrault is the letir or slope of the allt or stream.

Stuckenduff is from stucken, diminutive from stuck, a cliff or projecting rock, and duff from dubh, black. The meaning of the word is therefore the black cliff or rock. Stuck occurs also in Stuckgoun, on Loch Lomond, which means either the rock of the smith (gobhainn) or the green rock, from uaine, green, but more probably the former. There is a Laigh Stuck (the low rock) in the parish of Row, and also High Stuck, the high rock.

Balleymena is Middletoun, from Baile (town or townland), and meadhon (middle). This name occurs very frequently in Gaelic topography, almost every district in the Highlands having its Ballymeadhonach, between its Easter and Westertown. The name occurs also very frequently in Irish topography, as in Ballymena.

Strone signifies a nose or point.

Torr is a mound. These two words occur very frequently in the names of places.

Faslane is from fas, which occurs frequently in Gaelic topography, although it is somewhat difficult to determine its exact meaning. Fás signifies growth, and there is also an adjective fas, empty, waste. Fasadh signifies a protuberance. It is difficult to know which of these words forms the first part of Faslaw, and of Dochinphasie, and Fasidh-feran in Lochaber, and of Fass, and Faskally in Perthshire, or whether indeed it be any of them.

The lane of Faslane is lann, land, enclosure, a word common to both Gaelic and Welsh, but for which its dative loinn is now mostly used in the spoken language of the Highlands.

Faslane may, therefore, signify either waste land, or its very opposite, growing land.

Tomnavoulin is a hill or hillock of the mill, from tom, a hill, but oftener a hillock, and muillean, a mill. Tom occurs very frequently in Gaelic names of places, as Tomatin, juniper hill, Tombé, birch hill; Tomdoun, brown hill.

Blarvattan is the field of the little thicket, from blár, a field, and badan, diminutive of bad, a thicket of wood.

Drumfad is the long ridge.

Bendarroch is the oak hill, from beann (hill) and darroch (oak). There is Arddarroch, the oak height on Loch Long. The word darroch frequently occurs in Gaelic topography, as in Auchendarroch, near Lochgilphead, "oak field."

Maol an fheigh is the bald height of the deer, from Maoile, a bald height, and fiadh (feidh in the genitive). Maoile occurs in the Mull of Kintyre and the Mull of Galloway, and in many other places.

Beinn Chaorach is the hill of the sheep, and Beinn Tharsuinn is the cross mountain. Ben is one of the most common terms in our topography.

I cannot at present take you with me to Luss and Arrochar, where the names of places are, with the exception of a few modern names, purely Gaelic. I earnestly wish, however, to see the whole topography of the county properly arranged and interpreted before the modern names shall have entirely defaced the ancient names which record the natural features and characteristics of the country, and many of the heroic deeds of its former inhabitants. Our mountains and lakes and rivers, even every towland and streamlet, show that the Gaelic language, which is now so rapidly disappearing, was once the language of the people who lived in these glens and cultivated the mountain sides. But now more of the descendants of the old inhabitants are to be found in foreign lands, to which they have taken with them the language of their ancestors, and even the names of their old homes, than are found among the mountains and glens of Scotland; and on every side of us we see a new topography overlaying the old, which will form to future generations a record of the great social change which has been gradually taking place, more especially since the beginning of this century, in the state of the Highlands and in the condition of its inhabitants. In this immediate neighbourhood, instead of the sparse cultivation and consequent comparative poverty of a former age, we see the busy industry and prosperity of the present, and the change is not so much to be regretted; but it is otherwise where many fields once fruitful have been turned into desolate and barren wastes.

IV.

ARRAN PLACE NAMES.

SECTION I.

The topography of Arran, like that of all the Western Islands of Scotland, is partly Scandinavian and partly Celtic. Names like Brodick, Goatfell, Ormidale, Kiskadale, are clearly of Norse origin, whilst such names as Tormore, Torbeg, Achanacar, Druimindoon, Dunfin, Dundow, are manifestly Celtic, our names of places thus bearing testimony to the fact that, in past times, the Norsemen and the Celts held alternate sway in our island, the inhabitants of which are a mixed race, being partly Norse and partly Celtic. But although the topography of a country serves to throw important light upon both its history and its ethnography, I do not intend at present to deal with these matters. All that I intend to do is to give the meaning of such of our local names of places as admit of being explained with a tolerable degree of certainty and accuracy. There is nothing in the world more easy than to discover a meaning for almost any place name; but we must remember that interpretations based upon a mere resemblance in sound between words, or parts of words, is of no value whatever in the accurate study of topography. It would be easy to give amusing illustrations of this statement.

In what I am now to bring before you, I shall carefully avoid fanciful interpretations. It is better to confess our inability to explain a word than to mislead, by giving an inaccurate explanation, and when a matter is doubtful, it ought to be given as doubtful. This is the surest way of attaining at last to certainty.

I shall begin with Arran (old spelling Aran), the name of our island. Arran has been derived from the words ar-Fhinn (the slaughter of Finn)—the name of a place near Catacol, from which the island, it is said, has received its name. This, however, is erroneous. Arran (older form Aran) is an inflection of Ara, the old name of the island, as Alban (Scotland) is an inflection of Alba, and Erenn (Ireland) is an inflection of Eriu. The genitive of Ara is Aran. Our ancestors said, just as we say, "Eilean Aran," and thus Aran became the regular name. Now, ar-Fhinn never was Ara, nor could it have been Arran, for the genitive of Fionn is Finn, or with aspiration Fhinn. Besides, there are other Arran islands: in the mouth of Galway Bay there are two islands which have that name. It is, however, much easier to show what Arran has not been derived from than to show what is the correct derivation of the word. In both form and declension, Ara, gen.

Aran, agrees exactly with the word ara (kidney), gen. aran. This word, which has lost a b before r (abran), is etymologically connected with the Greek nephros, pl. nephroi, Lat. nefrones (kidneys); but I cannot say whether or not it is the same word as the name of our island. Any explanation, however, which does not take into account that the nominative of the word is ara, although the stem is aran, cannot be regarded as satisfactory, just as no explanation of Alban is satisfactory which does not take into account that the nom. is Alba, nor any explanation of Erenn which overlooks that the nom. is Erin.¹

In dealing with the place names of the island, I shall begin with the Brodieck district. In a document quoted from in the "Origines Parochiales," and which dates as far back as 1450, Brodieck is spelled Bradewik, which means the broad bay.² The Icelandic form of the adjective "broad" is breidur, the Dan. bred, and the Scotch (which is closely allied to the Norse language) brade. The second syllable, "wik," signifies a bay. It occurs very frequently, both by itself, as in Wick in Caithness, Uig in Skye, Uig in Lews, and in composition as the last syllable of very many of the names of our bays and inlets. We find this word also spelled Braithwik and Brethwik. Until lately there was a hamlet at the head of the new street, now called Douglas Row, at Brodieck, which the natives called Breadhaig. This was, doubtless, the original Brodieck, and in olden times the head of the bay.

Strathwillan furnishes a good example of how words, in the course of time, change not only their form but also their component parts. In old documents Strathwillan is Terquiline, and the natives still call the district Tirhuilein. Tir, allied to Lat. terra, signifies land. It occurs frequently in place-names, and is often connected with the names of persons. Thus, Tireomel, Tyrone, Tirkeeren—the land of Connell, the land of Eoghain, the land of Cærthainn. The second part of Tirhuilein resembles cuiltionn (the holly), but if Tirhuilein meant the land of the holly, we would expect to have the article between Tir and cuitean, and that the word would be Tir-a'-chuirein, like the Irish place-names Tirachorka (the land of the oats), Tiraree (the land of the king). We may safely conclude that Tirhuilein means the land of Cuilean, which, although meaning a whelp, is also a personal name, as in "Culen mac Illuilb," who was a king of Alban in the 10th century.

The natives call Corriegills "Coire-ghoil." Coire signifies a hollow in the side of a mountain, and occurs very frequently in topography. It is identical with coire (a cauldron); it is cognate with the Ice. hverr (a cauldron, a boiler).

² Dean Munro (1549), calls it Braizay.

There is more difficulty about the second syllable of Corriegills. It may from its form be the genitive of Gall (a stranger), a term applied in the West Highlands to the Danish invaders. The word would thus signify the "Corrie" of or belonging to the stranger. The last syllable, however, may be the Norse gil (a deep, narrow glen with a stream at bottom), which occurs so frequently as ghyll and gill in our Scotch topography, and this I regard as the more probable explanation.

From Corriegills we pass on to Dunfin, which does not mean the Dun of the Ossianic Finn-mac-Cumhaill, for then the word would not be Dun-fionn but Dun-Fhinn, like Kill-Fhinn. In Dun-fionn is plainly the adjective fionn (white, fair), and Dun-fionn is the fair hill; or it may mean the white or fair fort. The former, however, is the more probable, for we have close to Dun-fionn another hill Dun-dubh (the black hill), and when we look at the two hills, we find that the names are descriptive. The original meaning of dun is an enclosure. From an enclosed or walled place, it came to signify a fort; and as forts were usually built on elevated places, the word came to be applied to hills, and from hills to any heap, even a heap of dung, or dunghill, which in Gaelic is dúnan, a diminutive of dún.

But dúnan does not always mean a dunghill. It also means a hillock, or little hill. Hence the Dunans below Corriegills means the hillocks, a descriptive name.

The English etymological equivalent of dun is town, from the Anglo-Saxon tūn, literally an enclosure.

We shall now return to the centre of the Brodick district, but must have a look in passing at the sweet glen of Lag-a'-bheithe (the hollow of the birch). Lag, as those of us who speak Gaelic know, means a hollow, and laggan, a little hollow. Hence Lag, near Kilmory, is the hollow, a very descriptive name, and the Lagans—we have two in the north end of Arran—are very common in Gaelic topography.

The last part of Lag a'-bheithe is bheithe, the genitive of beithe (birch). The a' between Lag and bheithe is the contracted form of the article an.

We pass by the modern names Springbank and Alma Terrace, and come to the Mais or Maish, which means probably the moss-land. Then we have Glenormadell, which the suffix dell shows to be a Norse name, although the prefix glen (a valley), is Celtic. In Norse terms dale, which signifies a plain, a dale, forms an affix: whilst in Celtic words it forms a prefix. Knapdale, Helmsdale, Berriedale, are Norse words, whilst Dalintober, Dalnacardach Dalanspittal, are Celtic words. It is not an uncommon thing to meet words containing both Norse and Celtic elements. Ormidale is a Norse word, which, at a later period, received a Gaelic prefix. The syllable orm is identical with the Ice. ormr (a snake, a serpent, also worm), and is the Norse equivalent of the English word worm. Ormidale, therefore, means the valley of snakes.

Glencloy takes its name from the Macloys or Fullartons, who held the land of Kilmichael early in the fourteenth century, one of that name having received them from King Robert Bruce. Macloy is MacLouis, or MacLoui, that branch of the Fullartons having descended from a person of the name of Louis, a name still not uncommon among the Arran Fullartons.

Kilmichael means the Church of Michael, or the church dedicated to St Michael. The ruins of the old chapel were to be seen there until a comparatively recent period. Kil is the Gaelic cill, which signifies a church, and now a churehyard or burying-place. It is borrowed from the Latin word cella (a cell).

As Kilmichael signifies the Church of Michael, or the church dedicated to St Michael, so Kilbride signifies the Church of Bridgit, or the church dedicated to St Bridgit; Kilmory, the Church of Mary, or the church dedicated to St Mary; Kildonnan, the church consecrated to St Donnan, and Kilpatrick, the church dedicated to St Patrick.

Aucharanie is the field of the ferns, the first part of the word being achadh (a field), and the second part the genitive (Irish) of raineach (ferns). A similar example of inflection is Ceum-na-laittagh.

Glensherraig is written both Glenservaig and Glensherivik in ancient documents. Glenservaig may be the glen of the sorrel, but Glensherivik renders this interpretation doubtful.

Glenrossay is the glen or valley of the water Rossay. The last syllable of Rossay is a common affix, signifying water (cf Iarsa, the Iarsa water; Thurso, the water of Thor).

Glenshant is for Cranshant or Cranscheaunt, of which the first part is clearly crann (tree), and the second part may be seunta, the participle of the verb seun (to bless, literally, to cross one's self). The place may have taken its name from some tree in the locality, which was considered sacred.

Knock, which occurs very frequently in the topography of Arran, signifies a hill or knoll, and Knockan, a little hill, a hillock. Knockan was the name of a hamlet of houses near the Castle of Brodick; and there is somewhere in that direction a place which was called Coreknokdow, Coire-cnaic-dhuibh, but which I have not been able to identify.

Penaycastel (Peighinn a' Chaisteil), the Pennyland of the Castle, was the name of some fields near the Castle.

Peighinn (a penny), meaning a pennyland, enters largely into the topography of the island. There is a Peighinn near Shisken. There is a Peighin-riabhach, Penrioch (the speckle l Pennyland), and Benlister, which I suspect is a corruption of Penalister, the Pennyland of Alister,¹ perhaps the same Alister whose name has been kept in remembrance in the name Gortan-Alister (the little field of Alister). (Clachelane, a pennyland).

I may here notice that Gort is the same word as Gart. Gart is now applied to a field of growing corn, but it literally signifies an enclosed field, and is, in fact, the same word as the English word yard (an enclosure). The cognates are the Greek chortos, the Latin hortus, the Gaelic gort or gart, and English yard and garden.

I have said that the word peighinn (penny) enters into several of our place names. We have also halfpenny lands, as Levincor-rach (the steep halfpenny land), and Achenleven. There is a farm in Strachur called Lephin-mor (the big halfpenny land).

Feorline (a farthing), meaning a farthing land, is a common place name in the West and North Highlands. We have a North and South Feorline in Arran, near Kilpatrick.

Mark, in Gaelic, marg, which was thirteen shillings and fourpence, occurs very frequently in Gaelic topography. In Arran, we have Merkland, near Brodick, and Marg-na-heglish (the Merkland of the Church), near the Manse of Kilbride, and another Marg-na-heglish, near Lochranza. Marg-an-ess (the Merkland of the waterfall).

Dupenny occurs as an older form of Dippen, which, therefore, means two-penny or two-penny land. It formed part of what is called in ancient documents the Tenpenny lands of Arran, which embraced the three Largies, Kisadale, Glenashdale, and Clachelane.

I shall now come to the district of Lamdash.

Lamdash proper is the Holy Isle, so called, no doubt, from its early ecclesiastical associations. It was the residence of St Molash or Molaisi, of Devenish, whose connection with it gave it the names of Helantinlaysch (the island of the flame), Molassa (the island of Molas), and Lamdash (the island of Molash). This saint, whose day in the calendar is on the 12th September, is called also Daisren (the little flame), in the calendar of Angus of Culdee.

I may observe that the name of this saint was not Maeljos or Molios, as stated in the Origines Parochiales. Maeljos or Maelisi means the attendant (that is the tonsured one) of Jesus, whereas Molas or Molash signifies my flame, it having been common to use the possessive pronoun mo (my) before the names of saints as a term of endearment. Thus Mernoc, whence Kilmarnock, the Church of Mernoc, is "my Ernoc," Ernoc being the name of the patron saint of the Church of Kilmarnock. Molas or Molash is mo las (my flame), las signifying a flame. This word las, with its diminutives lasan and laisren, was the name of more than one saint.

There is nothing remarkable in the name of the neighbouring islands having become the name of the modern village of Lamlash, any more than there is in the name of the neighbouring loch having also become its modern name, for the Gaelic name of Lamlash at the present day is Loch-an-eilein (the loch of the island).

I have already referred to the Pennyland of Clachlands. The old form of this word was Clachelane, also spelled Clachellane. The first part of this word seems to be clach (a stone). Of this I would have no doubt if I did not find the word also written Cleuchtlanis. I do not know what the second part of the word, lane, means, if it be not the word lann (an enclosure). This word occurs frequently in Gaelic topography. It is the same word as the Welsh llan, so often met with in British topography, as in Llanbride, Llandudno. We find at least one instance of it in Arran in Lymnmore (the big enclosure or field). It occurs in the word iodhlann (a stackyard) a compound from iodh (corn), and lann (enclosure), and is probably cognate to the English word land. It is still used in our spoken Gaelic, but, as in many other cases, the accusative loinn has become also the nominative.

At Lamlash we have a Blairmore and a Blairbeg. Blár signifies a field. It is very common in Gaelic topography. This word has other meanings, as a peat moss (blár-moine), and battle (Blár Chuil-rhodair, the battle of Culloden). More is the adjective mór (great, large, big), and beg the adjective beag (little, small). Blairmore is therefore the large field, and Blairbeg is the little field.

Killbride and Marg-na-heglish have been already explained.

In the Blairmore glen, there was a hamlet which was called Druim-'ic-an-Duileir. 'Ic-an-Duileir is the genitive of what must have been the name of a person—Mac-an-Duileir. Druim, the first part of the word, means a ridge. It is a common element in Gaelic place-names, as in Druim-a-dúin (the ridge of the dún or hill). It is cognate with Lat. dorsum.

I have already noticed Benlester. Glenkill I have not met with except in its present form. The first part of the word, glen, the Gaelic gleann (a valley), is plain, but whether the second part, kill, be the same word as that which forms the first syllable of Killbride, Kilmory, Kilpatrick, &c., and which, as already noticed, signifies a church, it is impossible to say, without knowing whether or not there was a church there, especially as the kill is not, as it almost invariably is, prefixed to the name of a patron saint. The place may possibly have taken its name from a kiln for drying corn or from burning lime.

Somewhere in the neighbourhood of Glenkill there are two places which are called the Laigh Letter and High Letter. Letter, in Gaelic leitir, signifies the side or slope of a hill. It occurs very frequently either by itself or in composition in Gaelic topography.

Cordon, written Corrden in the rent roll of 1757-8, and Buneen, I am not able to explain. It would be easy to give a plausible interpretation of these words, but that would serve no useful purpose. Buneen may mean bun aibhne (the mouth of a river), and thus take its name from the stream which falls into the sea at Buneen, and which is large enough to be called abhainn (river) in Gaelic. Bun is applied in other places to the mouth of a river, as Bunaw (the mouth or lower part of the river Awe).

Moniemore may signify the large hill, monadh-mor, from monadh (a hill) and more (large), or it may signify, as it is more likely, the large brake, for it is not unlikely that the whole of that slope was at one time covered with wood, as a considerable part of it is still.

Gortan-Alestir I have already explained. We come to King's Cross, a name which, although it has a modern look, has been in existence for at least more than 120 years: for I find it in the rent roll of 1757, when it paid a rent of £16. But King's Cross is an English name, and was not, therefore, the old and proper name of that locality. About 1450, King's Cross must have been Pennyerosche: for in a document of that period there is a farm of Pennyerosche mentioned alongside of Monymore, among the lands which paid fermes and grassum to the Crown, the sum paid by Pennyerosche being 46s 8d.

Other places mentioned in the same document are Knockenkelle, Achaharne, Ardlavenys, Letternagananach, and Dubroach. Knockenkelle seems to be Knockencoille (the little knowe of the wood), from knocken (a hillock or little knowe), and coille (wood). The latter part of the word may, however, be coiligh, the genitive (Ir.) of coileach (a cock); but, in this case, we would expect the word to be knocken a'choiligh, with the article between the two parts of the compound.

Achaharu, now Achencairn, is the field of the cairn, from achadh (a field), and cárn (a cairn of stones).

The first part of Ardlavenys is either the adjective árd (high), or aird (an eminence or a dwelling-place), but I do not know what lavenys is, nor have I been able as yet to identify the place.

Dubroach must be to the north of Lamlash. It seems to be Dubh bhruthach.

Letirnaganach is the leitir or hill slope of the canons, which points back to the time (1452) when James II. granted to the canons of Glasgow the whole Crown rents of Arran and other lands in payment of the sum of 800 marks, which they had lent to him out of the offerings of their church in the time of the indulgences.

In Whitingbay there are three Largies—Largiebeg, Largie-more, and Largiemeanach. Largie, I take to be the Gaelic word lairig (a moor, the side of a hill). It is of frequent occurrence in Gaelic topography. There is in Sutherland a parish of Lairig, and you have Largs on the Firth of Clyde. There is a Largie in Kintyre, and the burying-place of the Breadalbane family at Loch Tayside is Finlairig. There is also a Gaelic word leirg, which signifies a plain. But we may, with confidence, identify Largie with Lairig. The affixes, beg, more, and meanach, are the adjectives beag (little), mor (large, big), and meadhonach (middle).

You have also three Kiskadales—North, South, and Middle. In the old written documents, this word is written Keskedel. It is manifestly a Norse word, the affix dale or del being the same word as our Gaelic dail (a plain, a dale), and related to the English dale and the German thal. The first part of the word I do not know, but I believe that, with a little more research, I shall be able to discover its meaning.

There are some other words, such as Glenasbdale, written Glenasdasdale in old documents, and Glenseoradale, clearly Norse names, which I must leave for the present unexplained.

SECTION II.

In the previous section on the Arran place-names, I started from Brodick, came along by Lamlash, and went as far as the march between the parishes of Kilbride and Kilmory. This time I propose to start again from Brodick, and to go in the opposite direction of Corrie, Lochranza, Catacol, and Dougarie, to Shisken. This includes the whole north end of the island. As in the former section, we shall frequently meet with names at the meaning of which we can only guess, although I do not despair of being yet able to get at their correct interpretation. Here, as elsewhere, names that were once familiar have disappeared, through the progress of adding field to field and house to house, from the map, although they still linger in the memories of the people. Thus, we know of a "Gortan gainmbeach" (the sandy little field), near where Mr Halliday has his sawmills; of the "Cnocan" (the Knoekan), above the Castle; and of "Peighinn a' Chaisteil" (the pennyland of the Castle), near the Castle. The burn coming down through the Castle wood is marked on the map as the "Cnockan Burn," although the "Cnocan" itself is not marked. It would be both interesting and important to get a list made up of as many as can now be recovered of the names that are not on the map before they pass away, as they are certain to do in the course of another generation, from the memories of the people. At present, I must take the Ordnance Survey map as my guide, although, so far as the place-names are concerned, it is by no means a safe guide.

When we leave the Castle behind us, the first name we meet is Merkland, from the Scottish coin merk, equal to 13s 4d of our money. This was the amount of superiority money paid by the place in olden times.

We pass by Merkland Point and Birch Point, and come to the "Rudha Salach" (the dirty headland), rudha (headland), and salach (dirty).

We meet with no other name on the map until we come to Corrie, in Gaelic An Coire (the cavity, the cavern; also, a hollow among hills or in the side of a mountain).

We come next to Sannox, which is really a plural formed by adding s to "Sannoc" (the sandy bay), from Saul-vik, a common place-name. There are three Sannocs—South Sannoc, Mid Sannoc, and North Sannoc, which the natives still call "Na Sannocan" (the Sannocs).

The burying place of Kilmichael (the Church of St Michael), from Kill (a cell, from Latin cella (a cell), and Micheil, the patron saint to whom the church was dedicated, is not marked on the six-inch scale map.

If we ascend the North Glensannocs Burn we come to the Glen-du, marked by its Gaelic name Gleann dubh (the Black Glen) on the map, and between Glen-du and North Glen Sannocs, lies the hill called in Gaelic An Tunna (the tun, or the vessel).

To the north of North Glen Sannocs, are the Torr Reamhar (the Thick Hill), and the Crogan, probably another form of Cnocan (a little hill), although the Crogan seems to be more than 1000 feet above the level of the sea. But "Crogan" may be for "cracan" (a hill-side).

Proceeding northwards, we come to Lagan (the little hollow), diminutive of Lag (a hollow); Creag ghlas (the grey hill), or it may be the green hill, for glas means grey, pale, and also green, and before we come to the "Cock" (an corleach) we find Cuithe marked on the map, which signifies a pit, a trench, a deep moist place, and also a cattle fold.

We now cross the water-shed into the Lochranza district. The glen through which the road passes is marked Glen Chalmadal on the map. It is plainly a Norse name, but I have not succeeded in making out the meaning of it. Dal is the same as the Gaelic dail, and the English dale, but I do not know the meaning of the first syllable.

In this glen there are several names that are not marked on the map. One of them is Gortan na Ceardaich (the little field of the smithy). Gortan is the diminutive of gort (a field), the same as gart in Gartsherrie, Gartmore, &c. The "Gortans" are very common in Arran.

The first place we come to in Lochranza is Bolairidh (the fold of the shieling), from bol or buile (a fold), and airidh (a shieling). On the opposite side of the burn is Narachan, which I cannot explain. Perhaps it is derived from naithair gen. nathrach (a serpent). But as there are other Narachans, the name is probably descriptive. On the north side of the burn are also Torr Meadhonach (the middle hill), Creag ghlas (the grey or green rock), Cnoc-nan-sgrath (the turf hill), and, on the shore, Rudha a' Chreagain Duibh (the headland of the black rock).

Rising above Bolairidh is the hill of Torr-nead an-eoin (the hill of the bird's nest), and farther south is Clachan, either the plural or the diminutive of clach (a stone).

We pass out of the parish of Kilbride (the Church of St Bridget), into the parish of Kilmorie (the Church of St Mary, that is, the church dedicated to St Mary).

The first word that claims our attention now is Lochranza itself, from which the district takes its name. The earlier name was Keanlochransay or Kendlocheraysay (the head of Lochransay). It is also called Lochede, which I take to mean Loch-head, or the head of the loch.

Keanloch—or Kendloch—the first part of this word, is plain enough. It signifies Loch-head, or head of the loch; and the last syllable is also plain. It signifies an island, and is the same—a or ay—which occurs so frequently at the termination of the names of islands, as Jura, Islay, Colonsay, &c. Ranza¹ is, therefore, the Island of Ran, but what is Ran? The name of the giant goddess, the Queen of the sea, in Norse mythology, was Ran, so that, perhaps, Lochranza may have derived its name from this mythic goddess. But there is a word ran in Danish which signifies robbery, plunder, and, possibly, Ranza may signify the island of plunder. These explanations are mere conjectures, and must be taken for what they are worth. The island was the place on which the castle stands, and which must have been at one time surrounded with water.

Near the bay of Lochranza, on the south, is the Coilemore (the big wood), and nearer the village are two places marked on the map Urinbeg and Clachurin. Beg is the adjective beag (little), and clach is a stone; but I do not know the meaning of urin.

Other names of places at Lochranza are Margmaheglis (the Merkland of the Church), which was, no doubt, the land attached to an older church of Lochranza which occupied the site of the present Established Church, which was built in 1795 (the old church is marked on a map published about 1640); Loch a' Mhuilin (the loch of the mill); a small loch marked on the map, Cnoc leacainn Duibhe (the knoll of the black hill-slope or declivity), and Doire buidhe (the yellow forest), above Catacol.

The glen through which the stream, which divides the two parishes, passes, is named on the map Gleann Easan Biorach (the glen of the pointed waterfalls).¹

To the north of Catacol is a cairn, marked on the map Arfhionn, correctly Ar Fhinn (the slaughter of Finn), probably a corruption of some other name. At anyrate, this word has not given its name to the Island of Arran.

We come to Catacol, which is for Catagil, which occurs in an old document. Cata, which signifies a kind of small ship, is the same word from which Caithness, from Kat-nes (the ship headland), takes its name;² and gil, which occurs very frequently in names of places, signifies a deep narrow glen with a stream at bottom. Catacol is, therefore, the glen of the Kata, or small ship, pointing, in all probability, to the time when ships anchored where are now cultivated fields.

A small stream which falls into Catacol Bay, to the north of the larger stream that comes down Glencatacol, is marked on the map Abhainn bheag (the small river).

A small loch, which sends a streamlet down into the Catacol river, is marked Lochan a' Mhill (the little loch of the hill). Meall, of which the genitive is mill, signifies a lump, a heap, a hill.

"Craw" I have not seen in any older form, and, therefore, I cannot explain it with certainty. There is a Norse word krá, signifying a nook or corner, and a Gaelic word cró (an enclosure, a fold, a hut), with either of which it may be identical.

¹ "Of the heifers," according to local ideas.—ED.

² This derivation of Caithness is unusual. The Gaelic Cataobh means Sutherland now, but originally it included Caithness; and it is clear that the Norse borrowed the term, and restricted it to the horn or corn of the country now known as Caithness. The word cat for ship is rare and metaphoric (from cat, the feline species); compare Eng. cat, ship.

Lennymore is the great wet meadow. The word leana signifies a wet or swampy meadow—grassy land, with a soft, spongy bottom—and is very common in Irish topography. Lenamore is the name of many townlands in the Irish counties.

Thundergay¹ is called Torr-na-gaoith (the hill of the wind) by the natives of Arran; but, as the old form of the word was Tonregethy (back to the wind), the double r of Torr-na-gaoith seems to have arisen from the assimilation of n to r, common phonetic change.

Penrioch, of which Pennerevach was an older form, is Peighinn-riabhach (the brindled or gray pennyland).

Allt-gobhlach is the forked stream, from allt (a stream) and gobhlach (forked).

Whitefarland, or Whiteforland, is the white promontory or cape.

Tobar Chaluimchille, between North and South Tundergay, is St Columba's well.

On the shore we find marked Rudha Airidh Bheirg,² Rudha Glas, and Rudha Ban. There is a Gaelic word beirg which signifies a soldier, a champion, a marauder. If this be the word from which Rudha-airidh-Bheirg takes its name, the meaning would be the point or headland of the soldier's shieling. Rudha glas is the gray point or headland, or more probably the green point or headland; for glas signifies both gray or pale white and green. Rudha ban is the white point or headland.

To the south of Whitefarland is Leac-bhuidhe. Leac means a flat stone, and, therefore, Leac-bhuidhe is the yellow flagstone. But this name may be Leaca-bhuidhe (the yellow hill-slope), from leaca, gen. leacainn (a hill-slope).

Imachar is written Tymochare and Tymoquhare in some ancient charters. I cannot at present say anything with certainty

¹ Also found written "Truregeys." In reference to Tundergay, the following extract from Dr Joyce's "Irish Names of Places" seems to leave no doubt as to its meaning:—"The Irish word ton signifies the backside, exactly the same as the Latin podex. It was very often used to designate hills, and also low-lying or bottom lands; and it usually retains the original form ton—as we see in Tonduff, Tonbaun, Tonroe—black, white, and red backside, respectively; Toneel in Fermanagh, the bottom land of the lime. One particular compound, Ton-le-gaoith, which literally signifies 'backside to the wind,' seems to have been a favourite term; for there are a great many hills all through the country with this name, which are now called Tonlegee. Sometimes the preposition re is used instead of le—both having the same meaning—and the name in this case becomes Tonregee. In this last, a d is often inserted after the n (p. 57), and this, with one or two other trifling changes, has developed the form Tanderagee, the name of a little town in Armagh, and of ten townlands, all in the Ulster counties, except one in Meath, and one in Kildare." Joyce's "Irish Names of Places," 3rd Ed., p. 507.

² Locally, Bhirga; from meirge, "standard"?—Ed.

in regard to the meaning of this word, and conjectural interpretations are of little value.¹

The older form Baynleka shows that Ballickine is for Ban leacainn (the white hillside or hill-slope). The word is a good example of the ease and certainty with which words, that on the face appear difficult, can be explained when we get at their older forms.

We come next to Dougrie, which is written Dowgare and Dougarre in old charters. These forms show plainly that the first part of this word is dubh (black); but they leave us in some uncertainty in regard to the second part—gar or garre—which may be either garadh (a den, a cave, also a thicket), or garrad (a garden). Garadh occurs in other place-names, Glenn-garadh (Glengarry) and Garadh-buidhe (the yellow thicket or shrubbery).

Iorsa, like Rosa, is Norse. The last syllable a means water, but it is difficult to say what the first syllable signifies.

A stream, which falls into the Iorsa water is called Allt-na-h-airidh (the burn of the shieling).

A small lake, at the head of Glen Scaftigill, is called Dubh Loch (the black loch). Loch Tana, which likewise empties itself into the Iorsa water, means probably the shallow loch. I say probably, because I do not know exactly how the word tana is pronounced.

Skaftigill is Norse. The last syllable means a narrow glen, and skøft is Danish for English shaft, haft, handle. The corresponding Ice. word skapt occurs frequently in place-names, as skapta (shaft-river, Cf. the name Shafto), skaptar-fell (shaft-mountain; Cf., shap-fell in Westmoreland). Skaftigill is, therefore, shaft-glen.

We come next to Achencar, a more recent form of Achachara (the field of the standing-stone), from achadh (a field), and caradh (a pillar or standing-stone), the place having taken its name from the pillar-stone still standing there.

South of Achencar, Cnocan cuallaich (the little hill of the cattle-herding)

Farther south is Achagallon (in Gael, achaghallion), which likewise means the field of the standing-stone, from achadh (a field) and gallon (a pillar or standing-stone¹).

On the shore is Cleiteadh Buidhe (the yellow ridge of rocks), from cleiteadh (a ridge of rocks in the sea) and buidhe yellow.

There is a little hill above Auchagallon set down on the map as Cnoc-na-céille (the hill of wisdom), but the proper name, I understand, is Cnoc-na-cailligh (the hag's hill).

¹ There was once a ferry here; hence the name may mean "Oaring."—ED.

We come next to Machaire (a field, a plain), a very common name, as might be expected, in Gaelic topography, both Scotch and Irish.

The next name on the map is Torrmore (the big hill), from torr (a hill), and mor (great, big). There is also Torr-beg (the little hill).

There is marked on the map a Torr-rìgh-beag (the king's little hill), which seems to be the name of a small hill, which is marked as being 350 feet above the level of the sea.

Between Torr-mor and the shore is Leacan ruadh (the red flag-stone); but I suspect Leacan should be Leacainn (a hill-slope), and Leacainn ruadh (the red hill-slope).

Near Torr-rìgh-beag there is a place marked as An Cumbann, which means the strait, the defile.

Near the shore, north from Druim-an-dùin, is Cleiteadh-nan-Sgarbh (the cormorant rocks, or, more properly, ridge of rocks of the cormorants).

We come now to Drumadoon; in Gaelic, Druim-an-dùin (the ridge of the fort), from druim (back, ridge), and dùin (a fort); the Gaelic etymological equivalent of Eng. town, from Anglo-Saxon tun.

I have already referred to Torr-beg (the little hill).

The Eilean More, near Black-water Foot, is a big island.

The Dubh Abhainn is the Black-water, and Black-water Foot is Bun-na-Dubh-Abhainn.

Feorline, of which there are two—South Feorline and North Feorline—is the Farthing-land, as peighinn (penny) is Pennyland. Unoc-na-Peighinn is the hill of the Pennyland.

Ballygown is Smith town, from baile (town, town-land), and gobhann, gen. of gobha (smith). Unoc Ballygown is the hill of the smith-town.

An t-Allt Beithe is Birch-burn, the name by which it now seems to be best known.

Shedog, in Gaelic Seidag or Seidog, is a diminutive formed by the feminine og or ag from seid—corresponding, I have no doubt, to Scottish shed (a portion of land separate from another).

Bullinaeuil is the town or town-land of the nook or corner. I have been told that this name has been recently given to Mr Allan's farm, and is in no way descriptive; but I have been also told that the name is much older than at least the time of the present occupant. There are two parts of Balmichael—Baile Iochdarach (Lower Balmichael) and Baile Uachdarach (Upper Balmichael).

Balnainne is baile na moine (the town or townland of the moss).

¹ There is a standing-stone marked on the map above Auchaghallion. Ghlaic Bhan (the white hollow) is between Auchaghallion and Machrie.

Clachan, a derivative from clach (a stone), means a hamlet, and also a burying-place.

Ballmichael is a town or townland of Michael.

Sroin-na-carraige (the nose, or point of the rock), now forms part of the farm of Ballmichael.

Gortan Dubh (the black little field) is near Ballmichael.

Sloc a' Mhadaidh (the pit or hole of the dog) is now part of the farm of Ballmichael.

Strath-na-Cliabh (the strath of the hurdles, or of the harrows¹).

On the Tormore side of the stream is Sliabh-nan-Carrachan (the hill or moor of the standing-stones), the name having been taken from the standing-stones.

On the same side is Cnocan na-tubha (the little hill of the thatch), where, I suppose, turf for thatching the houses used to be cut.

We come now to Daire-nan-each (the oak of the horses), or rather Dair-nan-each (the grove of the horses).

Lag-an-Torra-Duibh (the hollow of the black hill) is the name of the wood below Dar-na-each.

Tarr-na-Creige (the extremity or tail of the rock) is probably for Torr-na-creige (the hill of the rock).

Glaistre is for Glas-doire (the gray or green grove). In old documents the spelling is Glasdery.

Monyquil was formerly written Monyeole, which means the moss or bog of the hazel, from monadh (moss, bog), and col, gen. coil (hazel).

The second part of Glenlaeg I cannot explain with any certainty.

The glen through which the Shisken road passes is Gleann-an-t-suidhe (the glen of the seat), and the glen to the north of it is Gleann an Easboig (the bishop's glen).

Shisken, from which the district which we have now traversed takes its name, is in Gaelic, an sescenn, which means a boggy, marshy, or sedgy place, which, no doubt, was a correct description of the district when it received its name, although it has now a good many fertile fields.

[At this point Dr Cameron's paper on Arran Places Names, so far as it was thrown into literary form, ends, leaving the south-western corner of the island, from Blackwater Foot to Pladda Isle, unfinished. Fortunately, he has left notes on the place-names of the district, and they are here reproduced as he left them, in order to complete his survey of Arran Place Names. The notes begin at Shisken, where he left off in the last section of his paper :—

¹ There is a place here called Cra-léith, or something which sounds like that.

- Kilpatrick, for Cill Phàdraig—the Church of St Patrick.
 Bruthach Breac, speckled brae, near Kilpatrick.
 Rudha Garbard, for Rudha-garbh-àrd—the rough headland.
 Aird-nan-Rón, the height of the seals.
 Rinn-a'-Chrúban, the point of the crab-fish.
 Cnocan Donn, the brown hillock—two places of this name.
 Cnoc Reamhar, the thick hill.
 Torr, the hill.
 Cnocan-a'-Chrannchuir, the hillock of the lot.
 Cor-na-beithe, the round hill of the birch, or hollow of the birch.
 Lean-a'-Chneamh, the boggy land of the garlic.
 Torr an Daimh, the hill of the ox.
 Beinn-tarsuinn, the cross mountain.
 Loch-cnoc-an-Locha, the loch of the hill of the loch.
 Tormusk, the hill of the musket.
 Beinn Bhreac, the gray or brindled mountain.
 Cnocan Biorach, the pointed hill.
 Cnoc-na-Croise, the hill of the cross.
 Cnoc-a'-Chapuill, the hill of the horse.
 Cnoc-na-Dail, the hill of the meeting, or the hill of delay, but rather the former.
 Ross, for Ros, wood, the word signifies a peninsula.
 Port-na-Feannaige, the port of the hoodie crow, or also, the port of the lazy bed.
 Cleiteadh Dubh, the black ridge of rocks.
 Cleiteadh, near Clachag farm.
 Slidderly (Pont has Sledroi).
 Port Mór, the large port, near Slidderly water.
 Glenscorradale, from Scorradal by prefixing the Gaelic gleann. Skorradal is a place name in Ireland. It is derived from skorri, apparently the name of a bird. Cf. Vigfusson.
 Glenree, for Glean-rioh—the glen of the king; or Gleann reagh, for Gleann-riabhach—the grey glen.
 Boguille, for boglach (!)—a bog, a boggy place.
 Bírícan, or Buirican.
 Bennicarrigan, the hill of the little rock; but is Benni. for Penni?
 Clachaig, an inflected form of clachag; Irish clochag or clochoge (a stony place, a place full of round stones)—from clach or cloch, stone.
 Lagg, for lag—a hollow. Lagan, for lagan—the little hollow.
 Kilmory (St Mary's Church. See above).
 Shanachy, the old field. Cf. Shanaghy in Joyce's Place Names, II., p. 450.
 Torrylin, for torra-linn—the tower or hill of the pool.
 Cloined, for cluain-fhad—the long meadow; or cluain-fhad, the long slope. Cf. Joyce, p. 224 and 400.
 Aucheleffen, for achadh-leth-pheighinn—the half-penny field.
 Achareoch, for achadh-riabhach—the grey field.
 Bogaire, a soft marshy place; Na Bogaire (plural), because there are two places of the same name.
 Achenhew, for achadh-có—the field of the yew. Cf. Joyce, I., p. 492.
 Levenorrach, for leth-pheighinn corrach—the steep half-penny land.
 Bennan, for beannan—the little hill.
 Pladda, old forms Pladow, Plada.

(Seven or eight of the Western Isles are called Fladda respectively, the Icelandic island-name Flatey, flat island; Pladda is a Gaelic variant of Fladda with f de-aspirated to p.—Ed.)

GAELIC ORTHOGRAPHY.¹

Gentlemen,—The importance of a correct organic orthography in connection with the study of language can scarcely be over-estimated. Sounds are the elements or materials out of which all languages are constructed. Hence an accurate scientific acquaintance with the laws of sound is, before all things, essential in the study of language. This is, to quote Professor Windisch's words, "the A, B, C of philology and of all grammar." But letters are the signs of sounds, and words are made up of letters. An accurate orthography, therefore, means the writing of words so as to correctly represent the sounds and the changes which those sounds have undergone in accordance with the phonetic laws of the language to which they belong. The spelling of a word may, indeed, represent with sufficient accuracy the sound of a word and yet be historically incorrect, and, therefore, entirely misleading in regard to its etymology and affinities. As examples, the Gael. adj. deagh (good) is also spelled deadh in the dictionaries, this being, indeed, the more frequent spelling. The ancient form deg, however, with its comparative dech (better), apparently cognate with Lat. decus, shows that deagh and not deadh is the correct orthography. Fleadh (a banquet, a feast) is also spelled fleagh, but, in this case, the Welsh guledd shows that dh, not gh, is the correct termination. Stagh (a stay, a rope in the rigging of a ship) is also spelled stadh, this being, indeed, the only spelling in the High. Soc. and Armstrong's Dictionaries; and yet the Ice., Dan., and Sw. stag (a stay, the rope from the mast to the stem), from which, clearly, the Gaelic word has been borrowed, shows that stagh is the correct form. Tuagh (an axe) is spelled also tuadh, but the old Gael. tuag shows that tuagh is the correct modern spelling. Stair is spelled staidhir and staidhre in the dictionaries, which do not give the form stair at all, although A. S. stæyer, Dut. steiger, from the root stigh (to ascend), show that stair or stair is the correct spelling, unless we regard this word, evidently a loan-word, as borrowed from Eng. stair, with dh inserted to make it dissyllabic. Agh (luck, prosperity) is spelled also adh in the dictionaries. The old Gaelic agh shows that the correct spelling is agh.

In these words, and others that might be added, the double forms have arisen from d and g when aspirated, being pronounced in precisely the same way. The pronunciation is, therefore, as accurately represented by deadh, fleagh, stadh, tuadh, staidhir or staidhre, and *ád*h, as by deagh, fleadh, stagh, tuagh, staignir or staignre, and ágh; nevertheless, the second series alone are the historically correct forms: the first series are incorrect—they are the result of careless spelling, and should be removed from the dictionaries or else marked as inaccurate forms. This purging of our dictionaries by removing from them or stamping as spurious all forms which are the fruit either of careless orthography or of arbitrary changes made in spelling words in violation of the phonetic laws of the language, would be an important service to Gaelic orthography.

An accurate orthography, therefore, seeks to accomplish two purposes:—

1. It seeks, first, to represent correctly the sounds of words.

2. And, secondly, to represent those sounds, as far as possible, by letters which serve to indicate the origin and history of words.

This is what is meant by an organic orthography, such as our own, as distinguished from a mere phonetic orthography, like the Mankish, which, although it may, sometimes, more faithfully represent the sounds of a language, has the effect of dissociating its forms from their parentage and their affinities.

On the importance of an organic orthography in connection with the study of ancient Gaelic, a knowledge of which is absolutely necessary to carry on successfully the study of the etymology and grammatical structure of Gaelic, Schleicher remarked, many years ago, “that an organic orthography is, above all things, necessary to enable us to get a right knowledge of Old Irish.” More recently, Dr Stokes has said:—“The greatest service which could now be rendered to Celtic philology, would be for some competent palaeographer (say Mr Bradshaw) to collate with the original texts Prof. Zimmer’s Glossæ Hibernicæ, the facsimiles issued by the Royal Irish Academy, Mr Skene’s Four Ancient Books of Wales, and the Liber Landavensis, and to publish the results of this collation.”¹

Now, if perfect accuracy in the transcription of manuscripts be so important, is it not, likewise, important to save our language from the wholesale process of corruption to which it has long been, and unfortunately is still, subjected through orthographical changes which are the result of either carelessness in writing or ignorance “of its natural and necessary phonetic laws?” As bearing upon this matter, it will be interesting to quote the severe terms in which Zeuss condemns the well-known orthographical rule of “Leathan ri leathan and caol ri caol,” which has done so much to corrupt our language, by introducing vowels so frequently into places where neither by original possession nor by the laws of vowel-change, they have any right to appear. He speaks of it as the famous rule of the modern language, both Irish and Scottish, by which the orthography has been corrupted to a degree which makes a stranger or one who has regard for pure spelling shudder. And yet this rule has so fixed itself in our language that I do not see how it could be dispensed with, especially in those cases in which the consonant intervening between the vowels of adjacent syllables is an unaspirated dental or palatal, or a combination of liquid and dental or palatal.

I shall, probably, best succeed in showing the importance of an accurate organic orthography in relation to the study of Gaelic by giving illustrations of the evil effects of an inaccurate orthography (I.) on the study of etymology, and (II.) on the study of the grammatical structure of Gaelic.

I. Etymology :—

I shall take some familiar words, and, first, words which have been changed in their first syllables.

Aobhar (cause) I have seen connected with Latin opera (work) from which Gaelic obair is borrowed. Now, aobhar is a very modern spelling for adhbar, the form regularly in use in the first edition of the Gaelic New Testament, and in the early editions of the metrical Psalms. It represents with sufficient accuracy the pronunciation of the word, the first syllable, adh, being still pronounced in the same way as oo in many Gaelic words, such as adhart (progress), adhart (bolster), adhartan (bolster, a little bolster), adhare (a horn), adhaltas (adultery), and adhastar (a halter). Adhbar is the regular modern form of Old Gaelic adbar, derived from the root ber, cognate with Lat. fero, and the prefix ad for aith (Z. 867), cognate with Skr. ati, Zend aiti (excessive), Gr. eti (moreover, further), Lat. et (and, also), at in ataras (an ancestor).¹ The spelling aobhar was introduced into the 1796 ed. of the New Testament Scriptures; but adhbar is found in Stewart's Grammar, and is given in the dictionaries as an alternate form.

Adhastar (halter), just referred to, is spelled also aghastar in the dictionaries, in which it is explained as aghaidh-stiùir, from aghaidh (face) and stiùir (helm, rudder, guide). The ancient form adhastar, compared with Welsh eddestr, eddestl, a steed, shows that the spelling with g is erroneous.

Aoradh, introduced into the New Testament of 1796 for adhradh, which is the regular form, I have seen connected with Lat. oro (I pray). These words are certainly connected, for adhradh is the modern form of adrad, a loan-word from adoratio, which shows that the comparison of aor with or of oro is erroneous and misleading.

¹ The prefix aith, ath is now recognised as allied to Lat. at only, not to et. In aobhar the adh is ad, Lat. ad, Eng. at.

Aeghaire (Aeghair) a shepherd, or (as it would now be spelled in most parts of the Highlands) aoghaire (aoghair) is written in the dictionaries aodhair and aodhaire, with d for g, aoghair or aoghaire, although the correct form as shown by the older form aegaire, being entirely omitted. The importance of retaining the correct orthography is shown by Dr Stokes' interesting analysis of this word: aegaire = ae-guire, of which ae (oi) is oi (a sheep), cognate with Lat. ovis (v being dropped in Gaelic), and guire cognate with Gr. a geiro (to bring or gather together), N.H.G. kehren (to turn).

Adhbronn (ankle) is written aobran, aobrann, aobrunn in the dictionaries; but the ancient form adhbronn shows that adhbronn, or adhbrann, with o assimilated to a and d to n, is the correct spelling, although not found in any of our dictionaries. The first syllable, ad, of adhbronn has been connected by Dr Stokes with Gr. pous, podos, Lat. pes, ped-is, A.S. fof, Eng. foot, from root pad (to go), p being dropped in Gaelic; the second part being the same as Gaelic brù, bronn. The comparison, however, is doubtful.

Abhainn is really the acc. of abhann, modern form of aband or abann (river), but is now used in the nominative, in the same way in which in many other fem. nouns the acc. has become, in the modern language, the nominative. Cf. cloinn, loinn, roinn, &c. In the 1767 edition of the New Testament, this word is always written with m for b, no doubt from a supposed connection with Lat. amnis, a supposition which may be correct, if we regard amnis as standing for abnis. In the first edition of the Old Testament Scriptures, the old spelling with b was restored, and in the fourth part translated by Dr John Smith, the correct form of the nominative is used. The spelling with m was, however, introduced into subsequent editions, and has long prevailed, the older and more accurate form being now seldom used. It may, however, regain its place. The Brit. form of the word is afòn, with f for b as in afal (apple) = Gael. abhall from aball, and Hafren (Severn) = Lat. Sabrina.

Bheil for bhfeil.

Bheil was introduced into the first edition of the Gaelic New Testament instead of the Irish form bhfuil previously used in Scottish Gaelic publications. Bhfuil is the eclipsed form of the substantive verb fuil, which is the modern form of fil, used in the ancient language only in the 3rd person singular. Feil is another form of the same verb, its eclipsed form being bhfeil. The one form (bhfuil) is used in Irish Gaelic, and the other form (bhfeil) in Scottish Gaelic.

But I must here briefly explain the nature and cause of Eclipsis, which affects Irish Gaelic regularly, and Scottish Gaelic to a greater extent than many suppose.

When a word terminates, or, more correctly, when a word terminated originally with n, that letter is carried forward or transported to the beginning of the next word, where it either modifies, or is itself modified by, the initial letter of the following word. In the ancient language, the nasal disappeared before the tenues consonants (c, p, t), and s, f, was assimilated to the liquids (l, m, n, r) with which it frequently also coalesced, and was preserved before the medials and vowels. The same thing occurs in Mod. Irish, with this exception that where n disappeared in the ancient language, it, likewise, disappears in the modern language; but, in addition, the tenues and f are eclipsed by their respective medial sounds, i.e., c becomes in pronunciation g, p b, t becomes d, and f becomes v (written bh). These changes are expressed by writing g immediately before c (ar gclann), b before p (ar bpeacadh), d before t (ar dteach), and bh before f (ar bhfearra), and the effect is that c, p, t and f are silent in pronunciation. Hence these consonants are said to be eclipsed by g, b, d, and bh, respectively.

In the modern language, as in the ancient, the nasal is assimilated to the liquids, with which it frequently coalesces. Hence conleith (with half) becomes colleith by assimilation, and colwith by coalescing, and in the modern language gu leith. In mach (out) becomes immach by assimilation, imach by coalescing, and, hence, in the modern language, amach or a mach. In nocht (to night) becomes by coalescing inocht, and, therefore, in modern Gaelic, a nocht. Con robh by assimilation becomes corrobh and by coalescing corobh, in the modern language go robh.

Before the medials and vowels, the nasal is preserved in the modern as in the ancient language. Therefore, "seven cows" is "seachd mbá," pronounced seachd má, "the swords of the heroes" is "claidhean na ngaisgeach," "the children of men" is "clann na ndaoine," "our father" is "ar n-athair," and "your servants" is "bhur n-óglach."

The rules above stated apply more extensively, as I have said, to Scottish Gaelic than many are aware of; and that they did, at one time, apply more than they do now is proved by the Dean of Lismore's Manuscript, which was written phonetically in the heart of the Scottish Highlands, and in which eclipsed forms abound. This is also proved by the numerous relics of Eclipsis which exist in the living language, and by its lingering still among the people where the language has been least affected by the various influences which are rapidly reducing it into a state of complete phonetic disintegration. Among the relics of Eclipsis still in regular use in our living language, there are such phrases as a stigh, a steach, a stir, and also in bheil, ma in gu ma, and márach, the true character of which as eclipsed forms is concealed by the present orthography.

A stigh, a steach, and a stír are regular examples of the suppression of final n before s and t. A stigh = Old Gaelic, in-sin-iigh (in the house), in being the prep., now an; sin, the article in the dat., with s preserved because the prep. ends with a consonant (n), and tigh (better taigh) is the dat. of the noun teach, modern form of Old Gaelic tech = teg (the g of teg becoming ch because vowel-flanked). Teg is from the root teg (cf. Lat. tego) = Indo-Europ. root stay or stak. In in-sin-tech, n of the prep. disappears before s of the article sin, and tech being a neuter noun, the article before it ends with a nasal, which disappears before t. Hence in-sin-tigh becomes i-si-tigh, and, by dropping the i of the article, istigh, in Modern Gaelic astigh or a stigh. In the same way, a steach = Old Gael. in-sin-tech (tech being the acc. governed by in after a verb of motion) = i-si-tech = istech = asteach or a steach. A stír = in-sin-tír (a neut. i-stem) = i-si-tír = i-stír = istír = mod. astír or a stír.

The substitution of feil for fuil was an improvement in Scottish orthography, as the diphthong ei represents the pronunciation more correctly than ui; but the spelling bheil, although representing the sound correctly, is entirely misleading as to the origin, history, and real character of the form. This has led to its being compared with Gr. pelomai, with which, of course, it can have no connection whatever, for feil is a derivative from the root vel (to choose), and is, therefore, cognate with Lat. velle, Eng. will. Instead, therefore, of writing bheil, it would be better to write bhfeil, to the correct reading of which one would soon become accustomed.

The true character of a m'arach (so written in the 1767 edition of the Gaelic New Testament, but a m'aireach in subsequent editions) is, likewise, concealed by its present orthography. It has, therefore, been compared with Eng. morrow, a doublet of morn, from older morven cognate with Germ. morgen. But a m'arach is for a mb'arach = am-b'arach, the prep. an (am, before a labial) and barack = W. boreu. Marach and barack are not, therefore, sister-forms, like mrecht and brecht (speckled), mlicht and blicht (milk), mrath and brath (betrayal), and mraich and braich (malt), mruig and bruig (district), &c.¹

¹ Stokes gives the Celtic stem bārego as the ultimate of m'aireach. It was usual once to connect Eng. morrow (root mryg or mrygh) with (m'aireach, and, though Dr Cameron, Dr Stokes, and Prof. Zimmer are against it, yet it seems possible to show connection. The Celtic root was possibly mryg, where the r was long vowel r, a vowel which develops generally into rā; yet consider dair from dhr (r long) allied to Greek thrōsko, leap, and fuircaig, from rr, allied to Lat. varus, varix, Eng. varicose.—ED.

Ma in gu ma is, likewise, an eclipsed form. It is for mba or mbadh. Gu ma is, therefore, the conditional mood of the substantive verb, and might with advantage be written gu m-badh in Scottish as well as in Irish Gaelic. Chugad = O.G. cucut = co + co + tu became hugad, and (substituting th for h) thugad.

Secondly, I shall give some examples of injurious internal changes on words.

The infinitive of the verb criathram (I sift) is written criavadh in Luke xxiii. 31 in the first and all subsequent editions of the New Testament, while in Amos ix. 9 the future indic. is written criathraidh mi (I shall sift). The verb is a denom. from criathor (a sieve), stem creitron (Stokes), cognate to Lat. cribrum.

Fiadhnais for fiadhnaise (witness), a neut. ia-stem, has, like many other trisyllabic words accented on the first syllable, lost its final e. The ancient form of this word is fiadnisse (Z. 32, &c.), from the prep. fiad (before), which Zeuss refers to the root vid (to see). It is, therefore, connected etymologically as well as in meaning with Eng. witness. This, however, could not be ascertained from its form in any Scottish edition of the Gaelic Scriptures. In the first edition of the New Testament it is written fi'uais or fi'nuis, with an apostrophe to mark the dropping of dh. In subsequent editions, the mark of elision was omitted and the word assumed the form fiuais or fiunuis, in which it is now written. Of course the reason why dh was dropped was that the d became silent through aspiration. But, no doubt, for a similar reason, the aspirated t of cruihneachd (wheat) was dropped in the ed. of 1767 (see Math. iii. 12; xiii. 25, &c.), and then in the next edition (1796) the mark of elision was omitted, as in the case of fiadhnaise; but in subsequent editions (ed. 1826) th was restored, and it is still retained. So much for consistency!

Bhios, bidh.

Fiadhnais has been despoiled of an organic d; but the forms bhios, bidh, of the substantive verb, have been dealt with quite differently. They have had an inorganic t (aspirated) thrust into them, for the purpose, no doubt, of separating between the adjacent vowels in the dissyllabic forms of this verb. In recent editions of the Gaelic Scriptures, the lengthened forms bhitheas, bithidh, have to a great extent supplanted the older forms, which the editors have regarded as abbreviations of the forms with th! They even sometimes mark these forms as abbreviations (cf. Met. Ps. xxxvii. 20, in 1880 ed. b'adh; ibid xxxii. 11, b'bh), thinking, no doubt, that th is organic. Cf. Report of Comm. on Gaelic Scriptures. The ancient forms were bhias, bidh. Cf. Zeuss.

Oisg (a ewe) is also written óithisg in the dictionaries, with th inserted to make the word dissyllabic, although, correctly, it is a monosyllable derived from oi (sheep) and seasg (barren),

Uathbhas (dread, horror, terror), in ancient Gaelic uathbás from uath (terrible; terror), the same word as fuath (a spectre, apparition, ghost), and bás (death), was written in the edition of 1767 (Acts iii. 10) ua'bhas, 1767 uathbhas in Luke iv. 36, with an apostrophe to indicate the suppression of th. In the ed. of 1796, ua'bhas became uamhas, the form still used in the Gaelic Scriptures. In the dictionaries, to be sure, we have the organic form uathbhas; but, under it, we are referred to uamhas, which was, no doubt, considered the more accurate form, as the definitions are given under it. Armstrong gives us also uabhas, although he, likewise, gives a preference to uamhas, which was, probably, regarded as connected with uamhan (dread), quite different although allied in meaning.

I have elsewhere referred to ullaich (prepare) and to the changes which it has undergone, which have left us, in this last form of the word, very slender data from which to infer its origin. But we know that ullaich is for ullmhaich, which is a shorter form of ullamhaich, a derivative from the adjective ullamh (ready, prepared). Ullamh, again, is for urlamh, from which it is derived by the assimilation of r to l, and wlamh is just another form of erlamh, the old Gaelic erlam (ready, prepared) formed by the prefix er = ar (our modern air) from lam, not lám (hand = Lat. plama), but a derivative from the root *las*¹ = Skr. lash (to desire), with which Lat. lascious and Eng. lust are connected, and from which is derived the modern Gaelic word comhairle (counsel). In tracing the origin of this word, the step from ullaich to ullmhaich or ullamhaich is a very important one, and it is furnished by the living language, independent of other evidence; for ullamhaich is the form still in use in some parts of the country. When, therefore, we have two forms of the same word in use in the living language, it is surely a sound orthographical rule that the older and more organic form should not be expelled from the classical writings of the language, to make way for a more recent and weaker form.² But in the case of ulluchadh and many similar words, this rule has been entirely disregarded, as may be seen by comparing d-ullmhuighadh (John xiv. 2, Bedel's Ed.), dh' ull'uchadh (ibid, Ed. 1767), dh' ulluchadh (ibid, Ed. 1796), dh' ull'uchadh (ibid, 1826), dh' ulluchadh (ibid, Ed. 1880), ulluchadh (Rev. xxi. 2,

¹ This has been the usual derivation given from Zeuss downwards. Now, however, Dr Stokes in his Urkeittische Sprachschatz says the root is that of lámh, hand; and rightly, too.—ED.

² Hence cas, bos, are preferable to cas, bas.

Ed. 1880). It is interesting also to compare such words as cúimhneich, cómhnadh, cómhnaidh, cómhradh, in which mh, although silent in the pronunciation, at anyrate in many parts of the country, has been invariably retained in the written language.

Imtheacht is the regular mod. form of O. Gael. immthecht = imm-thecht, formed from techt (going) infinitive of tiagam (I go) and imm = imb cognate with Gr. amphi, Lat. amb-. In the 1767 ed., imtheacht occurs in Math. ii. 13, and other places; but in several other places the th is omitted, and its place supplied by an apostrophe. In subsequent editions imeacht, without any mark of elision, became the regular form. This spelling, no doubt, correctly represents the pronunciation, but so would likewise imtheacht, and it would, besides, tell its own history.

Goirthear (is called), 3rd sing. pres. ind. pass. of the verb goir = gair from the root gar (to speak), whence Gr. gēras (speech), occurs in 1767 ed. in Math. i. 16, xxvii. 17, 22, and other places: but in Acts xiii. 1, Rom. vii. 3, ix. 26, and other places, it is written goir'ear with th dropped out and its place supplied by an apostrophe. In subsequent editions, we have simply goirear, without any mark of elision. This t (aspirated), which corresponds to t in the Latin termination, itur (of the 3rd sing. pres. ind. pass. 3rd conj.), has been similarly dropped from all mod. Gaelic verbs, and thus a most interesting and important mark of affinity between the Gaelic and Latin verb has been very unnecessarily removed from our more recent orthography.

In 1st Chronicles xiii. 7, nearly all the editions of the Gaelic Scriptures have nomha instead of nodha (new), which is another form of nuadha = O. Gael. nóide (new). Z. 794. D therefore and not m is the organic letter.

The words Gáidheal and Gáidhlig are also written in the dictionaries, Gael and Gaelig (with dh suppressed). It was probably these forms, and, perhaps, his not knowing the ancient forms, Goidel, Goidelic (?) that led the author of a very interesting commentary on Galatians, recently published, to connect etymologically Galatae, Keltae, Galli, Gaedachd. The name of Galatians, looked at from an etymological standpoint, is not allied to Gael, for, if we attach any value to the laws of sound, which are the basis of scientific etymology, these words could not have had a common origin, nor can they be connected with geal (white). Galatae, as every student of Zeuss' Gramm. Celtica must know, is derived regularly from the root gal, which appears in many Gaelic words, such as iorghal (strife, contest, battle), díoghail and díoghaltas (vengeance), fiorghal (murder of a kinsman), conghal (conflict, bravery), toghal (destruction), and gail (slaughter, valour), Old Gael. gal (valour). The Galatae were, therefore, the warlike men. Goidel, W. Gwyddel, is cognate, according to Siegfried quoted by Stokes, with Lat. haedus, from root ghid (to seize, get), whence Lat. praeda for praehed-a, from which comes our Gaelic spréidh (cattle), a curious connection, if real.¹ At anyrate, Goidel has no connection etymologically with Galatae. Galli (Gaul is a Frenchified form) seems connected with the Brit. gallu (power, ability), so that the Galli were the strong or powerful people. Of Celtae, which cannot have any connection etymologically with either Galatae, Goidel, or Galli, various explanations have been given. Gluck has referred it to the root of Latin celsus, excello, and O'Beirne Crowe to the root of Lat. celo (I conceal), to which belongs the Gaelic word cellt, from which kilt has been derived. If we accept the former explanation, the Celtae were the excellent, the superior people; if we accept the latter, they were the kilted people. Professor Rhys has lately suggested that Celtae is probably connected with the Old Norse hildir (war, battle), which would make it synonymous with Galatae. Geal (fair, white), is from the root ghar = ghal (bright, shining), and is cognate with Gr. chalkos. We thus see that these words, however near some of them may approach to others in meaning, have really no etymological connection.

Thirdly, I shall give some examples of changes made upon the terminations of words, which have the effect of obscuring their etymology, without having more faithfully represented their pronunciation.

Caui (lamentation) is usually written caoidh, with an inorganic terminal dh. In Old Gaelic it is coi and cai, which became caoi or caei quite regularly in Mod. Gaelic (cf. Bed. Bib. Rev. xviii. 11, Met. Ps. cii. 5, Ed. 1738). In the 1767 ed. of the Gael. New Testament, we find this word written caoi in Math. ii. 18 and Jam. iv. 9, and caoidh in Rev. xviii. 11. The eds. of 1796 and 1813 have caoi in the first two places, and caoidh in the last. In the first ed. of the Old Testament Scriptures and in the 1826 ed. of the Old and New Testaments, caoidh is the only spelling.

¹ The Scottish Gaelic, phonetically decayed though it be, and far from the literary centre of old Gaelic life, has yet preserved the name Gáidheal in greater purity than either early or modern Irish. About 1100, the Irish form of the word was Gúedel, the exact progenitor of the present Irish Gaoidheal. Giraldus gives the spelling Gáideli, and there are many indications that Gáideli is the best O. Irish form. The Scottish Gaelic Gáidheal points to an original Gáideli and a root gáid, which may possibly be the Aryan root ghādh, whence Eng. good; the Gaels being thus the "Good folk." One is, therefore, glad to see the correct form of the old word used by such a scholar as Standish H. O'Grady, who calls his recent work "Silva Gadelica." It is hoped Goidelic will soon disappear, as well as the other monstrosity imposed on ethnological science in the word Brythonic, which M. Loth has happily replaced by Brittonic (Welsh, Cornish, and Breton languages and peoples).—ED.

The importance of retaining the spelling caoi, which like saoi and daoi correctly represents the pronunciation, is shown by Skr. evās, Lat. queror for quesor, of which cai, not gearan as Professor Blackie (Lang. and Lit. of the Scott. Highs. p. 50)¹ supposed, is the Gaelic representative.

Dia (day), in the adverbial phrase an diu (to-day), is written diugh in all editions of the Gaelic Scriptures. As diu is the dat. of die or dia (day), from the same root div (to shine) as Dia (God), the g (aspirated) must be an inorganic letter, added probably to distinguish the iu of diu, which is short, from the same combination in fiù, cliù, diù (refuse), in which it is long. This distinction, however, is sufficiently indicated by the accentuation. In the ancient language, an diu is always written in diu, without a consonant termination.

Coinne (meeting) is written coinneamh in all the editions of the Gaelic Scriptures. It is coinne in Bed. Bible and in the early editions of the Scott. Metrical Psalms (cf. Ps. 40-9, Ed. 1738).

Tinne or tiomna (testament) is written tiomna in Bed. Bib. (Heb. 9, 16, 17, 20), but tiomnadh in all the editions of the Scottish New Testament, thus changing it, so far as orthography could do so, from an ia into a u-stem. The ancient form was timne or timna, a neut. ia-stem, formed by the prefix tim- = domm, from.

Fuine (baking) is fuineadh in Jer. vi. 18 in all editions. The infinitive or verbal noun is fuine, an ia-stem, like suidhe, &c. In Luke xiv. 9, in the edition of 1796, suidhe, the correct form, was substituted, and it has been retained in subsequent editions.

Bhi is the usual spelling of the infin. of the subst. verb. In Stewart's Grammar (p. 174), however, we find bhith, with final th. The importance of preserving t, which is organic, is shown, not only by the ancient form buith (= buti), but also by its cognates, Skr. bhât-is, Ch.-Slav. byti, Lith. bûti (to be).

Comharra or Comhartha (a sign) is spelled in a great variety of ways. In one edition of the Gaelic Scriptures, the 8vo edition at present sold by the National Bible Society, I have detected about half-a-dozen different spellings of the nominative case of this word. The ancient form is comarde, which by assimilation of d to r and of e to a, gives comharra, and which by aspirating the d and proverting it into t gives also comhartha. Both these forms may be regarded as correct, but I prefer the first. The forms with a single r and those ending in adh are clearly erroneous.

¹ Indeed, all the words given by Professor Blackie to show Lat. c becomes, in some cases, g may be regarded as erroneous, including gabh and capiro, gabhar and caper.

As examples of erroneous spelling resulting from false etymology, Cruith-fhear (Creator), Slánuigh-fhear (Saviour), mort-fhear (murderer) may be instanced. The termination of these words has nothing to do with fear (man). As shown by the older forms Cruthaightheóir, Slánuightheóir, and especially by loan-words like léightheóir (borrowed from Lat. lector), the termination of these words has more to do with the Lat. termination -tor in creator, salvator, than with fear.

Other examples are cruiteir, written cruiteir or cruitear in the dictionaries, euchaíre (horseman), coinnleir (a candlestick), &c., of which the termination is the same as Lat. arius, although explained in the dictionaries by fear (man).

The custom adopted, apparently, since the beginning of this century, of writing the infinitives ending in in, as faicsin, chuintin, fuotain, with two n's if more correctly representing the pronunciation, does much to obscure the etymology of these infinitives, which are n-stems agreeing with the Lat. fem. nouns in -tio, -tionis. Cf. aicsin, gen. aicsen, dat. aicsin, acc. aicsin-n, unless we assume that the acc. (with n-n) has become the nominative. The question is, Does not in sufficiently represent the liquid sound of the nasal, as in deimhin, domhain, &c., without doubling it? In regard to this question, I do not wish at present to speak more definitely.

Leac (a slab, a flagstone), in Old Gael. lec, is written also leachd in the dictionaries. Leac is a feminine a-stem (= Lat. planca), and should not be written with a t or d. Leachd, in Old Gael. lecht, from Lat. lectus, means a bed, a grave, and is not to be confounded with leac (a flat stone or slab). To which of these words does leac-lighe belong? The dictionaries give it the meaning of tombstone. Is the second part of the word lighe (a grave), cognate with Gr. lechos (bed)? Or, is it connected with Dan. lig (a corpse)?

The word lia, gen. liag (a stone), is not connected with leac. It is a mas. ne-stem cognate with Gr. lāas (a stone), laugkos (a pebble, a small stone)

I may here notice that the Old Gael. liige (lying) seems to show that the spelling luidhe, which is used in all the editions of the Scriptures, Bedel's included, is erroneous. Besides, liighe represents more correctly the Scottish pronunciation of this word. Cf. Goth. liqa (to lie) and the cognate words (Eng. lie, &c.)

In these examples I have taken notice only of changes that have been introduced into our present Gaelic orthography arbitrarily and in violation of the phonetic laws of the language, and their injurious effect upon the study of Gaelic etymology. I have not referred to the process of phonetic change that is ever, silently but surely, taking place in our language. These changes, in so far as they affect the terminations of words, have been dealt with in a strictly scientific manner, by Professor Windisch in his treatise on the laws of Auslaut in Irish.

I shall make a few remarks on Accentuation, which forms a very important department of Gaelic orthography.

The purpose served by accentuation in Gaelic is not to distinguish between words of different meaning, but which have come to be written in the same way, but to distinguish between long and short vowels. It often happens that, in serving the latter purpose, accents serve, likewise, the former; but their primary and proper purpose must be always kept in view. As a certain mark (a or o) indicates a certain vowel sound, so an accent placed over that mark indicates the lengthening of that sound; and as the vowels are modified according to certain laws, which perform a most important part in Gaelic etymology, it is of the utmost consequence that these modifications should be carefully indicated by the signs adopted for that purpose. In Old Gaelic, the lengthening of the vowels was indicated either by an acute accent placed over them or by writing them double. Sometimes both accent and duplication was used. In writing Scottish Gaelic, the grave accent has been used instead of the acute, a change the awkwardness of which is specially felt in comparing old and modern forms. The substitution of the acute accent for the grave would be a very decided improvement.

VI.

AUSLAUT N IN GAELIC.

It is not necessary to inform the members of a University Celtic Society¹ that the Gaelic language, apart from its valuable literary treasures, of which only a very small portion has yet been given to the world, is well deserving of being studied for its own sake, and for the sake of the light which its forms and grammatical structure throw upon the study of other languages to which it is related. But the study of Gaelic, like the study of everything else, in order to be really fruitful, must be accurate and thorough. It is not sufficient that one should be able to read and understand the language correctly, and have some acquaintance with its vocabulary and literature; it is necessary to know also the laws of sound which have shaped its words into their present forms, and the laws of thought which explain the structure of its sentences. It is this knowledge which imparts its peculiar charm to the study of Gaelic, and which renders it as truly as the study of Latin or Greek, of English or German, a valuable mental discipline.

A few examples of very common expressions will illustrate this statement:—

“Am bheil fear-an-tighe a stigh an diu?” “Cha ’n ’eil; chaidh e a mach do ’n achadh mu sheachd uairean, agus tha e a nis air bhith a nuigh an sin mu uair gu leth; ach bidh e air ’ais an so a ris an ùine ghoirid. Nach tig thu a steach gus an till e?” “Cha téid an tràth-s’, gu robh math agad; ach nìa bhios mi a làthair, agus nach tig nì sam bith san rathad, thig mi a nall a màrach a chum as gu ’m faic mi e, agus gu ’n innis mi dha an naigheachd ùr so a fhuair mi gu bheil ar n-uachdaran òg air gealltain, a reir gnàtha nan daoine ainmeil sin gu léir o’n d’ thainig e, do thaobh an seann luchd muinntir, gu’n tabhair e dhomh, a nasgaidh am fad as beò mi, tigh freagarrach a chum còmhuidh a ghabhail ann agus deich acraichean fearainn.” “Is ann leam, ma seadh, a’s éibhinn sin a chluinntin, agus gu ma fad a mheallas tu do thigh is t’ fhearann.”

These sentences are quite simple, and there is a way in which they may be very easily parsed and construed. For example, it is easy to say that am is an interrogative particle, that bheil is the 3rd pers. sing. pres. tense, interrogative mood, of the verb bi (be), agreeing with its nom. fear-an-tighe, a compound masc. noun of which the former term, fear, governs the latter, tighe, in the genitive, that a stigh, an diu, a steach, a mach, a muigh, a nis, an so, an ùine ghoirid (shortly), an tràth-s', a làthair, a nall, a nasgaidh, &c., are adverbs, that cha and cha 'n are negative adverbs, that mu is a simple preposition governing uirean, that seachd is a numeral adjective agreeing with uirean, a fem. plural noun governed by mu in the dative, although uirean is an accusative, the case which mu really governs, that gu, gu'm, a chum a's gu'n, are conjunctions, and that am màrach and seadh are adverbs. In this way, which, I suspect, is the common way of parsing and construing Gaelic, the grammatical analysis of Gaelic sentences becomes a very easy matter. You have only to call one phrase an adverb and another phrase a conjunction, to set one form (màrach, for example) down as a simple noun, and another (bheil or ma, for example) as a simple verb, in order to get successfully over all difficulties of grammar and idiom.

A mode of study, however, which ignores or evades all the most essential and interesting questions relating to the forms and idioms of a language, can have no value as a mental discipline, nor will it satisfy any earnest student who wishes to know what the language, which he has made his special study, really is, and through what successive stages of growth and decay it has become what he finds it, in the mouths of the people or in its most trustworthy documents. Instead, therefore, of calling such phrases, for example, as an diu, am màrach, a muigh, a mach, a stigh, a steach, an sin, an so, a làthair, am fuil, adverbs; or such phrases as gu'n, a chum as gu'n, conjunctions, and instead of calling bheil a simple verb (perhaps an aspirated form of a verb beil, which my friend, the editor of the last edition of Macintosh's Gaelic Proverbs, was not the first to introduce into Gaelic), or màrach, a simple noun, or seadh (it is) an adverb, we must subject every separate phrase to strict analysis, and make every word tell its history, and inform us how it has come to assume the form in which we find it. Unfortunately, however, our written language contains a great many words which, if closely interrogated in regard to their present forms, would have to disclose the curious fact that they have been forced into the unnatural forms in which we now meet with them, by authors and editors of Gaelic books—notably, of the Gaelic Scriptures—who had mistaken them for entirely different parts of speech.

Now, a strictly verbatim analysis of the above sentences would probably be regarded as an interesting exercise by those who intend to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with Gaelic; but I have no intention of occupying your time this evening with examples of grammatical analysis. What I propose to do is of more importance, for I wish to call your attention to some phonetic laws, which satisfactorily explain many apparent—I say apparent, not real—anomalies in construction, with which one meets in examining the most ordinary expressions in the language. In fact, what I propose to do is to bring under your notice a chapter of historical Gaelic grammar, a knowledge of which is absolutely necessary in order to rightly understand the living language of our Highlands and Islands.

When I first decided to prepare this lecture, I felt somewhat at a loss for a proper title for it. At first, I thought of calling it a “Lecture upon the Eclipsis of Consonants in Gaelic and its influence upon our Scottish Dialect,” a title which, had it been adopted, would probably startle those of you who may have read Mr Skene’s “Note on the difference between Irish and Scotch Gaelic,” published at the end of the “Dean of Lismore’s Book,” in which he states that “in pure Scotch Gaelic, Eclipsis is unknown, except in the case of S,” a letter which, properly speaking, does not admit of eclipsis at all. The eclipsis of consonants, however, is only one result of the operation of more general phonetic laws, the laws applicable to a primitive nasal termination; and, therefore, I concluded that it would be more satisfactory to call your attention to the more general laws and their operation, than to restrict my lecture to the consideration of their influence upon the few consonants which admit of the phonetic change, known in Irish grammar as Eclipsis. The subject, therefore, of my lecture this evening is, “The Laws applicable to a primitive nasal termination, and their influence upon both Irish and Scottish Gaelic.”

You are probably already acquainted with the phonetic law according to which n disappears in the middle of a word before s, f, and the tenues c, p, t. The following are familiar examples of the application of this law:—

N dropped before s: Exs., m̀dos (month) = O.G. m̀s compared with Lat. mensis (month); m̀ias (a dish) = Lat. mensa (a table, especially to eat on); c̀is (tribute) = Lat. census.

N dropped before f: Exs., ifr̀inn (hell), older if̀rn = Lat. infernum; cubhus (conscience) = cubus = confus = con-vid-tu; coibhse (confession) = Lat. confessio; coibhneas (relationship), coibnes (con-ven-estu).

N dropped before c: Exs., c̀ig = cóic (cf. Lat. quinque); leig (permit), O.G., leicim (I permit); cf. Lat. linquo; leac (slab) = O.G. lec = Lat. planca.¹

¹ This derivation would give leug not leac, which comes from an early Celtic lekka. This Stokes refers to a proto-Celtic plk-ni, allied in root to Lat. planca, Gr. plax. Yet the root may be that of Lat. lapis; a Celtic lepka or lechka; cf. seachd seven.—ED.

Primitive p has not been preserved in the Celtic languages, and no example of a loan-word with n before p occurs to me.

N dropped before t: Exs., ceud (hundred) = O.G. cét (cf. Lat. centum); deud (tooth); O.G. dēt (cf. Lat. dens, dentis); carbad (chariot) = O.G. carpat = Lat. carpentum.

Many other examples might be added, were it necessary, to show that, as a general rule, n is dropped in the middle of a word in Gaelic before s, f, and the tenues. Cf. Z. 42.

The explanation of this rule is to be found in the physical tendency to reduce the effort of articulation, which operates so powerfully in modifying all languages, and the effect of which we see in such recently borrowed words as sacramaid, from sacrament, argmaid from argument, and Parlamaid from Parliament, in which not only the nasal has been dropped, but also the medial or weaker sound d has been substituted for the stronger sound t.

We may also notice, in passing, that when n is dropped, the following consonant remains unaspirated, and that single s is preserved.¹

The tendency to assimilate n to an immediately adjoining liquid, as in collection for colection, correction for conrection, and commutation for conmutation, has its origin in the same striving after ease in articulation. Gaelic furnishes many examples of this assimilation, such as colla (gen. of colainn, flesh), for colna; uille (gen. of uileann, elbow), for uilne; guille (gen. of gualann, shoulder), for guilne; muillear (miller) for muilnear, muilneoir.

Before the medials b, d, g, and also before the vowels, n is preserved intact in Gaelic, except that before the labial b it often becomes m.

Having made these remarks in regard to the liquid n, I must call your attention to a peculiarity of the Celtic languages, viz., that the words in a sentence mutually influence each other, so that we find in certain circumstances the initial letter of a word modified by the termination of the immediately preceding word, and vice versa. Now these modifications or changes are not made arbitrarily, but in accordance with the regular phonetic laws of the language. For example, it is a regular law in Gaelic that a vowel-flanked consonant is aspirated; but this law applies with equal force to the initial consonant of a word, if the immediately preceding word terminated originally with a vowel. Hence the prepositions air (for, &c.; O.G. ar = Gaul. ar), and gun (without = cene*) are followed by aspiration, although they now terminate with consonants; and the pret. indie. act. (bhàil) is always aspirated, because ro or do is understood before it.

Irish mi has lost s in the nominative.

In the same way the rules stated above as applicable to n in the middle of a word apply to it likewise as an original termination. In the latter case those rules may be briefly expressed as follows:—

1. When a word which originally terminated with n is followed by a word beginning with s, f, or a tenuis (c, p, or t), the nasal is dropped; or, more briefly, n-auslaut is dropped before s, f, and the tenuis.

2. When a word which originally terminated with n is followed by a word beginning with a liquid (l, m, n, or r), the nasal is assimilated to the liquid, with which it frequently coalesces.

3. When a word which originally terminated with n is followed by a word beginning with a medial (b, d, or g), or with a vowel, the nasal is preserved, but is transported or carried over to the following word, and prefixed to its initial letter. Before b the n becomes m.

These rules are regularly observed in Old and Middle Gaelic.

I shall here give a list of the forms which terminated originally with n, and to which, therefore, the above rules are applicable:—

1. The article in the nom. sing. neuter, and in the acc. sing. and gen. plur. of the three genders.

2. The a-stems in the same cases. Also, in the same cases, other neuter stems, which follow the analogy of the neuter a stems, as teoh (house), leth (half), muir (sea).

3. Generally, the acc. sing. of all masc. and fem. nouns, and the gen. plur. of all nouns.

4. The numeral da in the nom. dual neuter, and in the dat. plur. of the three genders.

5. The poss. pronouns ar, arn (our), far, fiarn (yours), and a, an (their).

6. The prepositions con (with), in (in), iur, iarn (after), and re, ren (before).

7. The numerals secht (seven), ocht (eight), noi (nine), and deich (ten).

8. The relative pronoun a, an (their).

9. The infixed pronouns a, da (him, eum) and s (her, eam; them, eos).

By comparing these forms with their related forms in other languages, we ascertain that they terminated originally with n. For example, when we compare secht with Skr. saptan, Zend haptan, Lat. septem and Goth. sibun; ocht with Skr. ashtan, and Zend astan; noi with Skr. navan, Zend navan, Lat. novem, and Goth. niun; and deich with Skr. daçan, Zend daçan, Lat. decem, Goth. taihun, and Old High. Germ. zehan, and when we find in Old

Gaelic secht mbliadan (seven years) L.U. 100¹, 42; secht ndaim (seven oxen), Ir. Texte, 311; secht ndabcha (seven vats), secht n-aidcæ (seven nights), secht n-éna (seven vessels); ocht nespoic dec (eighteen bishops), ocht mbiastai (eight beasts), imbragtib na nocht mbiast mbruthach (in the throats of the eight fiery beasts), ocht ngemma (eight gems); nói nimdada (nine beds), nói mbai (nine cows), nói mbliadna (nine years), nói gcairptui (nine chariots); deich neich (ten horses), deich mbai (ten cows), we conclude that the n prefixed in these phrases to the nouns belonged originally to the numerals preceding them, and is, in fact, the primitive Indo-European n preserved in the Sanskrit forms saptan, ashtan, navan, and daçan.

I shall now give some examples of the application of the above rules, taken chiefly from the Irish hymns in the Liber Hymnorum and from "Lebor na huidhri," an Irish manuscript of the 12th century. I have written out a large number of examples, but to save time, I shall quote only a few of them.

Ist Rule: final n is dropped when the next word begins with s, f, or a tenuis (c, p, or t):—

1. N dropped before s: L.U. 36¹-19, "isolve ocus isoeraidecht" (in brightness and in beauty). Here n of prep. in = Mod. Gael. an is dropped before s of solse and socraidecht; P.H.¹ "hisochaide" (in company = h-in-sochaide).

2. N dropped before f: L.U. 27²-18, "acht itat ifoilse ocus ifrearcus doib" (but they are in brightness and in presence to them, i.e., they are clearly visible and present to them). Here n in prep. in is dropped before f of foilse and frearcus. P.H. ifrestul namarchangel (in attendance of archangels). Here i of prep. is dropped before f of frestul.

3. N dropped before c: L.U. p. 34¹-7, hicruth (in form) = h-in-cruth; P.H. "Crist icridiu cecbduine" (Christ in the heart of every man). Here icridiu = in cridiu. P.H. icéin (afar) = in céin.

4. N dropped before p: P.H. "hipraiceptaib apstal" (in precepts of apostles), hipraiceptaib = h-in-praiceptaib; iprimdorus (in principal door) = in primdorus; hipardus (in paradise) = h-in-pardus.

5. N dropped before t: P.H. "itairchetlaib" (in predictions of prophets) = in tairchetlaib; "hitemraig" (in Tara) = "h-in-temraig;" "hitalmain" (in ground) = "h-in-talmain."²

² "Hitirib nambeó" (in the lands of the living) = h-in-tirib nam beó L.U. 113²-40. Ir. Texte, 173-5, L.U. 27²-13, istir = "in-sin-tir."

2nd Rule : final n is assimilated unto, and frequently coalesces with, the initial letter of the following word when that word begins with a liquid (l, m, n, r).

1. N assimilated to l: P.H. illius ("in breadth," or in fort) = "in lius;" L.U. 34¹-27 "illo bratha" (in day of judgment) = "in lo bratha;" 29²-11 "illaim Lucifir" (in Lucifer's hand) = "in-aim Lucifir;" 30¹-30, "illáthachai^b círdubaib" (in coal black puddles) = "in-láthachai^b círdubaib;" iliss (in fort) = "in-liss."

2. N assimilated to m: L.U. 30²-2, "immedón immara tened cobrath" (in midst of the sea of fire for ever) = "in-medon in mara tened co brath;" 27²-38, "immaig muintire nime" (in plain of the people of heaven) = "in maig muintire nime;" "immach" (outside) = "in-mach;" "himaig" = "h-in-maig;" "imui^g" = "in-mui^g;" 35¹-8, "iméit dlechtanach ocus iméit mesardaic" (in legitimate size and in moderate size).

3. N coalescing with n: 27² 31, "itír nanaeb" (in land of the saints) = "in-tír-nan-naeb;" Z. 626 i-nem (into heaven) = in-nem; Z. 625 "innim" (in heaven) = "in-nim."

4. N assimilated to r: L.U. 34² 44, "irrogenatar" (in which they were born); "hirruicht Essu" in Esau's form dat. of richt; 31² 5, "irrechtaib en nglegel" (in forms of very white birds) = "in-rechtaib én n-*glé*gel;" Z. 626, "hi róim" (in Rome) = "h-in-róim;" "hirend" (in frost) = "h-in-rend"

3rd Rule : final n is preserved before the medials (b, d, g) and the vowels, but becomes m before b.

1. N is preserved but becomes m before b: L.U. 30² 7, "iarn-bráth" (after judgment) = "iarnbethaid;" Ir. Texte p. 208, co nu mbliadna (to the end of a year) = "co cenn-m bliadna;" Ir. Texte, 606, "imbethu" (in life) = "in bethu."

2. N is preserved before d: L.U. 35¹ 20, "iarn-desmirecht sin chuirp inchomded" (after that example of the body of the Lord) = "iarn-desmirecht sin chuirp in chomded." Ir. Texte, 606, "indegaid" (after) = "in-degaid" = Mod. "an deaghaidh;" "in-dorus bruidni" (in the door of the court) = "in-dorus bruidni." (Bruidni gen. of bruiden).

3. N is preserved before g: Exs. P.H., "hinguimaib fer firean" (in the deeds of righteous men) = "h-in-gnimaib fer firean;" "Crist ingin gach oen rodóm labrathar" (Christ in the mouth of every one who speaks to me) = "Crist in-gin," &c.: Texte, 585, "ingabthib" (in dangers) = "in gabthib."

4. N is preserved before vowels: Exs. P.H. "inurlataid aingel" (in obedience of angels) = "in-urlataid aingel;" "inernaigthib huasaiathrach" (in prayers of patriarchs) = "in-ernaigthib huasalathroch;" inendgai noemingen" (in innocence of holy virgins) = "in-engai noemingen;" "inocus" (near at hand) = "in-ocus;" "inuathed" (alone) = "in-nathad;" Texte, 606, "inirgaluib" (in fights) = "in-irgaluib."

These examples, which might be increased indefinitely, show the effect upon Old and Middle Gaelic of the laws applicable to a primitive nasal termination; and now I shall proceed to show their influence upon Modern Gaelic, both Irish and Scottish. I take Irish first, because it has suffered much less than its sister dialect from the weakening and disintegrating influences which affect all living languages, and, especially, languages which, like our own, are without the powerful counteracting influence of a standard literature (I mean, of course, a standard published literature).

But I must here refer to a weakening process from which both Irish and Scottish Gaelic have alike suffered; I refer to the substitution of the medial, or weaker sounds, for the tenues, or stronger sounds, especially in the middle and end of words. Of this weakening we have examples in cóig for cóic, leig for leic, ceud for cét, deud for dét, and carbal for carpat. It is necessary to keep this letter-change in modern Gaelic in view in considering the effect of an original n-auslaut upon modern Irish.

This effect is the same as in Old and Middle Gaelic, with this exception, that, in accordance with the tendency, just noticed, of the tenues sinking into their respective medials in modern Gaelic, we find that these letters and also f sink into their corresponding medial sounds after words which terminated originally with n. In the case, therefore, of the letters (c, p, t, and f) two changes take place, both of which are sufficiently accounted for by the general law of economy of effort in articulation; (1), the nasal termination is dropped, as in Old and Middle Gaelic; and (2), the tenues and f are weakened into their corresponding medials, viz., c into g, p into b, t into d, and f into v (written bh). This latter change is generally represented in writing by prefixing g to c, b to p, d to t, and bh to f, and is called, in Irish grammar, the eclipsing of these consonants. The c, p, t, and f, although retained in the written forms, are silent in pronunciation, their places being taken by their respective medial sounds. The practical effect, therefore, of the eclipsing of the tenues is to reduce them to their corresponding medials or weaker sounds.

In accordance with these statements, the first rule given above as applicable to an original nasal termination, must, when applied to Modern Irish, be modified as follows:—

1st Rule—N-auslaut is dropped before words beginning with s, f, and the tenues, and f and the tenues are eclipsed by their corresponding medial sounds, viz., f by bh, c by g, p by b, and t by d.

2nd—The second rule is the same for both Old and Modern Irish, viz., N-auslaut is assimilated unto the initial letter of the following word, when that letter is a liquid, the n frequently coalescing with the liquid.

3rd—The third rule is, likewise, the same for Old and Middle Gaelic, viz., N-auslaut is preserved before words beginning with medials or vowels, the nasal being transported to the beginning of the following word, where before b it becomes m.

It is proper to remark here that the sounds of the medials are affected by prefixing the nasal to them, b and d becoming silent, and ny being sounded as in Eng. thing. This is called, in Irish grammar, the eclipsing of these consonants, the eclipsing letter being the preserved original nasal termination of the immediately preceding word.

I come now to notice the application of the rules, to which I have been calling your attention, to our own Scottish Gaelic. And here we find that those rules do not operate with the same regularity as in Irish, in consequence, as I have already noticed, of the more disintegrated state of the Scottish dialect. None of you, gentlemen, I feel satisfied, will think that, in making this statement, I do not fully appreciate the excellencies of my mother tongue, or that I am not fully alive to the importance of preserving it, and of doing all in our power to study and cultivate it. Nevertheless we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the Gaelic which we now possess is only the debris, the sadly mutilated remains of a language once copious in its vocabulary and rich in its inflexions. When we carefully examine our modern Gaelic, we discover two things—1st, that its present mutilated condition is not, except to a limited extent, the result of artificial changes, but of the operation of phonetic laws, which we see still at work, just as we see operating daily under our eyes the forces which have effected, slowly but surely, the great changes which the surface of our earth has undergone during the countless ages of the past; and 2nd, that, as we find in more recent geological formations numerous fossilised relics of an older state of things, likewise, we find mixed up with the modern forms of our language numerous archaic forms, which bear witness to the successive stages of our language's history. (Seadh, for example; also "a chiom"). Now, it is to these forms that the laws to which I have been directing your attention chiefly apply, and they furnish clear and satisfactory explanations of many obscure forms and expressions which are of constant use in modern Gaelic. Of this we can satisfy ourselves by applying those rules to any piece of modern composition, as, for example, to the sentences which I have here written down.

1. Let us take first the rule according to which n-final is dropped before s, t, and the tenues:—

I. N before s: Exs., “a steach” = O.G. “issintech” and “isintech” = “in + sin + tech” = “isa tech” (p.¹ 144-8) = istech (Se. M. 15. Comal Cernach “istech”).

Here n is elided before s of the neut. article, and again before t of tech. Cf. modern phrase “do'n tigh.”

“A stigh” = “isintig” (p. 144-14) = “isitig” (p. 144-10) = “isstig” (p. 144-6) or “istig” (p. 145-6) = “in + sin + tig.”

Here n is dropped before s of the article, and n before t of tig.

“A stír” = “istir” (p. 173-5) = isintir (p. 173-20).

N before f, Ps. xxvii. 1—Gu faicim féin gu glan

Maise Iehobhah mhóir,

Gu fiosraichin 's gu faighin sreul

'Na theampul mar a's coir.

In “gu faic” n is dropped before f.

In “am fad” n is retained, and becomes m.

In “am bheil,” “e'ait a bheil,” “gu bheil,” eclipsis takes place after an or am (interrogative particle), an (relative), and “gu 'n” = con = co-n (ad quod). Cha 'n 'eil = “niconfil” = “nocha n-feil.”

N before c—“Gu cuir” (Cf. 2 Cor. v. 20, “gu cuireadh”);

Gen. xxxviii. 17, “gus an cuir.”

before p—Neh. vi. 13, gu 'm peacaichim.

seachd peiceannan.

Irish, seacht bpiléir.

Scott., seachd puist.

before t—“A staigh,” “a stigh,” “a steach.”

“gus an tig e.” Cf. 1 Tim. iv. 13, “Gus an tig mi.”

Midd. Gael.—P. 283-9, cosa tuced.

II. Rule 2nd, according to which n is assimilated unto, and frequently coalesces with a following liquid.

N before l—

“Uair gu leth” = O.G., “nair co leth” = “con leth.”

“a lathair” = “an lâthair” = “in lathair” = “allathair” (Texte s. v.)

“gu léir” = “co léir” = colléir” (Texte) = con + léir.”

Eph. xx., “a chum gu labhair mi gu dana.”

N before m—

“A mach” = “am + mach” = im + mach” = “imach;”
the prep. an (in) and mach, acc. of magh.

“A muigh” = “am + muigh” = “an + muigh” = “immuigh” = in + muigh, the prep. in and muigh, the dat. of magh.

Ps. cxlii. 7, “chum gu mol mi t’ ainm.”

Ir., iondus go molfuinn hainm. Also “a measg.”

“leth mairt” = “leth m-mairt” = leth-n mairt.”

N before n—

A nis = Ir., anois = an + nois.

A nochd = “an + nochd” = “innocht” = “inocht.”

Ex. ix. 6, “a chum a’s gu’n nochdainn.”

Ex. x. 1, “a chum gu nochdainn.”

N before r—

“go robl” = “go raibl” = “gu’n raibh.”

“an raoir” = “aréir” = “ar-réir” = “in-réir.”

III. Rule 3rd, according to which n is preserved before the medials and vowels.

N preserved before b, but becomes m—

Exs.—“gu ma” = “gu m-badh,” 3rd sing., conditional mood of the subst. verb.

“air bhith” = “ar mbeith” = “iarm-beith.”

a mårach = a m-barach = am bàrach = “in + bàrach.”

Sam bith = isim-bith (p. 205).

gu’m beannaich = con + bennich.

N preserved before d—

Exs.—“an diu” = in diu;” “an dé” = “in dé;” “an deaghaidh” = “in-degaid;” “nan daoine” = na ndaoine.”

“O’n d’ thàinig e.” Cf. 1 Chr. i. 12 “o’n d’ thàinig na Philistich;” Irish, “a dtangadar na Philistinigh;” Gen. x. 14 “o a dtàinig Philistim.” “O’n d’ thàinig e” should be “o’n tàinig e.” Tàinig = O.G. tànic 3rd sing. of pret. tànac = do-anac, (veni) of verb ticim (I come). Luke xxiv. 5 “ar ndul,” “’nar dithis” = “’nar ndithis.”

N preserved before g: Air gealltain = Ir. “ar ngealltain.” Cf. Luke xxiv. 5 “ar ngabhail eagla dhiobhsion.”

N preserved before vowels:

Before a: “a uasgaidh” = “an + asgaidh”

deich acraichean = “deich nacraichean.”

Before e: n-eirachdamhuil.

Before i: gu’n immis mi dha.

Before o: ar n-uachdaran n-óg.

Before u : seachd n-uairean naigheachd n-ùr
 an ùine
 ar n-uachdaran

A nall = an-all. The an the same as in "a nuas," "a níos," &c.

A rís = do rís = do ridisi.

A réir = do réir, réir being the dat. sing. of riar (will).

An tràths' = an tràth-so, the art. an, tràth (time) and s for dem. pronoun.

THE LEGEND OF DEER,

WITH TRANSLATION AND PHILOLOGICAL ANALYSIS.

THE Book of Deer is a MS. of portions of the Gospels in Latin, once belonging to the Abbey of Deer, Aberdeenshire. There are six entries in the MS. in Gaelic of the 11th and 12th centuries : these occur on some blank pages and margins of the book, and form the oldest documents that we possess of Scottish Gaelic. The first piece records the founding of the monastery ; it is legendary, and is hence known as the "Legend of Deer." The other five pieces are nearly all names of persons, and of the places which they granted to the monastery. Dr Cameron published the text and translation in the first volume of the Gael, and left an "analysis" of over a third of the legend (to iarfallán), intending it for publication in the Scot. Celt. Review. The rest of the analysis is completed here.

TRANSLATION.

Columcille and Drostán son of Cosgrach his pupil came from I as God had shown to them unto Abbordoboir and Bede the Pict was mormaer of Buchan before them, and it was he that gave them that town in freedom for ever from mormaer and tosech.

¹ MS. has "robomareb," with deleting points above and below the e, on which also an accent appears.

They came after that to the other town, and it was pleasing to Columcille, because it was full of God's grace, and he asked of the mormaer, to wit Bede, that he should give it to him; and he did not give it; and a son of his took an illness after [or in consequence of] refusing the clerics, and he was nearly dead [lit. he was dead but if he were a little]. After this the mormaer went to entreat the clerics that they should pray for the son that health should come to him, and he gave in offering to them from Cloch in Tiprat to Cloch pette mic Garnait. They made the prayer, and health came to him. After that Columcille gave to Drostán that town and blessed it and left as (his) word, "Whosoever should come against it, let him not be many-yearred [or] victorious." Drostán's tears (deara) came on parting with Columcille. Said Columcille, "Let Dear be its name henceforward."

MODERN GAELIC VERSION.¹

Colum-cille agus Drostan mac Chosgraich, a dhalta,—thàinig iad a h-I mar dh'fhoillsich Dia doibh gu ruige Abar-dobhair; agus (b' e) Bédhe Cruithneach bu mhoirear Bluchain air an ceann; agus is e thiodhlhaic doibh a' chathair sin an saoradh gu bráth o mhoirear agus o thóiseach. Thàinig iad air sàil sin na chathair eile, agus thaitim ri Colum-cille sì, oir bu làn do rath dé (ì), agus dh' iarr air a' mhoirear, eadhon Bédhe, gun tabhradh (e) da ò, agus cha tugadh. Agus ghabh mac dha galar air euradh nan cléireach, agus bu mharbh (e) ach ma beag. Air sin chaidh an moirear dh' atach nan cléireach gum deanadh-siad ùrnuigh leis a' mbac gun tigeadh sláinte dha: agus thug (e) an iobairt doibh o Chloich an Tiobairt gu ruige Pit-mhic-Garnait. Rinn-siad an ùrnuigh agus thainig sláinte dha. Air sin thug Colum-cille do Dhrostan a' chathair sin agus bheannaich (e) ò, agus dh' fhàg an briathar: "Ge b' è thig ris, na ba bhliadhrich, buadhach (e)." Thàinig deòir Dhrostan air sgaradh ri Colum-cille; labhar Colum-cille: "Biodh Déar na ainm (dha) o so a mach."

PHILOLOGICAL AND GRAMMATICAL ANALYSIS.

Columcille = Colum-cille = Columb-cille.

Columb — [from] Lat. Columbus, Columba, dove [whence Gaelic calman, columan, dove; Calum, Malcolm.]

cille (of the cell, church), gen. of cell, [from] Lat. cella.

cruthnac, Pict, [a Celtic Qritanikos, whence Prettania, the Greek name for Britain, which is itself probably a bad Roman rendering of Prettania; root in cruth, form ?]

robomormáer = ro-bo + mór-máer.

ro-bo (was), the pref. ro, already noticed, and bo = bói = bebove, a reduplicated pret. from root bhu. Bo is now bu.

mór-máer, of which mór, már, W. mawr, Corn. maur, from root mag, is connected with Gr. megas, Lat. major for magios, Skr. mahíyāns, &c. [Gaulish mārus proves the root not to be mag; cf. Gr. -mōros, great, O. H. Ger. māri, Norse maeri, famous; perhaps Lat. mā-jor.]

máer, from Lat. major. Máer is now maor. [Mormaer is now in Gaelic moirear (lord).]

araginn = ar-a-geiunn = ar-an-ciunn.

ar, prep., noticed above.

an (their), poss. pron., the nasal of which eclipses c of the following word.

geiunn = ciunn (with g eclipsing) is the dat. sing. of ceun (head), now ceann, W. pen, connected with root kvi, knayati (to swell), Skr. çvi, çrayati (to swell). See Sc. C. R., p. 57. [Rather is it root gen (begin), Lat. re-cens, Gaelic ceud (first).]

essé = es + sé or ess + e.

es or ess is for is (is), Lat. est, Gr. esti, Skr. asti. The s of is is for st.

sé or é (he), 3rd per. pron. masc. The forms are for the masc., é, hé, sé; for the fem., í, lí, sí; and for the neut., éd héd (ed, hed): cognate with Goth. masc. is, fem. si, neut. ita, &c. Cf. Sc. C. R., p. 45. [Fem. si is allied to Got. si, original sjā.]

rothdnaiǵ (gave) = ro-thúdnaiǵ, the pref. ro and túdnaiǵ, pret. of tídnacim (I give) = tíndnacim = do-índ-nac-im the prefixes do (cf. S. C. R., p. 46) and índ (connected by Zeuss and Ebel with Old Gaul. ande-, Ger. and-, and Lat. ante), the pron. suffix im, and the root nac (nasalised form nanc), connected with Skr. root naç (to reach, attain), Lat. nanciscor, &c. Cf. S. C. R., p. 56. The mod. form is tíodhlac.

inǵathraiǵ = in + ǵathraiǵ, the art., and ǵathraiǵ (with c eclipsed after acc. sing. fem. of art.) = cathraiǵ, acc. sing. of cathir (city), a fem. c-stem, cognate with Lat. castrum (Stokes).

sain = sín (that), connected with Skr. sa, sas (he), Old Lat. sum, sam; sic. Cf. Beitr., viii. 345.

insaere = in + saeri, the prep. in, cognate with Lat. in, &c., and saeri, dat. sing. of saere or soere, a fem. ia-stem from adj. saer or soer, Skr. su-vīra (Stokes) [Gaelic so-fhear, "good-man."] Soer is now saor.

gobraíth = go + bráith, for go + bráth, in Old Gael. co + bráth, the prep. co (to, until), cognate with Gr. kata, and bráth (judgment, doom), W. brawd, Old Gaul. bratu, a masc. u-stem connected with breth (judgment), brithem (judge). Stokes, in Ir. Glosses. (p. 70), compares A.S. bradhean (sententiam dicere). [Root brā, brē, ber; Lat. fero, &c.]

omormaer = ó + mormaer.

óthóséc = ó + thóséc.

tóséc = tóisech (princeps), now tóiseach, from root tu, Skr. tu, ta-v-i-mi (valeo). Cf. S. C. R., p. 40. [No; root red, lead, Lit. vedu; to-vessâkos.]

tangutor (came), considered above.

asúithle sen = as-a-athle sen (afterwards).

as-a-athle, the prep. as (from), Lat. ex, Gr. ex, the poss. pron. a, Skr. asya (his, its), and athle = aithle (remnant). Cf. Corm. Gloss., p. 7.

sen (that) = sin, considered above.

eile (other), Old Gael. aile, now eile, connected with Lat. alius, Gr. altos, Goth. alja (beside).

doráten = do-ro-táten, 3rd sing. pret. of do-ro-taitnim = do-ro-do-aith-tennim, the prefixes do and ro (already considered), and aith = ati, cognate with Lat. at, &c., and tennim (I shine, burn), connected with teuc (fire), from root tep, Skr. tap. Cf. S. C. R., p. 59. The mod. form is taitim, der. taitneach, Old Gael. taitnemach.

ricolancille = ri-colancille.

ri (to) = frí = fríth, cognate with Lat. versus, W. gwrth.

sí (she), 3rd pers. pron. fem. Cf. é (he) above, [a Celtic sja.]

iarfallán = iar + fallán, for which Dr Stokes suggests air-ba-fallán (because it was full); air = O. Ir. air, ar (for), O. Ir. ba (was), and fallán (full). Possibly the reading should be "air fallán," as Professor Strachan suggests, fa being a form of ba, common in the Dean of Lismore and early Gaelic poems.

do (of) = O. Ir. do, used after adj. of fulness.

rúth (grace), O. Ir. rath (gratia). Root ra (give). See tharat.

dé (of God), gen. of dia, Celtic deivos, Lat. divus, Eng. divine.

dorodloeg = do-ro-dloeg: do-ro-, the two verbal particles already discussed: dloeg, a past of O. Ir. to-thluchur (I entreat), to-dlaigte (petitum). Dr Stokes gives the Celtic as thukôr, Lithuanian tulkas (interpreter).

ar-in-mormaer = ar-in-mormaer.

ar (on), likely O. Ir. for, after verbs of asking. In Mid. Ir. ar and for are confused.

in (the), acc. of the article. See above.

gondastabrad = Ir. con-dus-tabrad; tabrad is 3rd sing. secondary present of do-berim (I give); das is the infixed pronoun, and means "it." There are no infixed pronouns in Modern Gaelic. Con is a conj. from the prep. co, con, Lat. cum; now in Gaelic written gu'n.

dó (to him), so O. Ir.: the prep. do (to) and pron.-root i, ei, in é (he).

ní (not), the negative particle in O. Ir., now replaced in Gaelic by cha - nocha, nochon, O. Ir. nichon, for ní (not); and con (that). The form nocha is found in the Dean of Lismore; see our Vol. 1., p. 52, line 15.

thárat, the enclitic or post-particle form of dorat below; it means "gave." Dr Stokes analyses it as do-rat, the rat being from Celtic rattô (I give), allied to rath (grace), Skr. rati (give). It has nothing to do with thoir, toir of present Gaelic, which is the crushed enclitic form from do-berim.

rogab = ro-gab, as in O. Ir.; past tense of gabim (I take); same root as Eng. give, Ger. geben, Lith. gabéti (bring).

gatar (disease), so O. Ir., W. galar; cf. Norse galli, flaw, and Eng. cholera.

iaruère = iar n-éire (after refusing), O. Ir. prep. iar n- (after), in modern Gaelic confused with air: éire is M. Ir. éira = er-ra, root ra (give); see rath, above.

na (of the), O. Ir. inna n-, gen. pl. of article.

glerec, by eclipsis for clérech, from Lat. clericus.

robomareb = ro-bo-marb; see ro-bo above; marb as in O. Ir.; the root is the same as in Lat. moriôr, &c.

act (but), O. Ir. acht: for ek-t, the prep. ex (out).

mad, so O. Ir.; literally "if (it) is."

bec, O. Ir. bec(c), W. bach.

ársén (after that), M. Ir. ársín = iar n-sín: see above iar n- and sín.

dochuid (went), O. Ir. dochuaidh, now chuidh: verb cuad, Skr. códate (slip), Eng. shoot.

dattac (to ask), do-attac; M. Ir. attach, inf. of ateoch (I beseech); ad-tek-ó, root tek, Eng. thig.

gondendeis = E. Ir. condéntais (that they should make); dentais is 3rd pl. sec. pres. of dénim (I do); di-gniu, root gen.

ernacde (prayer), E. Ir. ernaighde, now urnaigh.

- les* (with), prep. le and s of article = leth-sin-mac.
gondísad = con-tísad, E. Ir. tísad, 3rd sing. sec. fut. of ticcim (I come). See for root tangator.
slánte (health), O. Ir. sláinte, adj. slán, from slnos, allied to Lat. salvus.
inedbairt (in sacrifice, in offering); prep. in, Lat. in; edbairt, dat. of O. Ir. edbart, now lobairt: the root is ber, Lat. fero, Eng. bear.
úa (from), so O. Ir., now o, bhu: Celtic ava, Lat. au- in aufero.
cloic (stone), dat. of cloch (stone): Celtic kluka, root kal (hard), Goth. hullus (stone, rock).
intíprat (of the well), in-típrat; E. Ir. típrat, gen. of típra (well); to-aith-brevant-, root brevant-, further bervô (seethe), Lat. ferreo, Eng. burn (brook), fervid, &c.
goníce (as far as), literally "until it reaches;" Early Ir. connice; root form iccim (I come), from enk: see tangator. It governs cloich in accusative.
pette, gen. of pet (a piece of land); a Pictish word, from a Celtic word qezdo-s, whence W. peth (part), Eng. piece, &c.
doronsat (they made), Early Ir. doronsat, 3rd pl. past tense of do-gniu (I do); root gen.
innernacde: here inn is the acc. fem. of the article = sendin.
tuníc, see tangator.
rosbenact (blessed it), ro-s-benact: the s is the infixed pronoun of the 3rd person, from the root so, whence Eng. she, &c.; benact, past tense, O. Ir. bendachaim (I bless), from Lat. benedico.
imbrether (the word), acc. of O. Ir. briathar. See gobraith for root. gebe, that is to say cé-bé (whoever [it] should be); cé O. Ir. cia, Lat. quis: bé, "fuerit?" root bu, Eng. be, &c.
ris (against it), rith-s: prep. ri, frith, Lat. versus, Eng. wards, and the demonstrative so.
nabad (let [him] not be), na-bad; na - ni (not); bad is 3rd sing. imperative (enclitic) of the verb "to be;" see gebe, robo.
blience (many-yearred), for bliadhnoch, from bliadain (year); root ghleidh, Eng. glide.
buadave (victorious), O. Ir. buadach, from búaid (victory), stem bouli, Eng. booty, &c.
déara (tears), nom. pl. of O. Ir. dér, Eng. tear, Lat. lucrima, for dacríma.
arscarthain = ar-scarthain (on parting); so Early Irish; inf. of scaraim (I sever); root sker (separate), Ger. scheren (shear), Eng. shear.

fri (with), see ris above.

rolaboir (spoke), ro-laboir, past of O. Ir. labraim (I speak), W.

lafaír (vocal), Greek labros (rushing), labreuomai (talk rashly).

be, for bed, esto, O. Ir. bíd, independent imperative of the verb "to be," that is, O. Ir. bíú (I am) : root bhu.

ánim, for a-anim (its name) : the a is explained above : anim is in O. Ir. anim, Greek onoma, Eng. name.

áhuun (from now), o-huun, prep. o and huun or O. Ir. suad : now only in huun, which is further degraded into nall : pron. root so.

imove = im-mach, now a mach, literally "in campum;" the mach is accusative of magh (plain), O. Ir. may : root may (great), Lat. magus, &c.

GAELIC IRREGULAR VERBS.¹

OUTSIDE the substantive verb bh and its various root forms, which are discussed at the end of this article, there are usually reckoned to be ten irregular verbs in Gaelic. These are faic, beir, abair, tabhair, thig, ruig, rach, dean, faigh, cluinn. The reason of the irregularity is, for the most part, that the root undergoes changes if it is placed after conjunctions or verbal particles; in fact, there is a shifting of the accent, which, if it falls on the root, preserves the root; if on the particle or prefix, emphasises it at the expense of the root. This is best seen in the verb faic.

1. FAIC (see).—The root is cí, from a Celtic cesiô, root kes, Sanskrit caksh (see), for ca-kas. The O. Ir. present third was adchí, that is, ad (to) and cesit; the accent was on the root cí, that is, on the second syllable, where it rested on all parts of the verb save the imperative and the infinitive. In Modern Gaelic, while the accent remained on cí, the ad unaccented was confused with do and its weak form a, and dropped; mainly because now practically all Gaelic words are accented on the first syllable. Hence the chí was separated from the a or adh. The O. Ir. present is now the Gaelic future, for that tense in the modern tongue is throughout done by the old present. There is no present in Gaelic, save by periphrasis with the verb substantive. The imperative is faic; the imperative accent was originally on the first syllable; the f is an excrescence caused by analogy—a prothetic f; hence the form is aic for ád-cesi, with accent on ad. Consequently the de become c or cc (in O. Ir.), and the isi appears only as the i before c. Thus we have aic. The past tense is chunnaic (independent) and faca (post-particle form); the first is for the O. Ir. con-aca, vidi, the acc of ad-c, as explained above, and the prefix con; and faca is the same, for the particle, interrogative or other, brings the accent on to the ad again. The infinitive faicsinn is in O. Ir. aicsin, nom. case, gen. aicsiu, for an old ád-(e)stin-os; which has a stem of the same character as Latin nouns in -tiô, -tionis.

2. BEIR (bear, &c.)—The root is the same as in Lat. fero, Gr. phero, Eng. bear, &c. It is also the root underlying the two verbs abair and tabhair. The imperative is beir, O. Ir. beir, bir, from Celtic bere. The independent future is beiridh = O. Ir. present berid (3rd sing.), Celtic bereti; the dependent or post-particle form of the future is bheir, for beret. There is an independent form bheir, which appears in Old Irish as do-beir, a 3rd sing. (Celtic do-beret), from a first sing. dobiur = do-berô. The aspiration of bheir is caused by the lost do or a. Bheir means “will give,” whereas beiridh means “will catch, will produce.” See tabhair further on. The infinitive in this last sense is beirsinn, a form analagous to fuicsinn; for “catching” it may be breith, Celtic brti-s. The past tense is from a different root; it is rug, O. Ir. rucc, that is, ro (before), which is a verbal particle like do, and ucc. This may be analysed after Zimmer into ul-gos-a, a perfect stem from the root ges, Lat. gero (carry); the prefix ul (out) is allied to the Eng. out. Earlier writers referred ucc to the root enk, which we have in thig, q.v.

3. AB AIR (say).—The imperative abair is for ád-bere, the accent being on ad, and the db colliding into bb or b. The independent future their is really a post-particle present; the O. Ir. is adbeir, dicit, with the accent on the root ber. The Gaelic makes the ad or at an unemphatic a which disappears, but the aspiration of their shows its former presence. The dependent future is abair, as in cha ’n abair; Celtic ád-beret. The past thabhairt, dubhairt, is a t preterite; Celtic to-bereto, for to-bereto, a middle aorist form probably.¹ The root is still ber, but the inf. rúdh passes into another root entirely. There is an O. Ir. present rádiu (I say), an Aryan root rúdh, whence Gothic rōđjan (speak). In many districts can, allied to Lat. cano, is usurping the place of abair throughout.

4. TABHAIR, THOIR (give).—The imperative is tabhair, now condensed into thoir, and with t aspirated.² In Early Irish the imper. is tabair; the present, first sing., is do-biur (from to-berô), 3rd sing. dobeir, which appears in Gaelic as bheir, the future tense, the do being lost in the course of time. That is the independent future; the future after particles is toir or tabhair (Celtic to-beret). The infinitive is also from the root ber; it is tabhairt or toirt, O. Ir. tabairt, a Celtic to-brti-s. The past tense is thug, O. Ir. tuc, that is, to-ucc, see under beir.

5. THIG (come).—The imperative is thig, an aspirated form of O. Ir. ticc; it stands for to-icc. The root of icc is enk, which in a longer form appears in the past tense thàinig, O. Ir. táinic, the Skr. ānança (has reached), Gr. ēnenke (brought). The future tense is thig in the independent form, and tig or thig after particles; it agrees with the O. Ir. present tí(c), venit. The infinitive is from a different root; the form is tighinn, the root being tig, a shorter form of teig, the root in the Greek steichô (I go), Ger. steigen (I descend), Eng. stair, stirrup, &c. From the same root comes the secondary infinitive teacht, O. Ir. techt, Celtic tíktu.

¹ In any case, whether active or middle, the t seems to arise from the 3rd person affix. In M. Ir. we meet with adubairt, O. Ir. asrubart.

² The aspirations of thoir, thig, thainig, théid are on the analogy of bheir, their, gheibh, presents, or the pasts after do.

6. RUIG (arrive, reach).—The imperative ruig, the future ruigídh, with its post-particle form of ruig, are the same as the O. Ir. ruicim (I arrive); this is for ro-iccim, and the root icc is discussed under thig. The past ràinig is the O. Ir. ránice, which is for ro-ánaic, and the ánicc has also been discussed under thig. The inf. is ruigsinn, a form built on the analogy of foicsinn; the O. Ir. is richttu, gen. richtain. Another infinitive often appears in the forms ruigheachd, ruighinn. This is from the root rey, considered under rach.

7. RACH (go).—The imperative of “go” is rach. The root is rey (stretch, extend), Lat. por-rigo, Gr. oregô, Eng. right. In O. Ir. we have dorey, veniam, and in Modern Irish this root forms the future and conditional of the verb “go.” But in Gaelic the future of rach is théid, an aspirated form of the O. Ir. present téit (goes). This is for to-éit, the root of the latter being pent, a nasalised form of the root pet, Lat. peto, Eng. jud. The post-particle future is téid. The past tense, independent, is chaidh, O. Ir. docháuid, where do (for de, off), as usual, is dropped in Gaelic. The dependent form is deach, the O. Ir. dechaid, which is for di-chuaid, “off-went.” The root cuul, which underlies both, is allied to Skr. códate (urge, push on), Eng. shoot, scud. The inf. is, again, from a different root; it is dol, O. Ir. dul, the inf. of the O. Ir. verb doluid, ivit, that is, do-luid, the root and stem of the latter being the same as in Eng. fleet, from plu (go, sail). The secondary imperative théirig is from the root icc of thig, and stands for to-air-ic.

8. D'EAN (do).—The imperative déan appears in O. Ir. as dénaid (do ye); the O. Ir. present is do-gnúu (I do), 3rd sing. dognú, facit; this in Gaelic becomes the future nè, the do being lost as well as the g, which early became aspirated. The do is the prep. de (of) confused with the prep. do or to (to). The root is gnē, a side-form of gnā or gen (to know), Eng. can, ken, Latin (g)nosco, &c. The future is, independently, nè, as already said; dependent, it is déan, O. Ir. déni; this is the Celtic form dí-gnūt, with accent on the dí, as in the imperative. The past is rínn, O. Ir. dorigní, fecit; that is, dí-ro-gnūs, the two verbal prefixes and the root gní. The infinitive is déanamh, O. Ir. dénam, still from the root gen, gnā, gnē.

9. FAIGH (get).—The imper. faigh, pass. faighear, Early Irish faigabar (let there be found), corresponds to the O. Ir. present fo-gabim (I get). The 3rd sing. Early Irish is fogeib, Mod. Irish dogheibh, which, with the loss of the prefix, is the Gaelic future gheibh; the dependent form is faigh, the accent being no longer on the root gab. This root gab is found in the verb gabh (take), and is allied to Eng. give, German geben, Lithuanian gabenti (bring). The past tense is fhuair, the passive of which last is frith, inventus est. This points to the root ver or er, whence, possibly, the Greek euriskó, euron. The infinitive faighinn, for the Irish faighnil, is irregular, for all verbs from the root gab have their infinitives, otherwise, in ail. The second inf., fuotainn, is allied to O. Ir. étain (I find), root pent, Eng. find.

10. CLUINN (hear).—The imperative cluinn corresponds to the O. Ir. imperative cluiniid (hear ye), Celtic clunete. The future cluinnidh is the Irish present cluiniid (hears); the dependent form is cluinn. The inf. is cluintinn, which is peculiar to Scotch Gaelic, the Irish being clós or cloistin. The past tense is chuala, the same as in O. Ir., which points to a Celtic cu-clon-a, andivi, a reduplicated perfect from the root clu, clu, Greek kluó, Eng. loud, &c.; whence also cluinn above.

THE SUBSTANTIVE VERB.—There are at least four roots utilised for the verb substantive in Gaelic: there are, first, the two roots es and bhu which we meet with in Eng. (is, be), Lat. (est, fu), and Greek (esti, pe-plu ka). These in Gaelic are is, unchangeable, and the various forms of bhu, imperative bà, bu and bha (was), &c. Two roots peculiar to Gaelic appear in tha and bheil; the former root is stá (stand: Aryan st initial appears as t in Gaelic). The root of bheil is vel, Lat. volo, Eng. will. Not only do we have independent and dependent forms from these roots, but there is a sharp distinction drawn between an (emphatic) assertion and a pure statement of existence: there is, therefore, an “assertive” form of the verb as well as an “existential” form. In the present tense is asserts, and tha states existence or condition: Is mi a tha ann—It is I that is there; but again—Tha mi ann, I am there. Each of these have dependent forms: Cha mhi—It is not I, where the particle does the duty of verb, but in Gur mi, Irish gur ab mi, the r represents the lost rob or ro-bu (is, was). The dependent form of Tha mi is Cha ’n ’eil mi (I am not); root vel. Past tense—Assertive, independent: bu, as in Bu mhór e; Great was he; this is in Old Irish ba, bo, and bu, the latter two being used after particles, and, as in Gaelic, aspirating the consonant of the noun or adjective following. Dr Stokes makes bu or bo an aorist, like Skr. abhut, Greek ephu, the final t being early lost; whereas he refers ba to a Celtic ebat or bat, Greek ebē (went), root bā (go).

The past tense, Assertive—dependent, is the same as the independent tense: Gum bu mhór—That it was great. The Existential Past, independent, is bha (was), Old Irish bói, báí, bui, from a Celtic perfect bubove, root bhu (be); its dependent form is robh for ro-ba, O. Ir. robe. The future independent bithidh or bidh is the O. Ir. present bíid or bíth, standing for a pre-Celtic bhv-ije-ti, b̄ietí, from the root bhu, Lat. fiō, from Aryan bhv-ijō, Eng. be. The dependent future is simple bí, O. Ir. bíi, bí. There is no change for assertive or existential statements. The infinitive bhí, Irish beith, is confused with bith (existence), from the root gei, gi, Lat. vita, Gaelic beo, Gr. bios.

GLOSSARY OF UNPUBLISHED ETYMOLOGIES

THE etymologies which Dr Cameron published in the Gael and in the Scottish Celtic Review are easily accessible to the public, and are not here reproduced; but an index to them all follows this Glossary. Here we give all the unpublished or fugitive derivations that Dr Cameron has left. These are of two kinds; first, the etymologies in the MS. of the uncompleted dictionary, which are contemporary with those given in the Gael, and date about the years 1872 to 1876; second, the etymologies found in papers contemporary with the work of the Scottish Celtic Review (1880-86). The latter etymologies contain his ripest work; the former are often tentative, and many of them, as in the Gael, are either obsolete or erroneous. In this case, their source and error are both indicated in our Glossary: the abbreviation D. indicates that the source of the doubtful or corrected etymology has been the Dictionary and Dr Cameron's earlier papers. The abbreviations made use of in this Glossary mostly explain themselves. In the compound abbreviations, O., E., and M. mean Old, Early, and Middle, as O. Ir. stands for Old Irish. O.H.G. means Old High German; W. is for Welsh, Ag. S. is for Anglo-Saxon, Skr. for Sanskrit, and Lit. for Lithuanian; G. means Gaelic. Dr Cameron uses the sign = for both "allied to" and "borrowed from," which is very confusing. We have indicated the cases where the meaning must be "borrowed from" by a bracketed "from."

a, sign of voc., Lat. o, Greek \bar{o} .

a, his, her, Skr. asya, his, asyās, her [Celtic genitive esjo, esjās, allied to Got. is, his, Ger. er, he.]

aba, abbot, from Lat. abbas, abbatis. Hence abaid.

abhal, apple; see ubhall.

abharsair, the Devil, O. Gael. adbirseoir = [from] Lat. adversarius. Also aibhistear.

abhlan, wafer, ancient oblann, from Lat. oblationem.

achd, decree = [from] Lat. actus. Hence also its meaning of "condition, state."

adhalthras, adultery, O. G. adaltras, from Lat. adulterium, with G. suffix as.

- agair, agradh, pleading, O. Ir. acre; ad and gar, speak, allied to Greek gērus, Lat. garrulus, &c.
- ai, controversy, Lat. aiō, say, adogium, adage.

- treabhair, houses, from treabh, plough, dwell, O. Ir. treb, habitation, Lat. tribus, Eng. thorpe.
- treubh, a tribe = [from] Lat. tribus.
- triath, chief; evidently connected with Gr. Triton, a sea-god, Skr. Trita [D. Ir. triath, sea, is allied to the Gr.: Stokes refers triath to the root of tritonus, 6th ancestor; likely, however, the root is streit, allied to Norse stridhr, strong, Ger. streit, strite.]
- trileanta, trilling, connected with, if not borrowed from, Eng. thrill [D. O. Ir. trírech, trílech, is native; the words seem onomatopoeic. Cf. Eng. trill, from Italian sources.]
- trinnsear, a plate = [from] Eng. trencher.
- trioblaid, trouble = [from] Lat. tribulatio.
- tro, quarrel; connected with Eng. threat.
- troimh, through. W. trw; Eng. through; root tar.
- trom, heavy; trongvo-s*; Norse tróngr, Eng. throng (Rhys). Zimmer compares it to Lat. firmus, Skr. dharma [Stokes gives Celtic trudsmo-s, root trud of trod, above.]
- tuagh, axe, Lat. tignum, beam, "hewed," Skr. taksh, hew, Gr. tektion [No; tuagh is a Celtic touga, from I. E. teugh, tugh Gr. teuho, I fashion, further takos, hammer.]
- tuam, a grave = Lat. tumba, Eng. tomb [D.]
- tuba, tub = [from] Eng. tub.

- tuirse, sadness, tuirseach, sad, tarrach, fearful (tarsaco-s*), Lat. terreo (from ters), Skr. tras, be terrified, etc.
- tuis, frank incense, from Lat. thus, tus.
- tuisleadh, stumble, O. Ir. tuisel = do-fo-pet-talo, root pet, fall, Gr. pipto, Lat. peto [Ascoli analyses it into to-fo-isl, the root isl being that of iosal, low, Lat. in from in-s, Gr eis, eu. Stokes refers it to the root sal, jump.]

- tuit, fall; for do-fo-do-étim, or do-fo-thétim, I fall; root pent, nasalised form of pet in Gr. πίπτο, Lat. peto, Eng. find [This is still the derivation; but the modern languages disprove it by having hard t for d, thuit not thuid. The inf. tuiteam is for to-od-temb-men, root temb, stemb, Eng. stumble, stammer, etc.; cf. W. codymu, to fall.]
- tumadh, dipping, O. Ir. tummad, tungmatu*, Lat. tinguo, moisten. Eng. tinge.

- ughdar, author, from Lat. auctor.
- uidheam, accoutrements, Ir. ughaim, root jug, jeug, Lat. jugum, Gr. zeugon, Eng. yoke.
- uireasbhuidh, want, for air-ex-buidh, “at-out-being;” see easbhuidh. Root of verb “to be.”
- uis, use = [from] Lat. usus.
- ung, anoint = [from] Lat. unguo.
- unnsa, ounce = [from] Lat. uncia [through Eng.]
- ur, fire, Got. ur, Eng. fire.
- ur-, prefix, for preposition air.
- urard, above; for air-ard, “on-high;” see ard.
- urlabhair, utterance; for air and labhair.
- urlaimh, expert; see ullamh.
- uthard, above; see urard.

INDEX TO ETYMOLOGIES

IN THE "GAEL," IN THE "SCOTTISH CELTIC REVIEW," AND IN THIS VOLUME (EXCLUSIVE OF THE GLOSSARY).

THERE are 551 etymological articles in the first three volumes of the Gael (years 1872 to 1874); the reference is to the number of each article. When the Glossary or the Scottish Celtic Review contains etymologies for the words treated in the Gael, no reference is made to the Gael in this Index. The abbreviations are—G. for Gael; R. for Scottish Celtic Review; B. for "borrowed," the borrowing being from the first non-Celtic word in the article; and "above," referring to the previous pages of this volume.

ADDENDA.

THE six pages of the Red Book preserved in the Advocates' Library (in MS. 50) were examined by the Editors after pages 152 and 154 were printed. The Red Book text contains two or three sentences not found in the Black Book. The first of the six pages, marked 11, begins on our page 152, at line 9, with the words "dég dhó," etc. The first addition is at line 25, where, after Gotfruigh, we have :—

Biad fios agad a leigheir go foil mórán do fhreamhuibh ag fás as an chraobh n^o bi sgríobhtha an so, ca misde cuideigin do choradh síos díobh.

Insert after "iñte" in the last line of page 152 the following sentences :—

7 aňaladh aimire sgríobhtha iñte fósd 7 da cuirfinn romhan e do fhéduinn do chur am chuimhne anuair do bhi me san tír sin 7 ata gnath chuimhne muintire na tír da choimhail ar cuimhne do ghnath 7 go háirídh na daoine ata ar sliocht Ghiolla Oghamhain sna tíoradh soin. 7 biadh fhios agad gur bhe tíodal gnathach do bhearta do cheñ na treibhe o raghnall m^o somhuirle súas go colla úais .i. ó colla 7 taoisech Earrghaoidheal.

On page 154, a sentence appears after "fein di" of line 13. With the first two words of line 13, the passage runs thus :—

fein di amach. Do coñuig me an leas 7 daoine do bhi da thaisbenadh do thuillfed a ceithir na cuig do cheduibh fer ar na cur anórdughadh 7 an rang an.

The only correction on the text otherwise necessary is at line 8 from the bottom of p. 152, where our fragmentary leaves read "Cairbre an Doimairgid" for the Black Book's "Cairbre mac Doimairgid."

CORRIGENDA.

- Page 14, 5th line of Carswell's poem—Read "teihids."
- Page 30, 1st line, Modern Version—For "chám," read "chion."
4th line—For "gu 'n tig," read "ged thig."
- Page 80, Modern Version, 5th line from bottom—Read "dheoch."
- Page 95, Modern Version, line 1—Read "maighdeann."
- Page 192, 8th line from bottom of Text—Read "ghléda groidhésgadh."
- Page 198, line 20—Read "guña."
- Page 259, line 2 of prose—Read "close" for "chose."
- Page 310, line 1—Read "The first printed notice." The second paragraph is wrong. The MS. is noticed in the supplement to Dr Skene's Catalogue. This was observed by the Editors only when this page was printed off. The MS.'s number is 14 in the supplement.
- Page 314, line 5 from bottom—Read "chas," not "chhas."
